The One Book Necessary for the Canary Fancier and the Breeder

CANARIES HYBRIDS & BRITISH BIRDS

In Cage and Aviary.

By JOHN ROBSON, Assisted by the Leading Breeders and Fanciers of the Day.

Delivered for First Payment of 1/-

Illustrated by Magnificent Coloured Plates.

Edited by S. H. LEWER, of "The Feathered World," &c.

Standard Types of every known variety in Nature's Colours.

It Tells You How to succeed; how to select your birds, how to feed and treat them; how to breed from them, and—if you go in for valuable specimens—how to dress, trim and wash them for exhibition, and how to care for them while at the shows.

There is an index of some 600 items in which you can turn up in an instant any point relating to your birds on which you need guidance. At the same time the sections are written by such genuine bird lovers and fanciers that they provide interesting reading for those who know something of this subject of cage birds and who open these pages at random and read right on.

It Tells You When

to mate your Canaries, when to breed, when to feed, when to doctor them, and when to let them alone; when to strengthen your stock and when to weed out the poorer birds; when to buy and when to sell.

It is safe to say that this fine book is so well planned, each section begins so admirably at the beginnings of the subjects or processes dealt with that many an interested owner of one or two birds will be led—directly through the possession of this sound authoritative work—into the delightful hobby of Canary-breeding.

There are Sections on

It Tells You Everything

you will ever want to know about the breeding, rearing, and keeping in healthy condition of your songsters. You will never be at a loss if you own and use this one book. If it is a question of mating, pairing, sitting, hatching, rearing, feeding, feeding or breeding for colour, care of plumage, cages, nests, or aviaries, pedigree or line breeding—the answer is certainly here. And this book also gives you magnificent plates carefully coloured according to nature which are not merely ornamental, but are of practical value in showing you exactly what to breed to. For these pictures show the standard types of prize birds to-day. This one compact book covers the whole ground. It teaches you everything there is to learn of every description. The valuable section "On the Breeding of Hybrids from two British Birds" not only tells you what has been done in this interesting field of experimental practice, but it gives a suggestive list of the crosses yet to be secured.

About Canaries, Hybrids and British Birds

It gives the most detailed instructions for the management of Hybrids; and its use will no doubt enable many—who have not hitherto succeeded in producing results for the time and money they have expended on their cage birds—to secure some of the rare and so far unachieved crosses here cited as worthy of experimental attention by the enthusiastic and scientific breeder.

RESULT OF GOOD BIRD SEED

Read the following Testimonial from Mr. A. J. MARLEY, the British Bird Fancier and Exhibitor.

Messrs. W. A. Rudd and Co., 83, Manor Road, Leyton, December 9th, 1911.

Dear Sirs,—I take the opportunity of thanking you for your prompt and businesslike attention to my order, and I am also pleased to inform you of the magnificent results I have obtained by using your seeds for my birds. Hitherto I have been sadly disappointed with my seed merchants, and have not been able to rely upon them.

I consider your firm a great boon to London and provincial fanciers, and you will be glad to know that my winning teams at Newcastle, Manchester, Sheffield, and Swansea, also the L.C.B.A., Horticultural Hall, were moulted and fed entirely on your Seeds and Foods, and I attribute much of my success this season to the exceptional quality you have supplied, for I am a great believer in purity and cleanliness.

Your Goldfinch and Linnet Mixture is a treat; absolutely nothing to equal it for bringing the birds into condition. I may also mention that my winning Waxwing and Blackbirds were fed o your insectivorous Foods mixed to my special requirement.

I enclose postal order in settlement of account, and remain yours truly, A. J. MARLEY.

IF WE DID NOT SUPPLY THE VERY BEST SEEDS AND FOODS IT IS QUITE CERTAIN WE SHOULD NOT HAVE RECEIVED THIS TESTIMONIAL.

We believe in cleanliness. Our store is the smartest and cleanest in London, and we claim that the quality we supply will appeal irresistably to all fanciers. Below we give you a few of our Special Lines, and we would ask you to send us a trial order, and we are confident in saying that you will be more than pleased with the quality we send out.

Free delivery to any part of London and Suburbs on all orders over 5/-. Country orders carriage paid. 6d. bushel, 1/- cwt. extra.

numbers of CAGE BIRDS and see if any other man has ever published anything like the number of testimonials that I have. This should prove to you that no man supplies such good birds as I do. I make no exaggerated claims or false statements, so that people sending to me always know what they are going to receive, and always receive what they expect. When a person sends me 2/6 for a bird he gets one worth 2/6, not one that he could have bought in his own streets for 6d., and this is why I always send on approval and guarantee to instantly return every penny of your money if you are not in every way satisfied. I now have, without doubt, the finest collection of English cock Goldfinches in United Kingdom, every bird guaranteed in pink of health and condition and thoroughly on hard-seed, at 2/- each; three, 5/-; six, 9/-; specially selected large cocks for muling and guaranteed now in free song, 3/- and 4/- each. Few real exhibition specimens, with full complements of show points, 5/- and 7/6 each. Grand lot of genuine white legged cock Goldfinches that really have bred mules, 6/-, 7/6, and 10/- each. Splendid lot of cock brown Linnets, every one perfectly on seed, 9d. each; three, 2/-; six, 3/-; twelve, 5/-. Specially picked cocks for muling and contest singing and now in good song, 1/- and 1/6 each; twelve 7/-. Real exhibition specimens, of right type, colour and markings, 2/6 each. Please note, week before Christmas I sent 83 dozen of cock Linnets into Yorkshire alone, and not one of them trained under the old dead and gone champion; this will prove where the Yorkshire contest winners get their birds from. Cock Bullfinches, 2/- and 3/- each; exhibition specimens, 5/- each. Hen Bullfinches, 1/6 and 2/- each. Few genuine picked aviary-moulted hens, 5/- each. Genuine hand-reared finger tame German hen Bullfinches, ideal birds for hybrid breeding, 5/- each; cock Greenfinches, 6d. each, three 1/-, six 1/6; real exhibition specimens 2/6 each; singing cock Skylarks, warranted steady and now in song, 1/- and 1/6 each; cock Snow Buntings, 1/- each, three 2/-, six 3/6, twelve 6/-; cock Yellowhammers, 1/- each; exhibition specimens, 2/6 each; pairs 1/6. Exhibitors please note, I handle more real English birds than any man alive, and therefore have a better chance of picking out exhibition specimens. Those described by me as exhibition specimens in this advt. are birds capable of winning well when used to show cage, and purchasers may always rely upon getting good specimens at top price, but please don't ask for Palace winners at bottom price, because you won't get them. Following letters will give an idea of quality I send out: "3, Burnett Place, Aberdeen, Dec. 27th; Sir,—Snow Bunting duly came to hand. Many thanks for such a good one. You can be certain of all my orders in future.—Yours, W. Allison." "2, Kingsland, Cummock, Dec. 22nd; Sir,—I received Goldie and Bullie all right, and am highly satisfied with them.—Yours, J. Brodie." "Hawthorn Place, Pity Mee, Co. Durham, Dec. 19th; Sir,—I received bird all right. It is a lot better one than I got from Leeds, and I am highly satisfied. You are the best man for business I ever bought off yet.— Yours, E. Hall." "3, Dore Bank, Little Lever, Bolton, December 17th; Sir,—Received birds Saturday. Thanks for prompt attention. I find them everything as advertised, being fine healthy birds in song.—Yours, A. Stubbs." "Fairfield, Bothwell, Glasgow, Dec. 16th; Sir,—Received birds in fine condition. Goldfinch is a beauty, and should do some winning.—Yours, D. Cullen." "15, Ladysmith Street, West Hartlepool, Dec. 14th: Sir,—Received birds on Tuesday. My father-in-law has been a catcher in the North for nearly 30 years, and says he has never seen the equal of the ten Linnets for size and colour.—Yours, M. Dervine." "Tanshelf Drive, Pontefract, Dec. 13th; Sir,—Received Linnets safe; am highly satisfied with them. Many thanks for prompt dispatch.—Yours, H. Dickinson." "120, Sidney Street, Brightlingsea, Dec. 10th; Sir,—Received bird, and am quite satisfied, and also satisfied that you act up to your advt.—Yours, G. Trubshoe." Do not forget all on approval, and your money refunded in full if every satisfaction not given. See Roller Canary column for further advt.

PRIDE OF PLACE

in the Roller world is rightly taken by the Leipzig Rollers as imported by me. You might be able to get a Roller as good at double the price, but why should you pay more than you need? When you've read the remarkable number of testimonials I have published (of which a few are given below) you will know why I so emphatically say that no Roller on the market at anything like the price can equal a Leipzig Roller. I have an enormous stock of thoroughly acclimatised Leipzig Rollers on hand; all cocks are guaranteed in full song day and gaslight, with long hollow and double rolls, sweet, silvery trills, water-bubble runs, soft, roulades, piccolo trills, bell, harp and gong notes, and jug-jug of Nightingale, etc.; warranted entirely free from any harsh or objectionable notes whatever; price 7s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. each. Special Bandmasters which excel in the deep bass and hollow bell rolls, 10/- and 12/6 each. Hens, guaranteed same strain, 2/3 each, 4/- couple. I also have a magnificent stock of real contest Rollers, fit for immediate contesting, price 15/- and 20/- each. These contest birds are of purest race extant, and song is exceptionally soft and mellow. Roller cabinet cages with loose fronts and folding doors, 2/6 and 3/6 each. To those who like a loud, merry, short songster, I have a splendid lot of Hartz cocks, all in full vigorous song, real ceiling litters, price 5/- each. See following few letters: "Little Longstone, Bakewell, Jan. 2, 1912. Sir,—I have spent Xmas with a friend who has recently purchased one of your Leipzig Rollers, and after hearing it I must have one. I have been a breeder of Rollers for some time, and have a good strain, but nothing like that. I particularly admire the bass rolls. Please send me one on. Yours, J. Barnes."—"2, Enbrook Street, Queen's Park Estate, London; Dec. 27. Sir,—Roller I had from you two years ago is still a good healthy bird and in good song; please send another. Yours, J. Fletcher."—"Moor Place, Hayle, Cornwall, Dec. 27. Sir,—Roller received last week is singing well and gives satisfaction. Yours, T. Jordan."—"5, Davison's Yard, Kirkby-in-Ashfield; Dec. 27. Sir,—The Leipzig Roller you sent is a beauty; he sings well and has many changes and very cheap at price. Yours, R. Hooton."—"5, Greyfriars Place, Edinburgh; Dec. 12. Sir,—I had one of your renowned Rollers over 4 years, and it sang constantly; its notes were long and sweet, with many variations, as you describe. Please send another. Yours, D. Dawson."—"Steilston School House, Holywood by Dumfries; Dec. 18. Sir,—Leipzig Roller you sent has come up to expectations; he is everything you advertise. Please send following. Yours, A. Kennedy."—"Merthyr Tydvil, Dec. 15. Sir,—I have decided to keep Roller you sent. Thanking you for such a beautiful songster, and also for way he was packed. Yours, G. Arnold."—"New North Road, Honiton; Dec. 15. Sir,—Birds arrived in splendid condition. The cock is a beauty, sings incessantly day and night. They are both very strong and healthy, and I am more than pleased with such a beautiful pair of birds. Yours, J. Hussey."—"17, Holmes Street, Bristol; Dec. 15. Sir,—Roller I had from you two years ago is a champion. He sang as soon as unpacked, but glad to say he sings even better now. Yours, B. Brooks."—"70, Radnor Street, Kilbowie, Scotland; Dec. 16. Sir,—Please send Leipzig Roller cock. Thanking you for the two I had last year, which gave entire satisfaction. Many people who have heard them have been delighted with their tours in melody, and are marvels at price paid. Yours, J. McLean."—"48, Normacott Road, Longton; Dec. 5. Sir,—Thanks for prompt dispatch and safe arrival of Leipzig Roller. Thanking you again for such a splendid songster and straightforward dealing with strangers. Yours, A. Tudor." Please note I am the only importer of Weber's Leipzig Rollers, and all genuine cocks are stamped on wing, "Hans Weber, Leipzig." All are safely and warmly packed in special travelling cages and sent on full week's trial entirely at my own risk immediately on receipt of cash, or if same is deposited with Editor; and money instantly refunded in full if entire satisfaction not given. Try a Leipzig Roller against one of any other breed, you will then know why I can always fill a column with letters written specially about them.

Club Reports.

GRANGEMOUTH AND DIST. O.S.

Meeting held Boilermakers' Hall, Jan. 5. Mr. J. Ovenstone, vice-president, in chair. Rules revised. Decided, to have a judging competition to start next meeting, for Norwich yellow and buff. All members are invited to bring birds. Decided, to vote for judges for annual show at next meeting. Our radius has been extended to 15 miles, so I hope to see as many new members as possible before May, as our books are closed then. We give a very good classification, and the best prize money with specials. Full particulars may be had from the sec., 93, Porth Street, Grangemouth.—J. Woodhouse, Sec.

SOUTH COUNTY DUBLIN C.B.A.

Committee meeting held 4th January. In consequence of not being able to procure a suitable hall, we are compelled to defer our intended show until end of year, the date of which we will advertise through CAGE BIRDS. We regret the postponement very much, as we believe a great many fanciers throughout Ireland were anxiously looking forward to this show. However, in order that no obstacle may come in our way regarding the hall, we are making an application for same immediately, and I am very pleased to state that the committee are going into the work with a whole heart, and will leave no stone unturned to make the show the best in Ireland. Fanciers please watch for our further announcement in CAGE BIRDS.—D. Smyth, Hon. Sec.

BUCKHAVEN AND DIS. C.B.S.

Fourth annual general meeting held January 6, over 20 members being present, which shows there is likely to be keen interest in the society during the ensuing year. Mr. D. Henderson presided. Balance sheet for 1911 read and found satisfactory. Officers elected as follows: Mr. D. Henderson re-elected president; vice-president, Mr. R. Thomson; secretary, Richard Hazzard; treasurer, Mr. A. Duncan; auditors, Messrs. G. Fotheringham and W. Foster. Agreed to hold open show as usual on November 16. Also agreed to hold a show for members, January 27, 1912. There is likely to be keen competition, and a big entry. It was also agreed to enrol members residing in Fife from now to three months previous to open show on payment of a 1s. to sec., 93, Denbeath, Methil.—Richard Hazzard, Sec.

PRESTON O.S.

Annual general meeting held Club Rooms, Tokio Cafe, Jan. 4th. Treasurer submitted balance sheet for 1911, which proved to be very satisfactory, showing a profit of about £2. The November open show proved a great success in comparison with others; it showed a small profit, only a few shillings, but considering the 1910 show lost us over £9, the result was considered very good. A hearty vote of thanks was given Mr. Dent for his good work as chairman during the year. Mr. Dent in his reply moved a vote of thanks to the secretary, which was carried. Election of officers:—Chairman, T. H. Dent; vice-president, A. Burrows; hon. sec. and treasurer, J. P. Leeming; assistant, T. Leeming; committee, Messrs. Marsh, Issott, Barton, Nickson, Metcalf, Waring, Pyke, and Anderton; hon. auditors, Messrs. Anderton and Peak. Cup rules were altered to read:—"The four highest birds to count," and it was resolved that points gained at members' shows count for members' specials at open show in November.—J. P. Leeming, Sec.

READING AND DIS. C.B.S.

New Year's meeting held Palmer Hall, January 3rd. Hon. Sec. read a budget of correspondence. Balance sheet for the year was then presented, showing after all expenses were paid a balance at bank of £16, a result that gave great satisfaction. Before the election of officers the Hon. Sec. intimated that owing to removal he would not be able to give the time he had given to the affairs of the society, and should be glad if another member would take his place, but the members would not hear of this at any price. Following officers elected unanimously: President, the Righ Hon. G. W. Palmer; Vice-Presidents, Messrs. G. H. Acton, L. G. Sutton, C. E. Keeper, S. Pike, Howard Palmer, Alfred Palmer, A. W. Sutton, H. D. Astley; Hon. Treasurer, Mr. G. H. Acton; Auditor, Messrs. J. P. Laurence, and E. J. Smith; on. Secretary, W. H. Pyke, 102, Radstock Road, Reading; Chairman, Mr. J. Brooker; Committee, Messrs. Maisey, Yates, Dearlove, Laurence, Fraser, Albury, Vince, Tremlett, C. Cox, Avis, Hayward, E. J. Smith. Secretary proposed that the Society purchase an amateur cup, but Mr. G. H. Acton, with his usual kindness, intimated that he would present us with one. We shall have now four silver cups, so are well off, thanks to two of our best friends. The novice rule was altered to "winner of our first prize." Decided, to hold next show November 27th, providing judge can be engaged for that date. Members please note secretary's new address. A very interesting judging competition has been arranged for next meeting, and all members are requested to bring a pair of Nor. or Yorks. The best meeting we have had for a long time then terminated.—W. H. Pyke, Hon. Sec.

BRADFORD EAST O.S.

The Fanciers' Service, as announced in CAGE BIRDS, took place on Sunday, January 7th, 1912, at Park Chapel, but owing to the very inclement weather the attendance of fanciers was far below the average. A most eloquent sermon was preached by the Rev. G. Hall Wallis, who seems to be able to concentrate the knowledge he possesses into a very applicable form. Mr. Wallis referred to our hobby as being on a par with the cultivation of flowers. He remarked with very great pleasure indeed on the progress which the society had made during the past few years, and was delighted to hear that its membership was the highest of any society in Bradford and District. He hoped every church and chapel would throw open the rooms which they generally had at their disposal to societies of this nature, and encourage the working men of England to appreciate the benefits to be derived from this delightful hobby. Mr. Wallis said that he should always count the bright hours and the magnificent services we had had together as the brightest in his life's history, and although miles and miles of space should be placed between us, he should ever think of the delight it had given him to be of service to some of the bird fanciers who used that place of worship as the society's headquarters. Two sacred solos were sung by Mr. Nelson Bogg. Mr. G. White (Vice President of the Society) took charge of the service in a masterly manner, and seems to be just the right man in the right place. Mr. H. Hill read the lesson from the 12th Chapter of Romans. Amongst the fanciers present were Mr. F. Hammond, Mr. H. Simonett, and a few others who filed away before I could obtain their names. It was a most enjoyable evening, and must have appealed to all who were privileged to be present.—H. Hill, Secretary.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Meeting held January 6th, Mr. Farrer presiding. Final arrangements for show were made, and the following were appointed stewards: Messrs. Farrer, Swan, J. Riseborough, G. Davidson, R. Newcombe, T. Gray and T. Davison. Several specials for members' classes were announced, and we are expecting to have a good show. Messrs. Martin and Archer (Huddersfield) are sending, amongst others, their famous Greenfinch-Chaffinch hybrid.—J. Jeffrey, Hon. Sec.

GLASGOW (Queen's Park) C.B.S.

Meeting held Dec. 29, Mr. R. Thomson presiding over a good attendance. It was arranged to have a pair show, to be held Jan. 18. Classes were given for Nor., Crests, Bord., Yorks., and muling pairs. Mr. W. Hutchieson was appointed judge. Annual general meeting fixed for Jan. 26, at 7.30 p.m., and as business is of great importance all members should endeavour to attend. Anyone wishing to become a member kindly inform secretary or attend annual general meeting.—R. Heggie, Sec.

ABERDEEN O.S.

Annual general meeting held Trades Hall, Dec. 27, president, Mr. W. Allan, in chair. Prize money paid. Financial statement submitted, which showed a substantial balance on the right side. The retiring office-bearers were re-elected, viz.: President, Mr. W. Allan; vice-president, Mr. J. Hector; secretary and treasurer, Mr. J. Bryson. The following members were appointed to the committee: Messrs. J. Lyon, J. Sandison, D. Saddler, A. Steele, J. Johnston, A. Anderson, W. Ewen, A. Thomson, J. Balfour, W. Allison, F. Garden, W. Rae, A. Park, G. Mackie, L. Will, W. S. Davidson, P. Stewart, J. Robertson, A. Taylor, A. Rae, C. Thompson, W. Lawrie. It was arranged to hold our next annual show on Dec. 13 and 14, in the Music Hall. Several well-known judges were nominated.—J. Bryson, Sec.

WEST BROMWICH C.B.S.

Meeting held Jan. 2, president (Mr. G. Cooper) in chair. Principal business: Ballot for officers for 1912. With a fair muster of members the business was soon carried through. Mr. G. Cooper was again elected president; Mr. S. N. Taylor, chairman; Mr. A. Jones, vice-chairman; Messrs. J. Bassett, S. Welch, J. A. Touks, vice-presidents; Mr. T. Duffield, treasurer; Messrs. F. G. Viles, T. Duffield, auditors; committee, Messrs. Sadler, Collier, Duffield, Beck, Hey, Groves, Capewell, and Viles; sec., Mr. W. G. Andrews. Election of judge for table show, Jan. 13: Mr. F. J. Weaver (Wolverhampton) has accepted. Also decided, to charge the small amount of 2d. for admission to show. We are hoping that local fanciers will support us with their presence, and trust to see a good muster of fanciers and their friends.—W. G. Andrews.

ORMSKIRK C.B.S.

Sixth annual meeting held headquarters (Church House), Jan. 2, vice-chairman presiding over a good attendance. Notwithstanding the increased expenditure incurred during the past year, the treasurer reported a balance of 39s. to the credit of the society. Rules were submitted and passed, with slight alterations. Election of officers result: Chairman, T. Johnson, jun.; vice-chairman, J. W. Johnson; treasurer, W. Moss; secretary, T. H. Toffen; auditor, G. J. Johnson; hon. solictor, W. Kennedy; committee, all the members. Since the meeting one of the members (an enthusiastic British bird fancier) has kindly promised a silver cup for competition at next annual show—would that there were more such fanciers—which should be an inducement for the dozen or more local fanciers who are not members of any society, to come and strengthen the ranks of the Ormskirk C.B.S.—T. H. Tiffen, Hon. Sec.

BANKFOOT AND DIST. C.B.S.

At a management committee meeting held Jan. 4, final arrangements for our whist drive and dance (Jan. 27) were completed. Some splendid prizes have been secured as follows:—Dressing case, 1st prize, gents; 1st prize ladies, double jam dish; 2nd gents, jam dish; 2nd ladies, cruet; 3, gents, trump indicator; 3rd ladies, marmalade jar. Decided that Messrs. Taylor Bros. either take the special allotted to them or otherwise forfeit all claim after Jan. 16. Owing to the action taken by Messrs. Taylor Bros. in ignoring the rules and regulations of the society, a resolution was passed, expelling them from the society. A special of 5s. was, through the kindness of Messrs. W. Ketteringham and J. Lawson, replaced, and therefore the winner will not be disappointed. Fanciers desirous of attending supper and prize distribution, Jan. 16, should send in names at once, so that proper arrangements can be made; hearty invitation given to all. An hour's extension has been obtained, and various artistes secured. A really good supper will be provided at a cost of one shilling each. Supper on tables at 8 p.m., concert to commence at 9 p.m., free of all charge. Arrangements for show, open to a radius of 5 miles, will be completed at next meeting, the annual general; every member urgently requested to attend. There are still a few tickets left for our whist drive.—F. Gelder, Sec.

LONG EATON AND DIS. C.B.S.

At our meeting held Jan. 6th, we decided to have a pair show for members (A.V. Canaries), Feb. 3rd. Mr. J. Turner, one of our members, was unanimously voted to judge. Members desirous of competing are to bring exhibits by six p.m.; fee 6d. per pair, two thirds of which will go to winner, and one third to 2nd; separate classes according to breed. Also decided at our annual meeting to alter radius to five miles of Long Eaton Market Place. Both meetings were well attended, and the report of the year's work and of members' show was received with general satisfaction. We have also made five new members, and the society has every prospect of a successful year.—G. T. Wall, Sec.

LONDON AND COUNTIES A.C.B.

Annual general meeting held Jan. 6, at "The Earl Cathcart," Osnaburgh Street, N.W.; there was a good attendance, over which Mr. A. Barns presided. Balance sheet for half-year presented, showing a balance of £1 1s. 8d., which was accepted and considered very satisfactory. Election of officers: President, Mr. J. Mackley; Committee, Messrs. Bell, F. Harrison, F. Mowl, E. Pretty, A. Ransley, and W. Shakespeare; auditors, Messrs. A. Barns and H. J. Pearce; hon. secretary, Mr. R. J. Pretty (who, after persuasion, agreed to act for another year); Show Sub-Committee, Messrs. Harrison, E. Pretty, W. Salter and W. Shakespeare. Donations for a silver cup handed to treasurer by Messrs. Mowl, E. Pretty, A. Ransley, H. Bell, and W. Salter. It was agreed to purchase same at once. The proposed musical evening was postponed until first week in March, and instead to hold the show of pairs matched for breeding on Jan. 20th. Mr. G. Gardner judge. Schedule for same drawn up and agreed to, several specials being promised and given. Secretary was instructed to get some lectures for the coming season, and a vote of thanks to the Chairman closed the meeting.—R. J. Pretty, Sec.

NEWCASTLE C.B.S.

Meeting held Jan. 4th; chairman, Mr. J. MacKenzie. The members were all exceedingly sorry to receive the resignation of our vice-chairman, Mr. J. Shepherd, who is going to London. It will be a serious loss to the society, and all members joined in expressing their regret at his departure, and wished him health and prosperity in his new sphere. The loss to the North will surely be a gain to the fanciers in the South, especially to novices, as Mr. Shepherd has been known as "the novice's friend." A vote of sympathy was unanimously passed to Mr. and Mrs. R. Tindale on the decease of his father-in-law. Mr. Pettersen gave notice of motion re the minute relating to the restriction of 25 miles radius in appointing judges; the same will be discussed next meeting. Nominations were taken for judges for annual show, and the two getting the highest numbers of votes are to be written to for their terms. Further nominations will be taken at next meeting. Mr. J. Craig (Newcastle) was welcomed as a new member. Secretary intimated that owing to his health and lack of time he would be obliged to hand in his resignation at next meeting. Will members who have books of tickets kindly settle up at once, so that the books may be closed.—J. E. Atkinson, Sec.

CLAPHAM AND DISTRICT C.B.A.

Annual general meeting held headquarters, "Landor Hotel," Landor Road, Jan. 1. Balance sheet was presented for the past year, and showed a very successful year's working, a profit being made on both the members' and annual shows, and although there was a deficit of £9 7s. at the commencement of the year, there is now a balance on the credit side of £13 12s. 2d.; and in addition the society has a large quantity of staging, and some cups to be won again before becoming the property of the present holders. All agreed that the hon. sec., Mr. Alfred L. Priest, had shown much business ability in his management of the affairs and producing the balance. Mr. Priest has also arranged a very interesting programme for the present year, which should go a long way towards increasing the membership. In moving the adoption of the secretary's report and passing of the accounts, the vice-chairman, Mr. Yeoman, said that the secretary was not only the engine of the club, but also the "sparking plug." The officers for the year were duly elected—Messrs. W. H. Vale and H. Yeoman unanimously re-elected to the chair and vice-chair, respectively; Mr. C. T. Maxwell, treasurer; Messrs. Sandy and Cooper, auditors; and Mr. Priest again hon. secretary, all agreeing he was too valuable a gentleman to be dispensed with. Judges for annual show also duly elected, viz.: Messrs. Robson, C. A. House, H. J. Fulljames, and H. Norman, an extra judge being appointed. The programme starts with a members' judging competition for Norwich, on February 12 (instead of the 5th, which clashes with the Palace show, and the L.C.B.A. dinner). Messrs. Sandy and W. H. Vale were requested, and agreed, to send short reports of any items of interest occurring at the monthly meetings to the Fancy Press, so that members who were prevented from attending such meetings might know what was being done.—S. A. Sandy.

LONDON AND P.O.S. ANNUAL DINNER.

Another Great Success.

This annual event was held January 3rd, at the Holborn Restaurant. Mr. G. Crabb presided over a large company of members and friends. The toast "The King and Royal Family" was given, proposed by Mr. Crabb, Mr. Latimer Harrison singing the first verse of the National Anthem and all joining in chorus. Mr. Crabb, in proposing "Success to the L. and P.O.S.," mentioned one of their oldest members who was lying ill, viz., Mr. W. Dobson. He also spoke at some length on the doings of the society during the past year, and said that the society was holding an open show in the autumn, and that all would be pleased to know that 10 new members had joined since the annual general meeting. He also said he was sorry to note the absence of some who were in the habit of never missing this function, including one of our oldest friends, Mr. F. Carl. He spoke of the flourishing state of the L. and P.O.S. finances, and on Mr. Crabb's sitting down, all joined in singing "For he's a jolly good fellow." Mr. J. W. Ramsden replied to this toast, and said there was not much that he could add to what Mr. Crabb had said, but that they were having several new classes and new ideas at the Palace show, which he hoped would be appreciated. He also read a letter from an old friend, Mr. Joe Hills, wishing them all a very happy evening, and wishing to be remembered to all old friends. "The toast of the Visitors": Mr. R. J. Pretty said how pleased he was to see so many visitors amongst us, and especially so many ladies, more than at any other L. and P.O.S. dinner. It gave him great pleasure to couple with this toast the names of Mr. Anderson and Mr. Tyson. Mr. Anderson, in replying, said he thought it was time he gave up coming as a visitor: he had therefore decided to come in future as a member. Mr. Tyson also replied. "The Ladies": Mr. F. S. Matthes said he was delighted to propose the health of the ladies. He always thought their wives were great helps to them where the birds were concerned. The ladies very often took a great share in the work connected with the birds. The response: Mr. D. W. Tatten said he was pleased to reply for the ladies, who were always ready to help their husbands. Mr. Ramsden proposed a vote of thanks to the chairman, and Mr. Robson replied. Mr. Crabb, in thanking them all, said how delighted he was with the musical programme, one of the finest that had ever been provided for them at any L. and P.O.S. dinner. He said the thanks of all were due to their secretary, Mr. C. W. Law, for providing such a company. He thanked the artistes, and the singing of "Old Lang Syne" brought one of the L. and P.O.S. happy evenings to a close. Present: Mr. and Mrs. Ramsden, Mr. and Mrs. Matthes, Mr. and Mrs. Robson, Mr and Mrs. Tatten, Mr and Mrs. Bamber, Mr. and Mrs. Law, Mr. Mrs. and Miss Oldaker, Mr. and Mrs. Kiesel, Mr. and Mrs. Thurling, Mr. and Mrs. Salter, Mdme. [It was with very great regret that I found myself unable to attend this most interesting function, especially after a definite engagement to do so, but being absent in Cornwall, and under a misimpression as to the date of the gathering I returned just one day too late to do so. I heartily congratulate the society on the success of the event.—F. Carl.]

RESULT OF OUR CHRISTMAS COMPETITIONS.

The Coloured Frontispiece.

This competition proved an exceedingly popular one, a very large number of our readers essaying the task of painting the front page. Taken all round, the efforts displayed quite a surprising degree of artistic talent, and the task of selecting the absolute winner proved a difficult one. After mature consideration, the prize was awarded to

MR. A. HUNT,
30, Sylvan Street,

for an exquisite painting which not only depicted the main features, the pair of Blue Tits, the coconut, the Robin, and the foliage, in absolutely correct colours, but showed a very painstaking attention to the minor items in the headpiece to the page, each one of the smaller birds being painted with a care equal to that given to the principal birds.

Very close in merit to the leading painting was the one sent by Mr. F. Clarke, of 5, Melbourne Place, Topcliffe Road, Thirsk. This was done in oils, and in its leading features quite equalled the winning picture. The background was beautifully rendered, and was behind the first picture only in the minor details of the smaller birds in the top panel.

Very close up were the beautiful pictures sent by Isaac Heatherington (Greenhead), S. Wright (Kingston-on-Thames), and Mrs. Jackson (Cheadle), and special mention must be made of those sent by the following, which were but little behind those mentioned above: J. Johnstone (Sneinton), J. W. Goldsmith (Maidenhead), Gladys Traylen (New Malden), J. Wetherill (Wetherby), Miss Hardy (Dover), Kate Aitchison (Edinburgh), Mrs. Edwards (Liverpool), and Miss Palmer (Herne Bay).

A number of efforts lost whatever chance they possessed by the artists missing the condition which stated that the whole page was to be coloured.

THE HIDDEN BIRDS PUZZLE.

Some Ingenious Solutions.

The six pictorial representations of birds' names set as a puzzle to our readers and published in our Christmas issue proved a puzzle indeed to the vast majority of the very large number of those who made attempts at solving them. Of the many hundreds of "solutions" received only ten proved absolutely accurate, though very many failed by only the slightest possible margin.

In accordance with Rule 5, the names of the successful solvers were written on separate slips of paper, and one slip drawn by an independent person. The winning slip was the one bearing the name of

Mr. ERNEST HORTON,
11, Fairland Road,
Stratford, London, E.

to whom a cheque for one guinea will be forwarded in due course.

The correct solutions were:—

1, Chaffinch; 2, Amazon Parrot; 3, Butcher Bird; 4, Unevenly-marked Yorkshire; 5, German Roller; 6, Garden Warbler.

Picture No. 1 offered no difficulty to the majority of solvers, there being very few incorrect solutions sent in. It was noticeable that most of those who failed to get this solution correct failed all round, and sent in six incorrect answers. Among the attempts at No. 1 were Blue-fronted Barbet, Lancashire Coppy, Bullfinch, The Bullie, Hawfinch, Sparrow, Goldfinch, etc.

Picture No. 2: Amazon, "a masculine woman, a virago," proved a teaser to many, and gave rise to some remarkable efforts in cord-twisting. Many sent Seifert Roller with "toe-foot, roller" in brackets. Others Cockatoo (cook hit toe), Cuckoo (Cook-ooh), Raven (raving), Bullie, Sulphury Tyrant, Stormy Petrel, Mocking Bird, Festive Amazon, etc.

Picture No. 3 also produced some ingenious efforts, favourite among which was Cutthroat, which was sent by any number of solvers. Nuthatch appealed to many as the correct solution (probably "hatching" its "nut" off!) Nutcracker also was sent. Ring-neck, Redstart, etc., came among the other efforts received, but the majority of the solvers had the correct solution, Butcher-bird.

An enormous number came a cropper over No. 4, a picture showing a map of Yorkshire set on which was the head of a man who had gone through a bad time, of which he bore evidence in decidedly uneven marks. Many came near to the correct solution, one solver calling it as "irregularly-marked" Yorkshire. This term is not used in bird nomenclature, and could not be accepted for "unevenly-marked," which was the correct solution. Probably the most ingenious of the incorrect solutions to this picture were Sombre Mynah (sombre miner) and Cinnamon (seen a mon). Yorkshire Beauty, Cross Bill, Foul-marked Yorks, variegated Yorks, Crossed Yorkshire, and Sea Gull were among the other solutions sent in.

Picture No. 5 was easy to the vast majority of solvers, but one or two extra comical readers sent in Avadavat (have 'ad a vat!) We wonder what size bricks would have been thrown if we had dared to perpetrate such a blister as this.

Picture No. 6, representing a cat on a garden wall entertaining the neighbourhood with musical notes, proved about the greatest stumbling block. Quite a number of solvers gave Blackbird as the solution, others Owl (? Howl), Nightjar, Border Fancy, Treecreeper, Wagtail, Nightingale, Stonechat, etc.

Altogether, the solutions sent in came very near to the mark, many being wrong only in one instance, many more making only two mistakes, and very few three or more.

OBITUARY.

Mr. J. DOBSON (London).

It is with sincere feelings of regret that we find it our sad duty to announce the death on Jan. 4 of Mr. J. Dobson, one of the oldest and most highly respected fanciers in London, and a gentleman known far and wide wherever those interested in the hobby foregather. Mr. Dobson had suffered internally for a long period, intervals of more or less relief having been obtained by various operations, which he bore with great fortitude. The deceased gentleman was a fancier of the "good old type," upright, honest, and fearless. His characteristic bluntness of speech did not please some, but his thorough straightforwardness and detestation of anything savouring of sharp practice endeared him to everyone with whom he was brought into contact, and made him a great asset in the councils of the various fanciers' societies with which he was from time to time connected. The funeral took place on Jan. 10 at Highgate Cemetery, where there was a large gathering of friends, including many prominent fanciers, and the remains were laid at rest amid every manifestation of regret and sympathy. The floral tributes were splendid, one beautiful wreath coming from the London and Provincial O.S., with which Mr. Dobson had been connected since its foundation. The deceased was, we understand, about sixty-five years of age, and leaves a widow and family, to whom the sympathy of all will be tendered in their great bereavement.

THE LATE MR. J. DOBSON.

By courtesy of Mr. T. Heath, we are able to state that it was in January, 1886, when he announced his intention of trying to form a cage bird society for London, and said that a list would be put up at the forthcoming Crystal Palace Show (of which he was then manager) whereon those willing to join could put their names. Mr. Dobson was one of those who signed this list; and his demise leaves with us now only one other original member, viz., Mr. J. Oldaker, and the founder himself, Mr. Heath. The London and Provincial O.S. was the outcome of Mr. Heath's move, and Mr. Dobson was identified with it through the whole of its career as committeeman, etc. He first exhibited at the Palace in 1887; also in 1890-1-2-3-4-5-6, 1901 and 1905. His birds, however, did not meet with any great success at this fixture, although they scored heavily at other shows, and won a great number of cups, medals, and other diplomas for their owner. He possessed in his day many very first class birds, the outstanding specimen, perhaps, being a variegated Crest, a grand example, which won 1st at the Palace and did a lot of winning. Mr. Dobson's chief loves were Crests and Cinnamons, but he also kept at various times, Norwich, Yorkshires, and a few British birds. At the close of his career he became one of our most respected judges. Mr. Heath paid a glowing tribute to the memory of his old friend, whom he characterised as on eof the very best fanciers it had ever been his lot to meet.

Mr. C. W. Law, the hon. sec. of the L. and P.O.S., writes expressing the regret felt by the members at the loss of Mr. Dobson, and stating that a letter of condolence had been forwarded to the widow and family.

The Sutton-in-Ashfield Eastfield Side C.B.S. have selected July 13 for their first feather show and Nov. 2 for their annual show, writes Mr. R. Nuttall, the sec.

The 1911 balance sheet of the Border City (Carlisle) O.S. shows a credit balance of £1 19s. 8d. We note that an honorarium of £3 for three years' service was granted to the popular sec., Mr. J. C. Bell, who, with his fellow-officers, is to be congratulated on the position of the society.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS.

Royal Tunbridge Wells and Dis. F.A. show held in the Great Hall, January 10th and 11th. This was the most successful show and the largest entry the Association has ever had in the Cage Bird section. Quality was on a par with the excellent entry. Close upon 300 birds were staged. A notable feature of the show was the grand quality of the Crests and Crestbreds, Mr. Broad annexing special for best in show with a truly fine bird, and Mr. Hayward taking members' cup with a topping C.B. The members' classes came up well and quality, too, was excellent. The management of the show reflected the highest credit on the hon. secretary, Mr. H. G. Whibley and his committee. The light was good, even though the early fog at one time threatened to make judging a difficult task. The show was opened by Col. E. G. Slader, J.P. (the Mayor), who was accompanied by the Mayoress. During the opening ceremony an interesting presentation was made of a lovely bouquet of flowers to the Mayoress. Judging was over in good time, awards up and catalogues soon out. The Association has the advantage of a large and influential list of patrons. Mr. Geo. Gardner judged, and his awards were well received.

"Bobbie's" Early Start.

I send this newspaper cutting dated Jan. 6, writes Mr. B. Norris, of Stourbridge, of a Robin's nest being discovered, and I should like to know if anyone has ever found one so early before:—"A Robin's nest, containing six eggs, has been found in a hole surrounded by ivy at Drayton Works, Belbroughton. The eggs give an appearance of hatching out in a few days. The nest is situated in a warm spot."

"Cage Birds" Tenth Birthday.

Happy Returns of the Day to all.

A decade disappeared. Birthdays, if they do nothing else, remind one how the remorseless aeroplane of Time goes steadily gliding on—undeterred by cross currents or down eddies—to his unknown destination. But the busy man has no use for such reflections. Life has to be lived—business to be got through—and birthdays notwithstanding, we are all as old as we feel and no younger. "Cage Birds," whatever the age of its proprietor, seems fortunately to possess the gift of perennial youth.

The number presented to readers to-day to celebrate our tenth anniversary is a sign of continued vitality as gratifying to us as it must be to our patrons. "Cage Birds" fills a big place in the hearts of many thousands of people. It is regularly sought and eagerly read by many who know and love birds for their interest and attraction, as well as by those who make a hobby of bird-breeding, and others who make it their trade or business. Its average weekly sale approximates fifty thousand copies.

It circulates widely on the Continent, in the Colonies, and in the U.S.A. This widespread popularity is due in part to the efforts of a splendidly hardworking staff—both inside and outside the office—and in part to the affection and esteem in which the journal has been always held since its start by everyone of importance in the bird-loving world. It was the first paper to cater solely and thoroughly for the requirements of cage bird keepers, and despite most strenuous and able competition, has more than held its own in every direction. We record this fact in no boastful mood, but with fervent gratitude, and tender our sincere thanks to all concerned. May we express the hope that our efforts to please will be as welcome in the future as in the past.

I have resigned the hon. secretaryship of the Chester and Dis. C.B.S., writes Mr. Jas. Swindley, Mr. E. Richards having been appointed sec. pro tem.

Your reporter omitted to note that I was the owner of the winner of the Bennet Cup and B.F.C.C. novice medal (Border section), writes Mr. Thos. Todd (Edinburgh).

Palace Show.—Exhibitors of Green Canaries please note that Classes 43 and 44 are for hens. Classification should read same as for both Norwich and Border Greens.—Advt.

I found CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL most useful this year in finding addresses of judges, Specialist Club secretaries, etc., writes Mr. J. E. Atkinson, sec. of the Newcastle-upon-Tyne C.B.S., when sending us particulars of his society for our forthcoming ANNUAL.

Kindly thank all exhibitors and visitors at our show for their kind letters of appreciation of the way in which our exhibition was carried out and of the prompt payment of prize-money, writes Mr. W. Forster, sec. of the Peiton Fell and Dis. C.B.S.

I have been elected secretary of the Windhill and Shipley O.S., so that all matters relating to the society should be addressed to me, writes Mr. J. A. Taylor, 36, Aireville Road, Frizinghall, Bradford. The assist. sec. is Mr. P. Gunn, 36, Cemetery Road, Windhill.

There was a printer's error in Bathgate Show advertisement last week, the date being given as Jan. 30; it should be Jan. 20. Fanciers, therefore, have not so much time to enter for this fixture. Entries must reach Mr. A. Nicol, 46, High Street, Bathgate, not later than Wednesday, Jan. 17.

Although we always pay prize-money, writes Mr. J. W. Gambrill, sec. of the Folkestone and Dis. F.S., we have had a deficit for some time, and we are putting forth every effort to wipe same off this year through our £3 limit show on Jan. 31 and Feb. 1 at the Town Hall, Folkestone.

We have been notified of the following corrections to show reports:—Wishaw, 1st in Yorks hens and vhc Yorks cocks, Mr. Liles (not Tiles); Rugby, in the A.O.S. Brit. small class, 1st, vhc, and c, Mr. B. Pain (not Payne); Dalbeattie, 2nd in British Bullfinch class, Mr. J. M. Swan (not McCluskie).

The 1911 balance sheet of the Aberdeen O.S. shows a credit balance of no less than £20 6s. 2d., which is £11 10s. more than the amount brought forward from 1910. This excellent result the members look upon as reflecting every credit on the sec. (Mr. J. Bryson) and his fellow-officials.

Some catchers in this town (Mountmellick, Queen's County, Ireland) recently caught a Green Plover carrying the Aberdeen University marking ring, writes Mr. J. F. Morgan. [We hope the ring was sent on to the University authorities.—Editor.]

Messrs. Martin and Archer have, we hear, entered their celebrated team of Mules and Hybrids at Sunderland Show, including the unique Greenie-Chaffie. The show is held this Friday and Saturday, Jan. 12 and 13, in the Miners' Hall, Roker Avenue, and visitors will have a rare treat provided for them.

Palace Show.—Schedules have been posted. Any exhibitor not having received a copy will oblige by writing for one. Entries close Jan. 20 without extension, but exhibitors would be conferring a great favour if they made their entries before that date.—J. W. Ramsden, 11, Josephine Avenue, Brixton, London, S.W.—Advt.

We shall be glad if, for the purposes of CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL, the secretaries of the following societies will communicate their addresses to us:—Glasshoughton Linnet Singing Club; Whitletts and Dis. C.B.S.; and Bridgewater C.B.S. Also, we shall be glad to know of the present addresses of Messrs. M. Doolan (Ayr) and W. Thornton (Edinburgh).

Allow me to thank my many fancier friends through your valuable paper for their kind letters of sympathy in our recent sad bereavement, writes Mr. F. Tesseyman (Leeds). I could not answer all personally. I'm sorry to say that we have suffered the severe loss from pneumonia, after three days' illness, of our only daughter, at the age of 21. She was my right hand with my birds, and took a great delight in them.

We hear from Mr. S. A. Priddle, sec., Yeovil and Dist. Show, held Jan. 25, entries for which close on the 20th, that a special prize of a year's membership to CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE and a rolled gold badge will be given for the best bird in the Canary classes not gaining a card, and a similar special for the best in the British classes not gaining a card. These two specials are kindly given by Mr. W. H. Grant, hon. sec. for Yeovil to CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE.

The annual dinner and presentation of cup and medals of the Leigh and Dis. C.B.S. will take place in the Headquarters, Railway Hotel, Leigh, on Saturday, Jan. 27. Any fanciers wishing to be amongst us will be cordially welcomed by giving their names to me, writes Mr. R. Charleson (12, Lloyd Street, Leigh) before Jan. 23. The price is 2s. per head. I have been re-elected as secretary for 1912, and beg to thank CAGE BIRDS, for it has been a great help to our society.

Kindly note that I have resigned the hon. treasurership of the Chester C.B.S., writes Mr. H. Stovin.

Our next annual open show, writes Mr. J. N. Jeffery, sec. of the Torbay O.S. (Paignton), has been fixed for Oct. 30.

Bromley and West Kent F.A. Show is, we hear, to be held on Oct. 13, 1912. The Canary Section judge is Mr. H. Norman.

I have reared 26 young in three seasons from my old natural colour Buff Norwich cock 1st Coventry, 2nd Northampton, 1st special and 2nd Bedford, writes Mr. George Notley, of Bedford.

We have 147 members now, paid up; how's that for a start? writes Mr. R. B. Wright, hon. sec. of the Anfield, Everton, and Dis. C.B.S. And we can thank CAGE BIRDS for it: its help to the Fancy is invaluable. We have decided to advertise our next show in CAGE BIRDS on a large scale.

When I opened my copy of CAGE BIRDS of Jan. 6 I was delighted to see a sketch of my young buff Border cock; it is a good likeness, and a credit to the artist. As a constant reader of CAGE BIRDS, I have always found it most interesting and instructive to beginners.—Geo. Skinner (Shawlands, Glasgow).

Mr. J. Fisher Gibbs, sec. of the Milford Haven P.P. and Cage Bird Show (to be held on Jan. 25 in the Masonic Halls), writes: I trust fanciers will lend us their support, and so give us a good start with our first venture. The room in which the cage birds are to be staged is quite free from draughts, and, if cold, will be warmed to a suitable temperature. Eight Canary classes are provided, five for British birds, two for Mules and Hybrids, and two selling.

The Pontypridd F. and F.S., writes Mr. A. A. Gordon McLucas, the sec., do not intend to allow the grass to grow under their feet. After their successful show of Nov. 8 last they intend running an evening show on Jan. 27 (eight miles radius), cage birds, etc. The prize-money is small—4s., 2s., and 1s.—and so is the entry fee, 6d. Also the admission, 3d. This ought to be the means of increasing the membership. Schedules are now ready, and may be had on application. Entries close Jan. 20. Most of the classes are guaranteed.

REMEMBER JANUARY 20TH.

This is one of the most important days of 1912 for all who wish to make a success of their hobby. After this date there will be no further opportunity of adapting the best of all methods for selling birds and increasing business. It is the closing date of advertisements for "Cage Birds Annual" for 1912. Turn to page 33 and see why you must not let this opportunity pass.

I have lost my old champion yellow cock, "Chirsit's Davie," writes Mr. J. Patterson (Chirnside), also the famous even-marked hen, "Chirsit's Perfection." Both were well-known winners; the former had 22 firsts in his time and was the father of a host of winners, including my champion yellow hen. The even-mark hen I bought from Mr. Whitefield (when she stood first under me at Edinburgh) for a customer in England, but he returned her stating she was not "class." But she proved a champion, winning in all sixteen firsts.

The benefit of good bird seed is amply proved by the splendid testimonial Messrs. W. A. Rudd are publishing in their advertisement this week. There is no disputing the fact that Mr. Marley has done exceedingly well, and he claims that good feeding is the main secret. Take a leaf from his book; buy the best, and save disappointment. Messrs. W. A. Rudd and Co. are bird seed specialists, and study the Fancy only, and take every precaution and care in supplying the very best. Their time is devoted solely to the fancier, the man whose hobby is his birds, for they do not put up cheap foods for small traders; consequently they can give more time to the cleaning and packing. Messrs. Rudd's new premises in Bishopsgate are a model of cleanliness and very convenient for visitors when paying a visit to town. They extend a cordial welcome to any bird-keeper who favours them with a call.

"Judge Gazing": A Cage Bird Show Nuisance.

Astonishing Allegations by a Welsh Fancier.

During the course of the show season there are many things that crop up to disappoint any annoy the exhibitor. He may have to stand by and hear his best bird slated by some "clever" individual, even though his bird has won first prize. "A mistake!" "Judge was blind," etc. And, as if that were not enough, some swaggering, loud-talking person, with his ornithological bump abnormally developed, will prod the bird with the dirty end of a walking-stick and explain to a rapidly-gathering crowd that a relative of his has several ever so much better birds, but never cares to show them now.

One of the many troubles in the show-room is "judge-gazing." Few things disturb equilibrium more than this disreputable practice. This is carried on, we are glad to say, only by a few, but with a persistency worthy of a better cause.

The chronic judge-gazer seems to have imbibed to the full that Napoleonic motto, "Resolute determination." His modus operandi is, on the morning of the show, to put in an early appearance—very early—and see that his birds are carefully staged. Some other fancier's birds will next claim his special attention. The cages and cage-dressing will come in for a quizzing.

But the real time of his greatness comes when the judges arrive. It is safe to say that from then until the adjudication of the classes in which his birds are he will not lose sight of the judges. Every action of the stewards is watched, whether they bring out his cages first, second, or last, and how they are placed. His excitement is at its highest pitch now. He will endeavour to catch every remark that the judge may make to the stewards, and, if the fates decree that his birds are out of the tickets, there will not be wanting insinuations and excuses as to the reason of his downfall.

There is no mistake about it. This man makes himself a general nuisance from the show manager to the boy who sells the catalogues. We sincerely hope that, having thrown this phase of the fancier into focus, the true, generous spirit of the Fancy may yet prevail, instead of that carping, quizzing conduct that offends all honest thinking men.—Harry Jenkins in the "Cambria Daily Leader."

"CAGE BIRDS" PICTURE PUZZLE.

Can You Solve It?

ONE GUINEA CASH FOR THE SUCCESSFUL COMPETITOR.

The "jig-saw" picture on our front page this week hides in its jumbled-up pieces two Canaries—a Crest, and a Crest-bred. A cash prize of a guinea is waiting for the reader who cuts out the pieces and pastes them on a sheet of paper or cardboard so as to exactly reproduce the original picture of these Canaries before it was cut and jumbled up. The key to the correct arrangement of the pieces (as given by our artist) is locked in the Editor's desk. In the event of no reader correctly solving this puzzle, the prize will go to the effort which comes nearest the said key-picture; should two or more readers be correct, the prize will go to the one who sends in the most neatly arranged attempt.

In solving this puzzle, every jumbled piece appearing on the frontispiece must be utilised—any picture sent in which is made up of less than the said number, or to which extra pieces have been added, will be disqualified.

All solutions should be sent packed flat, with the full name and address of the competitor clearly written at the foot, and be posted to reach CAGE BIRDS Offices (154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.) not later than first post Thursday, Jan. 25, when the competition closes. The Editor's decision will be final.

Another Railway Blunder.

Glasgow Show report credits us with a 5th prize, write Messrs. Ogden Bros. (Bradford), but we had not a bird there; we had eight birds entered, which should have gone on to Glasgow from Edinburgh Show, but instead they were sent home—another mistake of the railway company. I was at Edinburgh and saw all the birds packed and the labels put on; also I paid the carriage for them. We think it is high time fanciers tackled the railway companies.

A Treat for Poultry-Keepers.

A mammoth issue of THE POULTRY WORLD will appear next week, Jan. 19. It will mark the first number of the enlarged edition of this popular periodical, and although containing numerous additional photographs and articles, with a sensational coloured plate and an art plate, it will be on sale at all newsagents and bookstalls at the popular price of one penny. Readers interested in utility and exhibition poultry should secure their copies by ordering same at once, as the rush for copies is sure to be very great.

A Green Hedge Sparrow.

The spot shown in the photograph (see page 20) is just outside Wolverhampton, writes Mr. A. W. Fulwood. There is a footpath across the fields through which this small stream runs, with trees each side. I was taking my usual Sunday stroll, admiring my feathered friends, when I saw a beautiful and curious-coloured bird making for the bushes. I could not get near enough to satisfy my curiosity as to its identity, so I took a net down to see if I could catch it, and after several attempts succeeded (on Dec. 13). To my surprise I found it was an "all green" Hedge Sparrow!—head, back, breast, and back green, only the wing-butts the ordinary brown. It is a cock, and "calls" as it darts across one of my aviaries. It was at this ideal spot for rare birds that I secured my white-winged Robin and saw a Cinnamon Sparrow.

The Months and the Birds.

January brings the snow,
Silence reigns in bird-land now.

February comes along;
Robin treats us to a song.

March is next with breezes shrill,
Thrushes now commence to trill.

April comes with brighter sun,
Nesting time has now begun.

May arrives; we garlands bring,
Nesting now is in full swing.

June brings roses, lilies white,
Busy birds from morn till night.

Hot July comes on apace,
Youngsters leave their nesting place.

August brings the harvest-home,
Flocks of birds the fields now roam.

Warm September brings the fruit,
Sportsmen now begin to shoot.

Fresh October brings us nigher,
Birds put on their new attire.

Dull November brings the cold,
Trying time for young and old.

Chill December, kindest deeds,
Don't forget the birdies, please!

THE PAINTED FINCH AT HOME.

A Camp in the Bush.

An account of a lovely Australian bird when in its native wilds.

By

W. E. TESCHEMAKER, B.A.

ONCE again we are privileged to contribute to a Birthday Number of CAGE BIRDS, and once again we are permitted to choose a subject. This time we will be more adventurous. We will not be contented with watching the Bearded Tit flitting in and out of a Norfolk reed-bed, or with listening to the throbbing notes of the Nightingale in a Devonshire "coombe"; we will not even be satisfied with following the White Wagtail on its long flight from Upper Egypt to distant Iceland—no, we will take ship and, leaving the dreary English winter behind us, follow the sun in his autumnal migration southward of the Equator, and seek that other summer which he brings to our kinsmen at the Antipodes.

Away, away! The tug casts us off to the strains of "Auld Lang Syne"; Prawle Point and the Lizard fade away in the distance, and our good ship begins to plough the heaving waters of the stormy "Bay"; soon we pass the frowning "Rock," grim guardian of the Tideless Sea, and, as we sail down the West African coast, we call to mind those five staunch keels—the largest only six hundred tons, and the smallest barely one hundred—which three long centuries since were fitted out by a few London merchants and sailed from Torbay one blustering April day, on the very course which our own good ship is laying to-day, to open up a trade with the East Indies, and lay the foundation of our magnificent Indian Empire.

JOYS ON A "BUCK-BOARD."

Southward we lay our course, passing the Cape of Good Hope and majestic Table Mountain, and then Eastward across the great waste of waters—the South Indian Ocean—where no bird is seen and no land is, save a few lonely rocks. After many days the keen eyes of the look-out sight "land-ahead," and at last we are ashore once more, but not quite at the end of our journey. Our sea-trip is over, and we take to a new means of locomotion; we are being driven through timber-country in a "buck-board." We hang on as best we may while our vehicle plunges with amazing leaps over a rough track, called by courtesy a road, swinging and swaying in and out among the tree-trunks, missing some by inches and barking others with our axle-ends, swaying and rocking now under the spreading limbs of a Reichardt pine now beneath the drooping glory of a Bankenia. Anon we pass through plains covered with grass ten feet high till we reach higher and more open country. In the blue sky above our heads the hungry Kites ceaselessly wheel in mazy circles, and yonder round a still pool whose unruffled waters are fretted with the crimson flowers of giant water-lilies are gathered an immense number of wading birds, Egrets and Jabirus and quaint "native-companion" Cranes.

Mr. Reginald Phillipps, an aviculturist of 60 years standing.

At length the sun sets, and a great hush falls on this strange land; we pitch our tent to the accompaniment of the croaking of Bull Frogs and the plaintive notes of the Mopoke. We have arrived. Where are we? — Where but in N.-W. Australia, the land of the "Never-never," and the home of the Painted Finch? And why is this part of Australia called the "Never-never?" Various explanations are possible. Its friends say because those who have once known its charm never, never desert it; its enemies say, because those who have the luck to get away never, never want to return!

To get a clear idea of the home of the Painted Finch we must bear in mind that, speaking generally, from the coast-line all round Australia, the land rises gradually, terminating in a kind of ridge or "divide," which rings round the central, low-lying interior. Most of the rivers run from this "divide" towards the sea, though one or two, oddly enough, run inland and empty themselves into some large lakes which, in the dry season, become mere salt-pans or dried mud-flats. We are now on that part of the watershed of this great "divide" which is drained by the rivers Ord and Fitzroy and not very far from the Kimberley Goldfields. This is by no means the only locality in which this rare and beautiful little Finch is found; the authors of the latest work on Australian birds, Messrs. Lucas and Le Souef, state that it also occurs in "West, Central, and South Australia, occasionally coming over the border into New South Wales." In all these localities, however, its preference is for what the colonists call the "Further-back", in other words, the dry, barren districts of the interior.

"NEVER-NEVER" WEATHER.

In order to understand the life-history and requirements of any species, we must try to ascertain what are the climatic conditions of its homeland. Australia is a land of many and varied climates. In the extreme south, Tasmania, the wet season, or winter, begins in March. There the cold, wet winds blow from the south (the Antarctic); the hot dry winds from the north (the sun-baked interior.) In North Australia, on the other hand, we have completely different conditions; the wet season is the summer and begins in November with strong N.W. winds—the "monsoon." The winter is the dry season, and at this time of the year, in some districts, of the interior, the nights at high elevations are sometimes quite cold. On the coast, however, it is exceedingly hot. Last summer we thought it uncomfortably hot in this country when the thermometer registered 83° Fahr., but at Wyndham, on the N.W. coast, temperatures range from 90° to 100° and even 110° have been recorded. Unfortunately, no official statistics of temperature, as far as the writer can ascertain, have been published for the inland districts which the Painted Finch inhabits.

"A still pool, around whose unruffled waters are gathered an immense number of wading birds."

The Northern Territory and N.W. Australia have a fairly heavy rainfall in the coast districts, but it varies considerably from year to year. On the whole, this species may be said to inhabit a dry country, but one subject to sudden torrential rains, for when the "monsoon" breaks it turns the streams into foaming cataracts, and floods the low-lying country.

NESTING SEASONS WHICH VARY.

The nesting season of South Australia is September, which is also the case in New Zealand and in a large area of South America. In N. Australia, on the other hand, the Finches begin to pair in December, and their nesting operations are in full swing in what is locally called "the wet." One of the many curious notions with regard to foreign birds which prevail in this country is that they—and still more their young—cannot endure heavy rain and that a dry summer is required for breeding them. As a matter of fact, very many tropical birds rear their young in the midst of such rain as was never experienced, and never even dreamed of, in this country, and their attempts at breeding are most successful in a warm, wet summer.

In many parts of Australia, however, the rainfall is exceedingly uncertain, and droughts often extend over several years. In such cases a friend—a doctor who has lived for a considerable time in the country and is much interested in birds—informs the writer that there is hardly any nesting; the birds wait until the rains come, when the grass springs up as if by magic, insects abound and the birds work double tides, as it were, bringing up several broods one after the other. We can now understand how it is that Gouldian Finches often nest in this country in December: it is the time of their nesting season at home. We can also understand why many Australian species will nest here at almost any time of the year; they have learned in their own country how to adapt themselves to an uncertain climate and to wait for a suitable opportunity.

Mr. H Willford who has bred the Painted Finch in England.

Bird-catching is an interesting art in itself, and some curiosity was aroused a year or two since with regard to the methods of capture of the species in question by the following statement which appeared in the Price-list of a well-known London dealer, published July, 1910. "Gouldian, Painted and other mixed Finches, can be purchased at Port Darwin at an all-round price of 6d. each; they are brought into the town by the Japanese, who are the bird trappers of N.W. Australia; it is quite unnecessary for the so-called white trapper to go into the bush for them. We have, it seems, our De Rougemonts in the Australian bird trade, their fairy tales of stopping waterholes being most amusing."

The writer has nothing to say with regard to the above statement, which, indeed, does not interest him personally, but it may be interesting to compare it with the following narrative which was sent to the writer by a trapper and collector of rare birds.

TRAPPING THE PAINTED FINCHES.

"Early in May, 1909, Mr. Wallace and I agreed to go up to Hall's Creek, Kimberley Goldfields. Our intentions were, in the first place, to prospect a gold-bearing reef Mr. Wallace had worked many years ago; if this failed, we were then to try for the Painted Finches, which were fairly numerous in this locality. In Wyndham we loaded a large waggonette with mining tools, bird-seed, nets, rations, etc., and started on our long trip of 300 miles. For the first 200 miles the country was level, the road following the valley of the Ord River; for the remaining 100 miles the track was very rough. Fortunately Mr. Wallace is a good driver and took his four-in-hand team through safely without a single capsize. At times the waggonette was on two wheels, but, fortunatey, always righted itself. On reaching the mine we worked very hard for eight weeks and drew a blank. We then hunted round for isolated water-holes and found one—an old worked-out gully, which had been worked by the gold-diggers many years ago, some four miles from our camp, where numbers of Painted Finches came to drink every day.

"After a deal of trouble a suitable place was cleared and levelled for the nets (12 yards by 3½ yards.) The method of capture was as follows: The water-hole—a small one—was carefully covered with a large piece of netting in such a manner that the birds could not get a drink. In the nets, which were the ordinary clap pattern, a trough was made by digging a small hole and lining it with canvas; this was filled with water. In two days' catch at this water-hole we secured 50 pairs of birds. As it was late in the season, and we had a long return trip to make, we decided to leave at once for Wyndham. On the way back we stopped for three days at a large spring, and here we secured another 50 pairs of birds. At this place we had great difficulty in putting down the nets; the only available place was a large flat rock, into which holes had to be drilled to take the necessary pegs for rigging the nets.

"After leaving this place all went well until we reached our next catching place—Hick's Creek, 80 miles out from Wyndham. Here I went down with a severe attack of malarial fever; this left Mr. Wallace with his hands full; he had to catch the birds, look after those already caught, watch the horses, and cook. Forfortunately, the fever did not last long, and by the time we reached Wyndham I was fit to work again.

THE SPOT CALLED HOME.

"The habits of Emblema picta differ from those of other northern Finches. My experience is that they are always found in rocky ranges or stony plains, which in Kimberley are always covered with Spinifex—a coarse grass which grows in large tussocks. In most species the blades have a hard point of needle-like sharpness. All the nests I have found were built in these bunches of Spinifex. I have never seen a nest fastened to the bark of a tree as you suggest. I have never seen these birds in large flocks, twenty being the most I have ever seen in one flock, and five or six is the usual number, even where the birds are plentiful. I have never seen this species near the coast, sixty miles inland being the nearest point inland at which I know it to be resident, though at times stragglers have been caught at Derby, King's Sound.

"In Kimberley I look upon the Hall's Creek district as being the home of this bird. This district is on the Divide between the Ord River and Fitzroy River. The country is high, 1,400 feet above the sea, and is cold in winter, bitter easterly winds blowing for several months. This bird's principal food is the seed of the Spinifex. Regarding the birds you saw at Bath, they were caught by me in the Hall's Creek district. On that occasion I made a trip from Derby, King's Sound, to Wyndham on Cambridge Gulf via Hall's Creek, a distance of 600 miles, and my experience was much the same as in the trip I have given you particulars of, except that I had no companion until I met Mr. Wallace at Turkey Creek, 160 miles from Wyndham.—J.P.R."

The above very interesting narrative gives us some idea of the difficulties and dangers which often have to be faced by those who explore the interior of a tropical country in quest of rare birds. When we see them on the show-bench we call them "feathered gems,"; we might also, in the words of a fine old Scotch song ("Caller Herring,") sometimes "call them lives of men."

SEEN AT A CYCLISTS' PARADE.

A choice design by Mr. H. Ingles, of the Bromley and West Kent F.A.

It is difficult to understand why the method of trapping above described should have caused any scepticism, seeing that working the water-holes is a recognised system of trapping (and shooting) birds in every part of the world where water is scarce; that Bechstein tells us that an exactly similar system of laying the nets was in use in Germany a century ago; and that, even in our own well-watered country, many bird-catchers think it well worth while to make an artificial puddle with clay in the centre of the clap-nets.

The arrival of the more recent consignments of Australian birds with which the names of Messrs. Payne and Wallace are associated will be fresh in the recollection of most of our readers. The writer will never forget his first impressions of the 1905 consignment which he had an opportunity of inspecting a few days after it reached the London Docks. In a large room, which formed part of a big and rather gloomy warehouse in the East End, was quartered an army of more than 5,000 birds, mostly Finches of brilliant colours. On tiers of perches in large travelling cages, their serried ranks were packed as tightly as herrings in a barrel.

HOW THEY ARRIVE IN THIS COUNTRY.

The cages were simply wooden boxes roughly put together, their fronts covered with wire netting, but, for all that, they were well and scientifically designed. Every cage had a false bottom of wire netting raised about a couple of inches above the wooden bottom, so that no birds could perch on the latter, and each cage could be thoroughly cleaned in a very few moments. All the seed and water tins were hung outside the cages, in such a position that they could not be soiled or contaminated in any way, and in addition to the seed and water tins each cage had receptacles for grit. Owing to these wise precautions the birds were uniformly in splendid condition. It was here that the writer first had the pleasure of making the acquaintance of Mr. J. H. Payne, a very good sort and possessing a wonderful knowledge of the birds of his country. Mr. Payne, by the way, is at present residing in this country, and to him the writer is indebted for the kind loan of an official handbook of Western Australia.

The writer also had the pleasure of inspecting the 1908 consignment and of meeting Mr. Wallace—tall, dark, sinewy, good-looking, with a quiet dignity and distinction of manner. This time the birds were located in a specially constructed glass house in a sunny garden in the fine old city of Bath. In addition to the usual Gouldian, Crimson, Ruficauda, Bicheno and other Finches, there were a couple of the very rare Black Cockatoos, many rare Parrakeet-, some Doves and Emus, and lastly, and by no means leastly, about a score of Painted Finches.

At last—at long last—we were face to face with this rarely imported Australian species about which we had read so much, and for whose coming we had so long and eagerly looked in vain. We had been told that, once seen it could never be forgotten; and we had been told the truth. It is a very small bird (the photo of the male bird on the nest represents it about half life size), but a most distinctive one. Its back is a warm brown; the wings and tail blackish; the face and centre of breast and the rump a bright scarlet; the throat and underparts deep black; the sides and flanks most conspicuously and tastefully picked out with round white spots. Its long, pointed, slender beak at once catches the eye, and in virtue of this feature Messrs. Lucas and Le Souef, in their recent work, place it in a genus by itself. The striking contrasts and design of its colour areas seem to have impressed the author of its classical name (whoever he may have been), for Emblema (pronounced "emblcema") picta means "painted inlay-work," which is, for a scientific name, fairly appropriate. Very frequently the efforts of the museum naturalist to devise a name for a new species are absolutely ludicrous. What, for instance, shall be said of the artistic perception of the genius (whoever he may have been), who called the beautiful little Black-headed Siskin a "jaundiced goldcap," or the equally charming and brilliant Arkansas Siskin a "sad-coloured blackthorn?"

By E. Hampden.

SOME POSSIBILITIES OF ONE'S TINY PET.

The Canary is one of the most difficult birds to tame to the extent of making it come to call and perch on the hand, so there is all the more credit to be gained by accomplishing this. As for tricks, Bullfinches, Linnets, Goldfinches and Siskins bred in captivity learn them very quickly. A Mule, a bird which has one of the wild Finches for a parent, will be found more docile than the ordinary little yellow Canary. But still, the latter may be trained into a most clever and interesting pet.

First of all accustom it to taking seeds from off the finger, then from between finger and thumb, next from the lips; it will soon learn to enter into the fun. To starve the bird beforehand is cruel and foolish. Just as a healthy, well-nourished person works best, so does a bird; all that is necessary is to feed it only on canary and rape seed, not one of the mixtures, and then offer it tit-bits—these only by the hand or mouth—hemp-seed is generally most appreciated, or maw-seed scattered on the moistened finger. If there is great shyness, accustom the little creature first to pecking at a piece of lettuce-leaf, groundsel, or watercress, while this is held.

COMING TO THE CALL.

When the lip-feeding is fully learnt, allow the bird to fly about the room (chimney, windows, and door being shut); feed it with dainties, calling to it by some special whistle or cry that must never be altered. Gradually all its ideas of its owner will be pleasant ones; it may be several weeks before it flutters down eagerly to perch on the shoulder or wrist, but the time will come, unless impatient gestures, or shouts, have lessened its confidence.

An author of renown possesses a Canary that will not let him write while it is loose until it has been bribed by some dainty morsel. It simply flies at the pen that travels over the paper, pecking and flapping its wings—the very personification of anger.

Another little Crested Canary accompanies its master into the garden; it wears brace-harness round its neck and body to which a long cord is attached, and secured by this to a seat-rail it can take pleasing flights, investigate the lawn and gravel, and thoroughly enjoy itself, in fact.

SOME SPECIAL CAGES.

Cages can be bought fitted with a drawbridge, and a small cart that has to be pulled up by a cord before the bird can eat out of it: these are generally for Siskins and Goldfinches, but Canaries will learn the trick. There must be a constant supply of daily food given elsewhere in such cages, and the cart should contain only some kind of dainty—millet-spray, green-meat, or mixed seed.

One Canary-lover keeps his pet in a home-made extra tall cage, which has a quaint rope ladder inside, it leading to a platform just under the roof. He has taught his bird to mount there when whistled to, and its cleverness is, of course, rewarded by a treat—a morsel of cake soaked in milk and sherry in this particular case.

It is more difficult to persuade a Canary to sing to order than to teach it tricks. However, something can be done by perseverance in whistling to it ringing bells, or playing high notes on the piano or some other musical instrument, and never failing to pay the songster in the coin that he loves best. When the lesson has been mastered, it is amusing to order the song at night and note what a sleepy, sotto-voce melody will result! But birdie's slumbers ought not to be disturbed too often.

EVEN A CITY BACKYARD MAY BE BEAUTIFIED.

In this aviary, belonging to Mr. G. Bailey, of Stepney, E., a pair of Song Thrushes built a nest and hatched their young.

THE THRILLING HOBBY OF HYBRID BREEDING.

By D. E. Alexander, (Bangor).

WHEN a boy in rural Scotland my mother's kitchen was seldom without one or two British birds, but in subsequent years after I had drifted into the city I had no opportunity to develop the hobby, although I always managed to keep a feathered pet even in lodgings. Fifteen years ago I found myself in a country town in the heart of Ireland, where I put up a Goldfinch and a Canary, and successfully reared two nests of mules. One of them is, to my knowledge, still alive in Falkirk. Business developments and speculations prevented any further opportunities in a birdy way till with growing success, more leisure, and two Goldfinches sent by my old Irish landlord, I found myself in the autumn of 1907 in an Ulster town and in a mood to pursue my hobby with greater zest than ever. I lost one of the Finches in the moult, but filled his vacant cage with a Linnet which I caught about the end of September. In February I took a Greenfinch cock out of a hedge with the aid of a lamp and a limed stick. These, with two field-moulted Bullie hens, a house-moulted Linnet, and four Canary hens, constituted my stock at the beginning of 1908.

The Bullfinches were not caught till February, and although I had procured them to house-moult for the following season, I put the more steady one into a Thrush's cage with my house-moulted Goldfinch. The latter was very tame, and with attention and frequent baths both he and his cage chum came into grand condition. I attribute a good deal of my success to that cage. It was roomy, measuring 24 in. by 10 in. and 21 in. high, with two perches above and two below, so placed that the droppings from above did not mess the perches beneath.

My method of feeding was: hemp as a stock food, with changes of various seeds daily. For instance, I would one day put a heaped teaspoonful of soaked teazle seed into the saucer that was placed in the centre of the cage, and the next day a spoonful of inga or maw. Of these seeds they never got more than they could clear up, and poor Master Goldie had generally to switch his tail on the perch until such time as his lady-love had supped to repletion. For green food, I gave sweet apple until the April sun caused the larch buds to swell sufficiently to attract the Bullfinches to them in hundreds. My experience has been that where larch buds are procurable Bullies eat nothing else during the early spring days. Although my Bullie hens were both English ladies they did not by any means object to the food of their Irish sisters, but instead preferred the larch to white—thorn or any other budding twigs. I gave my Britishers the seed heads of the dandelion as soon as procurable, and with plenty of wild seeds they ate very little hemp. I never gave them canary seed, as the Goldfinch would not touch it.

One afternoon in May my delight was great when I observed Master Goldfinch, with every feather bristling out, salaaming to his sweetheart, while she sailed through the cage with a twig in her mouth. By this time both birds were very tame, and although they sat on a low shelf in the scullery they paid no attention to the continual passing and re-passing of either the ladies of the house or the children. However, now that Miss Bullie had apparently serious intention of becoming Mrs. Goldfinch, I thought it would be well to allow her all the privacy possible in the circumstances. I therefore put cardboard over the back of the cage, left hand end, and one third of the front. The end to the window remained unenclosed, and also three-parts of the front, so as not to interfere with the opening of the one and only door in the centre of the cage.

I had always kept at least half an inch of sea sand in the bottom, but from this stage onward I only removed the top layer before strewing clean sand, so as to disturb the birds as little as possible. I had an ordinary earthenware nest pan hung up in the hidden corner, and it was not many hours before her ladyship was turning round in it. I supplied twigs and horse-hair, but she did not build much, although she conscientiously laid every one of her first clutch in the nest pan. Every morning I was up betimes, and immediately she left the nest I substituted a Canary egg for the more precious one. I had to lift it out with my fingers, as the nest arrangement forbade any more careful treatment, but fortunately I had no mishaps.

A TRIUMPH OVER DIFFICULTIES.

A Lovely Aviary built in a narrow backyard by Mr. C. Barker, Swindon.

"In front of my kitchen window," writes Mr. Barker, "in the narrow passage-way, is a strip of ground, 21 ft. long by 2 ft. wide. I tried to grow flowers there, but failed. Being a bird fancier, I decided to build an aviary. This aviary may appear very narrow, I admit, but what it lacks in width it makes up for in length. The birds have a long flight, and there is an absence of fighting; in fact, I don't think there is a "boss" in the aviary—a very rare thing.

The photograph is taken from the dining-room. Anyone handy with tools can make a similar aviary at a very little cost. The frame is made of 2in by 1in. strips, halved in, and screwed together. The frame, sides, top, and front are covered with half-inch mesh wire, the house with half-inch beaded match-boarding, 7 ins. wide; the top of the house with tar paper, and the top of flights with removable galvanised iron. The right-hand flight is glazed in front of wire with 21-oz. glass, which is removable. The glass acts as a protection against wind, and is also handy in winter time. The front and sides are covered at night with a waterproof curtain—a precaution against cats, etc.; it is also used for an awning in daytime—a protection from the sun.

The birds in the aviary (which will accommodate some forty or more) consist of 3 cock Canaries, and 13 hens, and 6 Goldfinches, 2 Linnets, 2 Bullfinches, 1 Redpoll, 1 Siskin, 1 Twite, 1 Brambling, 1 Chaffinch, 1 Greenfinch, 1 Thrush, all cocks. I feed them on the following seeds, all in self-supplying hoppers: Canary, rape, hemp, inga, white millet, linseed, teazle, and groats. I give some soft-food, too, of course. The birds I may add, are in the best of health. I built the aviary in February and turned the birds in at the end of March.

A STRIKING NATURE STUDY.

Meadow Pipit Feeding a Young Cuckoo.

After she had laid her full clutch of five eggs I temporarily divorced Mr. Goldfinch, and married him to a yellow Norwich, by whom he had four fine healthy youngsters. Although I had never observed the act of pairing during the first nesting, one of the five Bullie eggs hatched out on the 3rd of June.

The Linnet Mule, which the young hybrid had as a nest fellow, was a dark, plump, woolly chap, but the hybrid was to all appearances only a diminutive red wriggling worm, very feeble, and unable to gape, unless when stirred up. I watched the hen Canary from behind a screen, and saw that while she fed the Mule readily, the hybrid was entirely neglected. It was clear that if my precious morsel were to be saved I must act promptly. Therefore, with the advice of an experienced birdy friend, who had once reared a Linnet-Bullfinch, I crushed up a morsel of arrowroot biscuit with an equal part of the yolk of a hard boiled egg, and, adding milk to this, I warmed the mixture in a teaspoon over the gas. I then with a burned match flattened at the point, administered a pick of the preparation. This I did every hour for the next few days, during which the bird grew, but not at all in proportion to its nest companion. But, strange to relate, immediately it was sufficiently old to give tongue, the hen Canary transferred her affections, and from that time onward it thrived wonderfully. She did not, of course, forsake the Mule, but the hybrid was always her first consideration. I fed her mostly on mouse-ear and dandelion heads.

I don't think there is any seed more satisfactory for rearing hybrids than mouse-ear, as it is plentiful in July when the dandelion heads are scarce, and it has the advantage over chickweed that it keeps a long time fresh, while mouse-ear is eaten quite as freely by the hen Canary. Of course I gave fresh egg food daily, as well as plenty of crushed hemp.

I have that Goldie-Bullie yet, and it was in the cards the only time shown. Although so very difficult to start in life, the bird when once on the perches never turned back. It has never been an hour sick, and takes colour-feed freely.

SO NEAR AND YET SO FAR.

Of the second clutch, there were two fertile eggs and one hatched out, but I did not rear the bird. At the third nesting the Bullie sickened, and I almost lost her. Up to this time she had laid every egg in the nest pan, although she never sat more than four days on the eggs substituted for her own. However, something went wrong with her ovary, and one morning I found the hen Bullie all puffed up in the bottom of the cage, with a soft shelled egg beside her. I at once brought the cage to the bird-room, which was more airy and bright, and with open windows and the aid of some late dandelion heads I managed to find—and which I had given over using as sorrel and thistle were now plentiful—she pulled through. In this connection I should mention a little incident about Master Goldie.

Thinking it better to have him removed in the sad circumstances, I was transferring him to a separate cage when he escaped from my hand. As it was a Sunday morning, and breakfast waiting, I left him at liberty, there being no danger of losing him owing to the fine wire mesh across the open window. What was my surprise when I returned to find him back in the cage with his sick wife. He had gone in through the wide wires of the Thrush cage, although he never tried to come out.

About a fortnight later this Bullfinch hen laid her fourth and last clutch, from which two young were hatched, but only one reared. It lived till after the moult, but unfortunately subsequently developed cataract on botheyes and died. By the one Goldfinch I that year had ten mules and two hybrids, not counting the Hybrids that perished before they reached the perch. None of the Mules died.

But now I must hie me back to No. 2 Bullfinch, and relate her history. Both Bullfinches came to me straight from the catcher—they cost only 9d. each, plus 6d. carriage from Essex. They were not seeded off when they arrived in a blacking box with plenty of privet berries. They were both very wild, but No. 1, whose domestic history I have related, soon steadied down, while No. 2 was untamable—in fact, is by no means exceptionally steady in a cage to this day. All the same it occurred to me, when I saw her more docile sister making offers to nest, that there might be some hope even of this most intractable specimen if she were removed further away from the ways of men. I therefore cleared out a lumber room upstairs, and erected in the centre a freshly-cut hawthorn branch—almost a tree—which I stayed with ropes after the manner of tent-pegging, only I had supporting cords from above as well as from the floor. I then put bushes in three corners of the room, and across the fourth corner I drew a curtain from behind which the door opened, and I could view the inmates through a rent—I made it with my penknife—without their being any the wiser. I then turned into this room my wild Bullie and the field-moulted Linnet.

THE LADY IS VISIBLY PLEASED.

I never saw a bird more delighted than she was when she flew into the hawthorn bush. She piped with joy, and was soon gorging herself with the fresh buds. I placed tin saucers containing the various seeds of commerce on the floor, and also a big plate of water for them to bathe in, while there was a patch about 4 ft. square spread with coarse sea sand. Into this room I also turned the recently-caught Greenfinch already referred to, and a hen Canary. In less than a fortnight the Canary had gone to nest on eggs fertilised by the Greenfinch. She successfully reared one mule, and two young Greenfinches, which I transferred from a wild nest when I saw that only one mule was to hatch out. I never saw the Greenfinch cock feed either the foster-brood or his own chick—that was done entirely by the Canary—but subsequently he practically reared a Linnet-Bullfinch hybrid, but of that more anon. Probably his shyness at the outset was due to the fact that he was a freshly-caught bird.

I had fitted up the room with wicker carrying cages, as well as various boxes and nest pans. They had been about six weeks in their new abode, and the Canary had her family nearly reared, when one morning my heart was made glad by seeing the Linnet carrying some fluffy material into a wicker box which I had placed in the heart of a whin bush. It was clear that Bullie had some interest in this performance, as she was stirring about in great excitement, and I even saw her sidling along the branch with a jaunty twist of her glossy tail when approached by Master Linnet.

From that onward this pair became very much attached to each other, and the Linnet was continually dancing attendance on his mistress; all the same he could not persuade her to start housekeeping in his favourite furze. She was difficult to please, but at length decided in favour of a tangle of birch twigs which I had brought home with me from a country ramble, and nailed above a Hartz Canary cage, hung at the edge of the window frame. I had also fastened a long perch close beside it, which, being a useful place on which to alight, had, I think, much to do with the selection of the site. The location of the bunch of birch will be clearly seen in the illustration.

At first I thought she had selected the small wicker cage, but afterwards I found that her nest was on the top of it with scarcely any head room, and packed right up amongst the birch twigs. She built a perfect nest quite equal to the best specimens to be found in the wilds, but strange to relate the Linnet took no part in it. Instead he continued to build his bachelor nest. In due course five eggs were laid, and I never once fingered them. Only one hatched, and this I removed to the Canary's second nest, where it met with disaster in being dragged out. The nest was built in the open bush in the centre of the room, and as the hen always flew upwards when leaving it, I saw the foolishness, after it was too late, of entrusting the young hybrid to such a receptacle.

The Bullie was nesting again within a week, and this time she surrendered to her partner in so far that she consented to build very near to the place he had at first selected. It was right away in the corner, and in a poor situation on the top of some whitethorn behind the whin. Notwithstanding the comparatively exposed position, she sat closely and hatched two of three fertile eggs. I observed that she was feeding well, and so I determined to try her with one nestling, while I removed the other to the Canary, which had this time built in a safe position inside a Hartz cage.

The young Hybrid did not thrive with the Canary, while its brother in their own mother's nest was fat and plump. I determined to change them instead of giving both to the Bullie as I might have been expected to do in the circumstances, but I feared the small one would have little chance in a nest with such a robust relative, and also because I wished to keep the Canary on duty in case the Bullie ultimately failed me. It was all to no purpose, however, as the delicate morsel did not last long. On going into the room a few hours later I found it hanging across a branch dead. The other was reared without any difficulty by the Canary and her Greenfinch mate. The latter was most attentive, and the young hybrid very soon learned to respond to his call. Unfortunately this hybrid turned out to be a hen.

For the third time the Bullie started building, and, on this occasion she returned to the ideal site in the heart of the birch tangle. I now determined to leave all, for better or worse, to the entire charge of the Bullie and her mate. She laid regularly, and in due course hatched four out of five eggs. From behind the curtain I saw her, or rather heard her, feed regularly after I had put in a fresh lot of sow thistle heads or a bunch of sorrel.

Birds which Take Part in Prize Fights.

By THOS. AITKEN,

In England we are familiar with the matching of bird against bird for beauty of plumage or of song, but in India, as this article tells us, the natives train them to engage in single combat.

In India a certain section of the natives keep their birds purely for the sake of indulging in fighting with them. Having lived in the North of India for several years, I have been witness of many bird fighting competitions at various places. The species usually utilised for fighting are: The common Grey Partridge, the Quail, a bird called the "Chikor," the Bulbul (red-vented variety), and the Baya-bird (Weaver). The two latter birds are braced and carried about perched on the forefinger.

Clever at Learning Tricks.

The Weaver birds are very clever and are taught a number of remarkable tricks, such as letting off miniature cannon, jumping through hoops, etc. Of the fighting birds mentioned, the Quail is the easiest to train, and having kept them myself, and gone into the details of how they are taught to fight, I shall endeavour to describe to readers the methods adopted. In Simla, a pretty hill station where I was located for some time, the market place at a certain time of the year is almost overcrowded with box-loads of Quails which are sent up for eating purposes. They are sold by the dozen and the score, and are kept in boxes divided into tiers, not unlike the low stock cages in which bird-dealers in England keep their newly-caught birds.

Suffragettes Not Encouraged.

For fighting purposes the males are selected, and for the price of two annas (twopence) or four annas (four pence) each one is given the privilege of selecting from the whole stock. Birds with clearly defined throat markings are generally chosen, and a good fighter may be readily distinguished by his persistent quarrelling with his mates over the seed box.

The bird having been chosen, it is taken home and carried about in the hand (see sketch) everywhere, amongst all sorts of surroundings. Whenever it is thought the bird requires food some seed is put into the palm of the hand not engaged in holding the bird, and it is encouraged to eat. The bird will readily take its fill in this manner if at all hungry. The staple food is millet seed. During the night, and when not in the hand, the bird is kept in a bag, the bottom of which is meshed with cotton thread (see sketch).

A Little Deception.

After three days of being carried about, during which period it must not have been given the opportunity of seeing another Quail, it is made to take a short fast—say, till midday. A looking glass is then placed perpendicularly upon the floor or table. About eight or ten inches away, and opposite the glass, the Quail is placed. Some seed is now strewn midway between bird and glass. Being hungry, the Quail will immediately attempt to tackle the seed, whereupon he is prevented by the palm of the hand being placed in front of it.

Tantalising Tommy!

The hand is, however, removed almost immediately, and the bird is again shown the seed. He makes another attempt to get at it, but is prevented as before; and so on, again and again, until he is worked up into a "temper." Then he sees his own reflection in the glass, mistakes it for an opponent who is the cause of his not being able to get any seed, and makes a dash at it.

Directly the bird does this, and "calls," he is shown the seed, and allowed to partake of a few grains, after which he is again encouraged to "call," and make for the image in the glass. Having repeated this two or three times, the glass is taken away and he is allowed to finish his meal. The Quail is not allowed to come into contact with the glass. The next day the same procedure is gone through, and within the week from the day this prospective fighting machine was bought in the market place, the looking glass is replaced by a trained Quail, and a match is proceeded with. The fight itself is not much of a battle. The birds call vigorously and rush at each other, and the one which receives a few extra hard knocks on the head from its opponent generally beats a hasty retreat from the scene. The method of fighting the birds is shown in the sketch. The winner's "prize" is a meal more replete than usual in dainties.

On an Empty Stomach!

To get the Quails into good fighting condition, a little garlic chopped fine is rubbed into their seed. This has a wonderful effect in fattening the birds. They are generally fought on an empty stomach. A dust bath is given every day, which they look forward to and enjoy; for this they may be taken out into the open, but must be shielded with the palms of the hands, so as to prevent them from flying away, which they readily do when given the opportunity. A good feed of seed twice a day is sufficient for them.

Partridges are carried about in cages, in pairs. The male bird is usually let out of its compartment—the cage being a double one—and follows its master wherever he goes. The latter, however, has always to carry with him the cage containing the female. The hen bird is never let out of the cage. The staple food is a seed known as "bajara," also white ants, of which they are very fond, and moist "pills" made of "atah" (fine wheat-meal) and ghee (a kind of butter).

Some Savage Tribes.

When fighting—the male birds only are utilised—they keep up a continuous loud calling. The females encourage their husbands in the fight from within their cages, which are placed on the fighting ground, with a loud, shrill whistle uttered every few seconds. The spurs of the cock birds are as sharp as needles, and bunches of feathers are knocked out when either of the birds receives a kick from his opponent. They fight savagely.

The Bulbuls also are keen fighters. These birds utter angry notes, flap their wings, raise their topknots and roll over each other in a helpless mass. The Bulbuls are fed on a mixture made of gram, which is parched and ground and mixed with ghee, also raisins and other fruits. The Weaver Birds, with their strong bills, grip on to each other like bulldogs. These birds are fed on millet seed, and, quite apart from any question of fighting, make very interesting and knowing pets.

An illustration of the method of Quail fighting will be found on page 31.

Some Neglected English Beauties.

By L. P. LUKE

(Brighouse).

Our contributor considers that many charming species are overlooked by the average bird-keeper, and champions the cause of the Wagtails.

With the advent of CAGE BIRDS, bringing in its wake a retinue of practical treatises upon the cult of birds, we as a nation have made such rapid strides that to-day almost everyone takes a delight in ministering to and caring for our feathered friends. But though to-day the sprightly Goldie or the ruddy-breasted Bullie is to be found thoroughly domesticated in every town, is it not a fact that many of our commoner field birds have really not been given an opportunity to become widely popular as pets, though combining exquisite colouration with a charming and adaptable disposition?

What, for instance, has been done with regard to that common, yet most lovely, family, the Wagtails? Few are kept in confinement, yet they are exceedingly plentiful in our fields, and I myself always think of the Wagtails as the "gentlemen" of the birdy tribe—they always appear so extremely well groomed and smart. And so, to get away from the ruts, to strike out in a new direction, I propose to treat briefly on a method of keeping the Wagtail in captivity.

Worthy Objects of Regard.

The accompanying sketch depicts a small Wagtail aviary, and I believe this diagram is self-explanatory. Being made from egg-boxes and packing-cases, its cost is trivial—it may truly be styled a "working-man's cage." Its actual cost in my own case was slightly under three shillings. I may add I have, besides the contrivance itself, a detachable sloping roof for use in wet weather. The six foot flight allows our friends a fair run and a turn, whilst the "dormitories" give protection and afford seclusion. Such a cage (it is hardly an "aviary") is easily portable, and when one has two or three of them, to accommodate as many different families of birds, this is a useful factor.

Details to be Studied.

The floor I strew with a thick carpet of sawdust, and, as the excreta of Wagtails is copious and of rather a watery nature, frequent renewal is a necessity. I also supply a fair sized piece of turf, and one or two large stones for the birds to perch upon. Facilities for bathing must be provided, for the members of this family are of a very cleanly nature. Sand, and sometimes black earth, are taken by our friends as aids to digestion, and these should at all times be accessible.

As to the birds themselves, the three species most commonly and easily kept are the Pied, Grey, and Yellow. Procure your specimens from a reliable dealer, or, better still, snare them yourself by placing horsehair nooses, or even a spring net trap, in a place the birds are known to frequent, using mealworms as bait.

Having procured your birds they must be fed at first on ant eggs and mealworms, and gradually weaned on to the preparations sold by many firms for the feeding of Nightingales and the smaller softbills. Any kind of insect life our friends will greedily devour, and it should be offered whenever possible. As their feet are particularly tender all perches (if you think fit to have any) should be covered with thick cloth, and should be of a rather flattened section.

To watch your birds frolic in their bath, or stalk passing flies with the stealth of a cat, all the time "wagging" their beautiful tails with that charming motion characteristic of the family, will repay you a thousandfold for your trivial outlay

Every copy of this issue should contain a Coloured Calendar.

We venture the hope that CAGE BIRDS Calendar for 1912, issued with this week's Birthday Number, may be found an acceptable ornament of the walls of the bird-keeper's house, either for the living-room, or for the bird-room.

In choosing the Goldfinch to represent the British bird section, our artist has made a happy "hit," portraying one of the most popular and beautiful of the many birds of our fields and woods. Master Goldspink is depicted amongst his favourite food—the thistles of waste places and the country road-side. Most of our Finches are fond of the seeds of the thistle, but none are quite so eager to obtain them as the Goldie, or Thistle-finch, as he is sometimes called.

Many of the sights of birdland are both pleasing and beautiful, but none has quite the same charm and fascination for the observer as the attention paid by the mother bird to her young. In the open fields and in the hedgerows the latter is a picture quite commonly to be seen during the early summer months when the dog roses are in bloom and thickening foliage assists to hide the homes of the busy birds. In Canary-land we have the same picture, although in quite a different setting. The flowers and foliage of the woods are absent, but the love of the mother-bird is at times quite as strong, and many a fancier has whiled away happy hours watching the assiduous attentions paid by the parents to their young, and the resulting growth of the "wee birdies."

Among the hundreds of foreign birds that from time to time reach these shores, our artist might easily have chosen a representative which excels in magnificence of plumage the one depicted here—the Diamond Sparrow—but this Australian bird possesses a quaint beauty of its own, and is very popular with bird-keepers. Years ago it was quite common in England, but of late comparatively few specimens have come into the English market.

In conclusion, we may say that we present CAGE BIRDS Calendar for 1912 to our readers in the hope that this happy effort of our artist, Mr. H. Norman, will be given a prominent place in the home. Further, we shall be pleased to send a small supply carriage paid to readers who will kindly help along their paper, CAGE BIRDS, by getting them displayed in suitable places such as hair-dressers' shops, the headquarters of societies, etc.

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

Fits, and Hen for Muling.

A Real Bird Fancier.—(1) I certainly do not advise you to use the bird that is subject to fits for breeding. It would doubtless breed successfully, and perhaps few, if any, of its progeny would be similarly affected, but, again, there is a chance that the trouble may be inherited in an aggravated form. Fanciers owe it to themselves no less than to the well-being of their birds, to take no such risks by breeding from none but physically sound birds. Feed the bird on a staple of plain canary only. Give separately every second day half a teaspoonful of summer rape, twice a week on the alternating days a similar quantity of mixed seed, and once a week a little egg-food sprinkled with maw seed. Keep the bowels regular with green food, or an occasional dose of sulphate of soda. When a fit occurs give as much bromide of potassium as will lie on a threepenny-piece in the water for three or four days. If you can tell when a fit is impending begin to give the bromide at once. (2) Yes, a yellow Yorkshire hen would do very well for muling with either Linnet or Guldfinch, but it mated with a cock Lizard the progeny would be crossbred Canaries—not Mules, as you appear to surmise.

Doubting Thomas.

Ada.—I can only repeat what I said in my last reply, viz., that the stringy substance most certainly was no worm at all. Sorry your are inclined to think otherwise, but I cannot help your doing so. My suggestion that it might probably be (not that I did not say decidedly it was) a fibre from some green stuff, was, I admit, obviously wrong, seeing that none was supplied, but that does not affect the main fact in any way. You say you know she could not possibly have got such a stringy substance from food or elsewhere evidently, unaware of the fact that they are readily formed when the voidings are of a sticky mucous-like nature as in certain unhealthy conditions of the bowels, simply through the glairy discharge adhearing to the vent and the thread like portion hardening on exposure to the air. My theory as to the sluggish action of bowels is amply confirmed by what you say in your last letter, and the treatment previously advised should set matters right. Examine the kernel of your hemp, by the way. Now, as regards your questions, the only test I put the substance to was examination under a strong magnifier. This was merely a matter of form, as naked eye appearances was sufficient to convince me it was not a worm of any kind. Secondly: Cage birds do have worms sometimes, though it is uncommon, but none of them are anything like what you send, and as for tapeworm, that is quite out of the question. Hope this will set your mind at rest on the matter.

Seven in One.

A Constant Reader.—(1) Sorry I do not know the address of the maker of Queck organs. It is a German product. I think that any of the large firms dealing in fanciers' specialities would be able to obtain you one. Why not write one or two of them asking for their prices? (2) The Queck organ seems to be most popular, and is probably found the best for general purposes. (3) Yes, if one's breeding operations are on at least a moderate scale, so as to justify the outlay on an organ, I would certainly advise the use of one as an aid to tutoring the young cocks. The organ should be supplementary to good "schoolmasters," and not quite a substitute for them. (4) As regards price of a good organ, I have not a list by me at the moment, but if my memory is correct the Queck organ is something between £3 and £4. You could discover this by looking through our advertisement columns for last autumn, or any large Canary dealer's price list. (5) The rape you refer to at 5d. per lb. is supposed to be the particular kind favoured by the best German breeders, and should be the very best for the birds. But for general purposes a really good and mellow summer rape is practically as good. For high-class songsters, where price is no object, I would certainly advise you to get the superior kind. (6) Your dietary is very good, with the exception that twice a week would be sufficient to give the mixed seeds, and also for the egg bread, and on each of the remaining days you may give a scrap of green stuff, or fruit of some kind. Keep the proportion of hemp in the seed mixture fairly low, and the linseed at quite a minimum. (7) House's "Manual," 1s. 2d., contains an excellent chapter on the Roller; the Nutshell booklet on "The Roller," 2½d.; and "Profitable Canary Breeding," by Rettich, 9d., are the best. Our manager will send them all post free at prices named.

Building Aviary.

Flying Loose.—You seem to have formed a pretty good idea of the first principles of construction, and I take it you want only measurements of the minimum size required. You omit to say whether you intend building a span roof structure, or a lean-to, taking advantage of some existing wall for the back. Types of both structures are dealt with and illustrated in "Our Canaries," Part II. Unless space is really at a premium, which I do not judge is the case from your letter, it is scarcely wise to aim at building the smallest sized house that will suit your immediate requirements. Rather aim at making a place which is quite convenient and comfortable for yourself to move about in and attend to the stock with comfort, as well as providing for the convenient storage of all necessary foods and appliances. For the number of birds you propose running, say, 12 hens and four cocks, I would advise you to make the house 9ft. by 6ft. and, if it is a lean-to type, 7ft. 6ins. high at the back, descending to 6ft. 6in. at the front. A span roof should be about the same at the eaves, with a fair pitch up to the ridge to throw off wet quickly. Make it to face south east with a window made to open, 3ft. 6in. long and 2ft. high in front, a small fast window—i.e., not to open—18in. square in the north-east end, and door in the south-west end. This amount of window space would give plenty of light, without making the place too cold. The cages for nesting would be placed mostly on the back, facing north-west, but may be scattered in any nice bright place. Be careful not to place one or two considerably higher than the others, or all the hens will quarrel for possession of them. If I have missed any point you want to know, please write again.

Strain Wanted (V.W.).—I am sorry, but yours is just such a pery as I cannot deal with here. To recommend any particular strain or dealer in these columns would be obviously unfair to all the rest. Look up CAGE BIRDS' advertisement columns, and put yourself in the hands of a breeder or dealer of good standing who has a reputation to maintain. Tell him clearly what you want, or what your object is, and the amount you are prepared to spend, and you will doubtless be dealt with fairly—or you may ask for a quotation of price.

Best Staple (Burr).—A staple of plain Canary seed only, or at most a mixture of three parts Canary to one part rape, is far more conducive to general health and condition than an elaborate mixture given as staple all the year round. With the latter the birds have practically no change at all, and feed much too freely on just those seeds which are the least wholesome for them. By all means give the plain staple, and the various extras often named here separately from time to time, as and when required.

Colour of Young and Loss of Claws (Nero).—(1) If the buff cock is quite free from Cinnamon blood, the young from your proposed mating will be Greens, self and broken, and possibly some heavily green variegated. The difference that the Cinnamon blood makes in such a case is to cause, in a manner of speaking, almost complete reversion to the original green colour. (2) The loss of two claws would very seriously handicap the bird, and in good competition would probably destroy its chance of winning.

Looks Unmoulted (Anxious).—You ought to have said more definitely how the bird was than that it seems to be in a bad way, which might mean anything from the quite trivial to the most serious matter. If you are expert at washing, or have a friend who would do it for you, give the bird a wash, using water rather on the warm side. Do not attempt this if you have no experience. For the rest, treat the bird for a month the same as advised to "D.J.R.R.," except that you will not need to anoint it, and after the first week add to its water twice a week 20 drops of whiskey and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a threepenny-piece.

Going Bald (Anxious, Manchester).—See reply to "H.G." in this issue for treatment of baldness, which will do also for your bird. With your frequent cleansing operations I should say mites are quite at a premium with you. Do not forcibly spray the bird weekly during the winter. If she will not bathe voluntarily let her go unwashed. Above all do not spray her liberally with borax, etc., solutions. How would you like it? When you see her trying to bathe in the drinker remove it, give her just a puff or two from a spray to whet her desire for more, and then put a bath in the cage for an hour or so. A scrap of green stuff, or pinch of hemp, may be dropped in at the first few times. She will then probably take to the bath freely enough in a short time.

Building Aviary (Plymouth).—The site seems to be very well enclosed, so that if it is dry and gets a little sun, you should be able to breed exhibition Norwich quite successfully in it. But you should raise the back to 7 ft., or lower the front to 6 ft., to get a good pitch on the roof to throw off wet quickly. Also use not less than ¾in. boards for the outside walls, line inside with ½in., and pack the space between. It would be most unwise to skimp the job at the start, and neglect these essentials for the sake of a trifling saving of cost. Do not forget to provide efficient ventilation. Get the building ready, but do not put in the birds before the beginning of April. The number of birds it will accommodate depends upon whether you keep them in cages or flying house. When the house is ready write again, giving these particulars, and also repeat particulars of house, and I will advise you on the point.

Crest Wheezy (Novice, Brum).—See that he is kept in a cosy and equable place, not necessarily overheated, but quite free from draughts. Stop the staple diet of mixed seeds and give plain canary only, with a little rape every other day, and mixed seeds occasionally as frequently advised here. For a fortnight give every second day half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts daily for three days, and afterwards 20 drops of whisky, six each of oxymel of squills and ipecacuanha wine, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, every second day for a fortnight. I cannot advise you to breed with the bird if it does not recover from the wheezing, but I think it very likely will recover under above treatment.

Hen with Bald Head (D.J.R.R.).—I do not care for your method of feeding the bird. Keep her in a fairly warm and equable place, quite free from draughts and the fumes of burning lights in the evening, and treat as follows for a month at least. Staple diet, plain Canary seed only. Every second day give separately half a teaspoonful of summer rape, and twice a week on the alternate days a similar quantity of mixed seed, and on each of the remaining days give a small teaspoonful of egg-food or crushed sponge cake slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur and sprinkled with maw seed. Give a morsel of green food or fruit three times a week. In the drinking water give twenty drops of whisky, ten of lemon juice, and as much sulphate of soda as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week. Slightly anoint the bare place with Lanocyllin twice a week for a month.

Abnormal Feathers (Novice).—If only a single feather is affected like the one you sent, the cause is most likely to be some local abnormality at the root, or the quill being injured accidentally. Keep the bird in a fairly warm and equable place whilst the new feather is growing. Give a little egg-food slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur and sprinkled with maw seed every second day for a week, and twice a week afterwards for another three weeks. When the new feather appears, if it retains the quill after it gets beyond the length when the quill usually peels off, catch the bird every few days, warm the quill at some little distance from the fire—be careful; a foot distant will be quite near enough—and then rub off with the tips of the thumb and forefinger as much of the quill as will come away quite easily. In this way you may gradually release the whole feather from the quill. The feather may not be perfect, but I would not advise you to pluck it again this season. Thanks for good wishes, which we heartily reciprocate.

Baldhead (H.G.).—You do not mention the age of the bird. If it is getting old the chances of quite curing this trouble are not very great. Give the following treatment a month's trial, and if not successful write again and report any progress made, referring also to this reply. Keep bird in a cosy place, fairly equable, and free from draughts and fumes of burning lights. Feed as frequently advised in these replies, and in addition to the staple seed diet give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake or egg food every second day for a month, sprinkling it each time with maw seed, and twice each week slightly dust it with flowers of sulphur. Twice a week give also a similar quantity of mixed seeds. In the drinking water give 20 drops of whisky, 10 of lemon juice, and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a threepenny-piece twice a week for a month. Well mix together 20 drops of glacial acetic acid and a teaspoonful of glycerine, and slightly moisten the bare skin with this by means of a small feather or camel-hair pencil twice a week for a month. Do not use it too freely, nor allow it to go near the eyes.

Sleeps and Eats (Paddy).—Satisfy yourself that the bird is not in a position where it gets chilled now and again either from occasional draughts or extreme variations of temperature. If so, these things must be remedied and the bird kept in a more equable, but not heated, place. Also see that all your seeds are sound and good. Having attended to these points put the bird on a staple diet of plain canary seed only. Every second day give half a teaspoonful of summer rape (mellow nutty kind), and a morsel of banana. On the alternate days give a similar quantity of crushed sponge cake with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it and sprinkled with maw, and also a pinch of hemp, sweet and sound in kernel. Limit the diet to this for a fortnight. In the water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts daily for three days, and afterwards in each ounce of drinking water dissolve a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a pea, a crystal of sulphate of iron about half as big, and add six drops of dilute sulphuric acid. Give this every second day for the remainder of the fortnight.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Three Items.

Beginner (Herts).—As regards feeding the Linnet for song, note the reply given "J.A.T." last week, and follow the advice therein. You cannot better a yellow hen of Norwich type as a mate for your cock Goldfinch. Get a young hen (1911) for choice. I dealt with the feeding of the Chaffinch only a short time ago. Here you are again, however: Use the following stock mixture: Canary and teazle, two pints each; summer rape, charlock, and linseed half a pint each. To this a half-pint of sunflower could be added; or, better still, give the sunflower in a separate dish, say a heaped-up teaspoonful daily. Wild seed mixture and some good maker's special packet Finch mixture can be occasionally offered for a change, while sunflower heads, full of seeds (gathered from the garden), thistle, and hardheads, seeding chickweed, groundsel, and shepherd's purse should be freely given as in season. An occasional mealworm, flies, etc., are relished by most Chaffinches, and are very good for them. My own birds, too, are fond of a teaspoonful of insectile mixture (such as I prepare for my small soft-billed birds) now and again. This is specially good during the moult (and particularly so if a few live ants' eggs are mixed with it), helping to bring them out in fine condition and "bloom."

"Feeding Up" a Goldfinch.

Midlothian.—It is very early yet to talk of "feeding up" a Goldfinch. Feed your bird on the following lines. This is the seed mixture I am using for my own Goldies: Teazle four parts, canary and hemp three parts each, linseed one part, sunflower, safflower, summer rape, half-part each. The sunflower and safflower I crack lightly by passing them through a seed-crushing machine, and mix them with the others only when about to feed, but this, of course, is not convenient to everybody. In addition I have two other mixtures, of which I give a small teaspoonful daily—one, one day, the other the next day, and so on. They are (1) millet three parts, and maw one part; (2) thistle three ounces, dandelion and sesame two ounces each, lettuce, gold of pleasure, plantain, and cornflower one ounce each. All the others are mixed by measure. These seeds are those I have found by long experience the Goldfinch is particularly partial to, and as "tit-bits" they help to bring them into song and condition quicker than anything else I know. Plenty of dandelion, young tender leaves, and flowering and seeding heads are essential in the spring, and help greatly to bring Finches into breeding condition.

Operations in an Aviary.

Miss Thomas.—The person who told you that British birds would not breed in an aviary unless "living shrubs and plants" were therein, is entirely wrong. As a matter of fact, it is not at all necessary to put a shrub (a living plant) into an aviary for hen British birds to nest in. As likely as not they would ignore it, though quite possibly they might use it. They do some strange things. I myself have fixed up the most secret and snug corners for them to build their homes in, but they only "turned up their noses" at my contriving, and planted their nests right out in the open, within a very few inches of the wire-netting front. Fix up as many likely spots as possible (one cannot do more), and then leave the birds to go their own sweet way, keeping an eye open, however, for fear two couples should fancy the same site, for a pitched battle is almost certain to result should this happen, and unless one or the other gives way it may become necessary to interfere. Hang up nest-boxes in likely corners (or place them on shelves, etc.), and arrange bundles of pea-sticks, or suitable dead branches, here and there about the place. It is a very good plan to get a few old, yet not dilapidated, Blackbird and Thrush nests out of the hedgerows, and stick these about. Many Bullfinch and other hens will gladly re-line and use them. It is possible to get disused "first-round" nests of the above species in the season in plenty of time for use in one's aviaries and cages.

A Linnet Mule (Lin-Mule).—Your bird's liver is out of order and not working properly. Stop giving hemp and linseed. Let the staple food be best canary two parts, teazle one part, and summer rape half part, by measure. For two or three days stir half a teaspoonful of syrup of buckthorn into two tablespoonfuls of drinking water (fresh daily). This should make the bowels act freely; but the excreta does not want to become too watery, and if you find this coming to pass, stop the medicine for a day. When the bowels have been thoroughly cleared out, give some soft food as a change of diet—try a teaspoonful of very stale Madeira cake moistened with a few drops of new milk. Also allow a small teaspoonful of maw seed daily. If the bird seems to be thin (or "going light") mix 4 or 5 drops of cod liver oil emulsion with the Madeira cake for two or three days and on alternate days afterwards. The bird must eat this all up; remove its seed if necessary.

The Case of a Thrush (E. H. Brown).—It seems quite obvious that your bird must have been a fresh-caught one. I should consider 3s. an extremely low price for a Thrush "finger-tame and in full song"; in fact I should hardly expect to get such a bird at such a figure. If you want it to become very steady you will have to keep it indoors in a room wherein people are constantly moving about, and pay it little attentions, such as offering mealworms direct from the finger. Your idea of buying a box cage is admirable: the best thing you could do. You should use equal parts of the crushed puppy meal and the packet food you mention, giving ants' eggs, dried flies and yolk of egg now and again by way of a treat. The packet is very good considering its price, but I prefer to make it a little more "generous" so to speak. Note the reply given to "Arthur Jayes" last week.

A Stock Mixture (Old Drury).—I have very often said that I consider a stock mixture a mistake for any aviary, leading to great waste and unnecessary expense. The chief seeds should be supplied in separate vessels—say canary, summer rape, teazle, hemp, millet and sunflower. The other seeds (maw, linseed, niger, wild-seeds, etc.) can be given occasionally, as may be necessary, in another dish. Anyway, if you want a "stock mixture" I can't give a suitable one until you tell me the kinds of birds contained in your aviary and its size.

An Early Marriage (Young Fancier).—No doubt being kept in a warm room is responsible for the hen Canary wanting to build. But I don't see the slightest use in pairing her to the Goldfinch—you'll only get clear eggs. Why not run her for a nest with the cock Yorkshire, if he is in full song and vigorous condition? If she had any young, it would be quite early enough for the Goldfinch after she had reared them. Sorry to hear your last attempt at muling was a failure owing to the Goldie turning out to be a hen. It is a shame that hens should be palmed off on to beginners as cocks.

Ought They to Mule? (G. and L. Mules).—Judging by your letter both Goldfinch and Linnet are very promising as mule breeders. They will "come into condition" alright, in due course, when their natural breeding season approaches. They must be very fit now, or they would not be singing so stoutly. Give the Linnet the seeds advised "J.A.T." in our last issue. As regards the Goldie, feed as recommended "Midlothian" this week. If this is your first try at muling, keep each Finch to one hen: it is the simplest way and most conducive to success. You can run the couples together frequently now, for a few days at a time, until towards the end of February. It is impossible for me to say exactly when they will be ready for mating; this depends on their condition, and I could only tell this, of course, by seeing them. Broadly speaking, the Linnet should be fit in the early part of March, and the Goldie at the end of March.

Two Items (Mavis).—I am sorry to have to say it, but your bird is a hen for sure. Unless it is good from the show point of view, give it its liberty in the fields. Pair the Goldie with the Norwich hen, and the Linnet with the Yorkshire.

Greenfinch and Siskin Mules (Novice).—You can easily sex these birds by their colour. The hen Greenie Mule is very little better in colour than a hen Greenfinch (greyish, with traces of yellowish-green), whereas the cock is a rich green tinged with yellow. The same applies in the case of the Siskin; the cock is a lovely greenish-yellow colour, the hen quite pale and grey. I am referring to the ground colour, of course; the cock Siskin Mule is more jet-black in his markings than the hen. If you get a cock and hen together (adults) the difference is unmistakable in practically every case.

Linnets Dying (Kay).—It is hard to understand why you should lose your Linnets; my own mortality is very, very limited. Do you give them a mild dose of sulphate of soda occasionally (weekly or fortnightly)? Are you sure your seed is as good as it ought to be? It would seem as though kidneys and liver were both affected. If the losses are many, it will be best to send a body to our Mr. Yates for post-mortem examination; he would tell you the precise cause of death, and if it were due to any irritant (ptomaine poisoning).

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

Aviary and Birds.

T. G. S.—Your aviary is well sheltered, but the shelter accommodation is rather limited. During the prevalence of westerly gales it would be well to partially cover up the west front. A large sized bush in a tub each of spruce, fir, euonymus and privet would be an improvement. I rather advise you to get a pair of Grey-winged Ouzels; these are very hardy, and would breed, and the cock is a good songster. (1) Thirty to forty, not more, owing to limited shelter accommodation. (2) If you exclude Chaffinch, Bramblefinch, Greenfinch, and Yellow Bunting, you can keep the following in single pairs, in addition to those you have: Common and Green Avadavats, Grey and St. Helena Waxbills, Grey and Green Singing Finches, Bronze and Magpie Mannikins, Rufous-tailed and Long-tailed Grassfinches, Madagascar and Red-billed Weavers, Java Sparrows, Diamond Doves, Chinese Painted Quails, Pekin Robins, Red-crested and Green Cardinals, Silverbills, Paradise Whydahs, Bib Finches, Cape Canaries. You must not put newly imported birds out of doors till spring.

Grey Parrot Out of Condition.

J.C.N.—On receipt of this reply give a dose of Dinneford's Magnesia—one of magnesia to two of water—the bird's only drinkables to consist of the above prepared water for one day. After an interval of two days repeat the dose; on other days put one teaspoonful of Byno-phosphates in the daily supply of drinking water, only repeating the magnesia (after the second dose) as required to keep the bowels moving freely, but not watery-loose. While it continues as at present, supply the stale moistened bread exactly as you are at present preparing it. It can have what it cares to take of this till its appetite for seed, etc., returns, but keep seed in its cage. Supply the following mixture: One quart each of canary and white millet, one pint of white oats, half pint each of paddy rice, hemp and sunflower seeds; add one tablespoonful each of grit (not sand) and crushed cuttlebone (size of millet seed); well mix and keep a supply in the cage. The first moult of young birds in this country often lasts a year. You are quite right; keep it warm, and cage very clean—till it improves keep a cover round three sides of the cage continually, drawing the cover over the fourth side at night only; do not cover up top of cage at all. If there is any change in the symptoms (other than improvement) write again at once with full details.

Change of Plumage (E. Bradley).—While it is quite possible that a slight weakness at time of moult may have partially accounted for the increased areas of yellow, and in such case probably it will largely revert back again at next moult, on the other hand, Amazon Parrots (yours is a Blue-front) mature slowly, and it is probably now only coming into full adult plumage. They are very variable as to extent of colour areas, and also the disposition of them, and I have seen many Blue-fronts with more yellow in their plumage than you describe. Bathe or spray the nostrils with diluted glyco-thymoline daily till relief is given. The Amazon is a hardy species, but must not be subjected to draught.

Books, etc., on Parrots and Parrakeets (E. Godry).—Part II. (6s. 6d.) of the book just sent you will cover the ground as much as any popular work does. There is also Seth Smith's Parrakeets (40s.), with coloured plates, another good one, and there are the late Dr. Carl Russ's works in German. Leadbeatter's Cockatoos, and many Parrots, Parrakeets, Lorikeets, and Lories have been bred in this country, the records of which are mostly to be found in the Fancy and Avicultural Press.

Grey Parrot with Sore (F.C.M.).—You must continue the treatment advised in our previous reply in every particular, but, without altering the dietary advised. At such periods it will be well to supply as much ripe fruit and green food as it will eat. I should give the Dinneford's Magnesia as often as possible (say every third or fourth day) without continually scouring the bird. At other times it would be well to put chemical food in the drinking water. The trouble is in the bird's system, and there will probably be further recurrences before the trouble is finally got rid of, but the length of period between the attacks should increase and the trouble finally cease. Keep the bird under constant surveillance, and treat the sores directly they appear; do not wait for them to partially develop. I certainly think the bird will be eventually cured.

Breeding in Aviary (Old Drury).—Yes, most certainly there should be breeding results, providing you do not put in the too aggressive British species (such as Greenfinch, Bramblefinch, Yellow Bunting and Chaffinch). You could keep with Bullfinches, Goldfinches, Twites, Linnets, Redpolls and Siskins (only one pair of each) the following, which are all probable breeders, but it seldom follows that all breed in any one year: Ribbon and Zebra Finches, Grey and Green Singing Finches, Bronze and Magpie Mannikins, Common and Green Avadavats, Gold-breasted and St. Helena Waxbills, Rufous and Long-tailed Grass Finches. You must not include more than 15 pair if you hope to breed. Put a couple of common laurel bushes among the privet, they make good cover for wet weather.

What Bird, etc. (Brutus).—Your bird, most probably not yet in full adult plumage, is an Alexandrine Parrakeet, some individuals of which make really talented talkers, but they take much more teaching than a Grey Parrot. In good feather and health about 25s., and then upwards, according to talking capacity. Exhibit it in an ordinary parrot cage. Diet: Seed mixture: One quart each canary and white millet, one pint white oats, half pint each hemp, maize, paddy rice and sunflower seeds, one gill each crushed cuttle and grit (not sand); well mix and keep a supply in the cage. Also supply ripe fruit, nuts, plain biscuit, green food, and keep a piece of cuttlebone hanging in the cage, also water for drinking and bathing. Do not give tea, coffee or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever.

Ribbon Finches (H. C. B.).—I expect your birds were newly imported specimens and the cock never recovered from the hardships of importation. No, do not get another pair, get a cock only. The cock has a ruby collar, which is entirely lacking on the hen. Canary, white and spray millet will suffice for them, but they should have green food (at their season fresh lettuce or apple if they'll eat it), cuttlebone, grit and water. A few ants' eggs given dry, as bought, will be a help, and most Ribbon Finches are very greedy after them. "Foreign Birds for Beginners, 1s. 1½d. post free, from our Manager would help you.

Paradise Whydah (Whydah).—The Whydahs only wear their long caudal plumes during the breeding season, when these are shed, only feathers as in the hen's tails are reproduced till the next breeding season comes round. In June or July next the long tail plumes will be reproduced. Get a bottle of Dinneford's Magnesia, take one teaspoonful of this, add it to two tablespoonfuls of water, and give this in lieu of the drinking water for one day, and after a week's interval repeat the dose. These birds do well on canary, white and spray millet seed, green food, grit, cuttlebone, and a couple of mealworms per diem. Also try it with a few dry ants' eggs, given as purchased.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

Wire-work of Aviary (No Nom-de-Plume).—If you are using galvanised wire, nothing need be done to protect it against the weather; if ordinary wire, use a good quality, quick-drying Brunswick black—it is not expensive.

An Aviary (F. A. Mascall). Many thanks; will utilise this contribution in our next issue.

Cuttings (G. Grant, B. Norris, G.E.T., and others).—We are exceedingly obliged to you for the newspaper cuttings sent us.

Identity of Bird (L. Morris).—We have sent your letter to our foreign bird expert, Mr. Page; look in his columns next week for an answer.

Pity the Poor Show Secretaries!

Sir,—Allow me to thank Mr. Dazeley for admitting that he is to blame for not receiving a schedule from me. The latter part of his letter is uot worth troubling about. I think he has a bad case as to what in his opinion causes short entries. He seems to have altogether departed from the subject of his first letter.

W. STEVENS.

Secretary, Derby C.B.S.

Boldon Colliery C.B.S. Suggests a Federated Show.

Sir,—The members of the Boldon Colliery C.B.S. are willing to combine with the following societies to have a federated show: Hetton-le-Hole, Houghton-le-Spring, Dubmire Workmen's Club C.B.S., Sheriffhill, and South Shields. If these societies are agreeable will the secretaries kindly correspond with me, and I will try to arrange time and place for a meeting to draw up the conditions of the show.

The Imitative Powers of a Green Bulbul.

Sir,—I am a constant reader of CAGE BIRDS, and was particularly pleased with a portrait published in your columns of a Green Bulbul that might pass for a picture of the one I possess myself. With utmost interest I read the description of this lovely, delightful little fellow in your columns, but I was grieved to see no mention of one of his greatest attractions, viz., his imitative powers, which are simply marvellous. I cannot tell his note from that of the Canary or any other bird he fancies to copy! I have a dear old friend, a Blossom-headed Parrakeet ("Plumy" by name); he has been backwards and forwards to India with me on a tiny chain attached to my dress. I have owned him some fourteen years, and his intelligence is wonderful. But it was not of him I was going to write, though this would fill a column, but of the extraordinary way in which "Greenie," the Bulbul, imitates the Parrakeet's notes. The notes are manifold—one the softest little joyful song (all his own invention, for I have other Blossomheads, and they only have their usual notes) that might be likened to the same feelings expressed by a kitten's purr. This cheerful gleesong "Greenie" imitates to such a degree that I cannot tell it myself from "Plumy's."

(Mrs.) A. MCLAREN MORRISON.

A Plea for Novice Classes.

Sir,—It is only waste of time and space for Mr Downing to fight for novices in British classes, as it seems that 90 per cent. of them are "last ditchers." What of the poor show managers and secretaries, who do all the work for "honour," not filthy lucre? If the novices want these classes, why don't they show a fighting front and demand them. It is quite evident "Whiskers" doesn't know Mr. Downing as well as he professes; or has he never handled one of Mr. Downing's specials yet? May his whiskers tickle his gape so that he will have to open his mouth at next question night; then wo shall all have an enjoyable meeting. I am waiting a reply from Mr. A. Wellings re my query, how to obtain colour other than by colour feeding. As the breeding season will soon be here, he would assist not only myself, but the rest of the Fancy.

A. E. LONG.

Sir,—I was very much amused to read Mr. Booth's eulogy of Friend Downing's powerful plea for those pampered pets, the novices. Mr. Booth is rather unfortunate in his illustration. The show in question was something of a fiasco. I understand that the late secretary left in the midst of the arrangements, and that the present secretary was somewhat in a fog as regards what had and what had not been done in the matter. I think I shall be safe in blaming this for the poor show of champion birds. A better illustration of the difference between open and novice entries would have been the Manchester All-England Show at Belle Vue. There most of the champion classes filled very well, and the birds were certainly better worth looking at than the birds in the novice classes. There seems to be an idea amongst a certain section of novices that the champion exhibitors spend most of their time going about to shows, and visiting the rooms of novices picking up their best birds, for an old song and winning with them in the open. I may say that I know two or three champion exhibitors who occasionally breed a bird fit to show and win in the open classes. I also know that they sometimes sell them to the novice, and they (the birds) never win again. Why? Echo answers "Why?" Now, you novices, get up on your hind legs and start caling. Do not expect to be spoon fed all your lives. Remember that the champions have had to go through just what you are going through now. Why should you want to deny them the fruits of their labour? The novice has a better chance to-day than ever he had before. Does he want to buy a good bird? There are plenty to sell. Would he rather breed them? There is the Fancy Press, and plenty of books to guide his feet over the quagmires that the champions had to wallow through as best they could. There are not so many "secrets" in the Fancy now as there were twenty years since. Thanks to CAGE BIRDS, you can now breed high-class birds with more certainty than you could even ten years since. Novices should keep their mind's eye fixed on the ultimate goal of every good fancier, namely, championship honours. If you novices expect to make your fortunes by showing birds in novice classes, I am afraid you will be disappointed. Further, we cannot all get to the top of the tree; besides, we could not all stick there if we got there.

WHISKERS.

Sir,—In reply to "Whiskers," I think he would have looked more of a sport and more of a man if he had written his letter over his own name. Probably he was ashamed of the fruits of his handiwork. I must say it looks bad to throw stones and hide behind a wall. I should just like to ask him if he will be good enough to tell me when Mr. Downing did show his British among the novices? As regards his other question, I think the uovices of Ardwick C.B.S. will answer this for him if he will undisguise and be bold enough to get up and ask the question at the next meeting. This "pet fad" was passed without a single dissentient. His other question, about allowing a member to show Yorkshires in the open without it affecting his standing in the Norwich, is silly, and needs no answer.

R. BOOTH.

Sir,—I will try to answer the questions "Whiskers" asks me, if he will first let us know who is in concealment behind those whiskers. Surely if he numbers me among his friends, I am entitled to know his name? Then we can begin to discuss things in a friendly spirit. Noms de plume are useful to anyone writing to CAGE BIRDS experts for advice, but in controversial matters I think everyone ought to use their own name if they are anxious for their opinion to have any weight. Under a nom de plume their word carries about as much weight as would the following letter:—"We have a door-mat and a boot which are continually meeting each other. If we pair them up, are they likely to breed us a pair of carpet slippers with swansdown linings?" No offence meant, of course.

W. DOWNING.

A Curious Nest of String.

Sir,—I am sorry I cannot tell you correctly the name of the bird which built this curious nest. It was composed chiefly of string, it being woven in and through and fastened to the branch as if by an expert hand. It was slightly smaller than a Chaffinch's nest, and more open at the top, with a mixture of hay and down (apparently off thistle or dandelion). Seeing that it was found in a damson tree, probably it was built by a Goldfinch with a highly developed bump for architectural security. I thought it to be something out of the ordinary way of nest-building, so of interest to the readers of "C.B." It is lined with hair. The branch was cut off and set up for the purposes of the photograph, which was taken by a friend of mine.

Making Sockets for Bird-catching with Lime.

Sir,—In an issue of recent date, "Linnet" asked for information on making the above. I have been waiting for a handier pen than mine to reply, but as no reply comes I will try to oblige. Sockets for holding limed twigs are made of willow, and are about ¾in. diameter and 2½in. long. They should be bored about an inch down one end with a ¼in. bit or a small gimlet, and afterwards cleaned in the hole with a piece of hot iron about 3-16in. round. The bottom end is split up after the manner of a clothes-peg, and fine wire is wrapped round about twice in the centre of the socket to prevent it splitting all its length. It is important that the limed twig should fit loosely in the socket, so that when the bird drops the twig sticks to it and leaves the socket intact on the hedge. Also note that the twig should stand at a slight angle and not perpendicularly. This is my method of making sockets, and I send a rough sketch, which I hope will be of some service to "Linnet." I also take this opportunity of thanking such writers as "Netter" and "Catcher" and many others for the good advice contained in their useful letters.

A: Hole bored at end to take the limed twig.
B: The binding wire.

To Avoid Disturbing Sitting Hens.

A Novel Method of Fixing Cage-Bottoms.

Sir,—The majority of books written on Canary breeding greatly emphasise the fact that hens, particularly nervous hens, when sitting, must not be disturbed more than is absolutely essential. When removing eggs and cleaning cages, however, it is impossible to avoid disturbing the birds to a slight extent. Many effective devices have been brought forward for removing eggs with the minimum of disturbance, such as the swing door introduced by Mr. Rudd, of Norwich; but I have never yet seen advocated by anyone else an idea of my own for facilitating the cleaning of cage bottoms, during the breeding season in particular. When the sand tray has been withdrawn there is always found a collection of sand, husks, etc., in the space between the turned-up edge of the tray and the sides of the cage. To remove this it is necessary to either place your hand in the door and remove by a stiff brush or insert a scraper through the tray opening. To avoid doing this I hinge my cage bottoms as seen in sketch given of section. A is a hinge placed about one inch from each end of the bottom at the back. B is a hook and eye to correspond to each hinge. When the tray has been withdrawn I unfasten the hook from the eye and gently lower the front portion of the cage bottom on its hinges at B. The majority of the husks, etc., will readily slide off and can be far more easily removed than by inserting a hand in the cage. This construction is, of course, only possible when cages are hung with their backs to a wall. If a rack is used, the bottom could be constructed as sketch of plan of bottom, with cage resting on its back. The cross hatched portion could be nailed on and could rest on the horizontal members of the rack. To the open space remaining could be hinged a bottom as before described, which could be lowered between the horizontal struts of the rack. To those who make their own cages the facility in cleaning is well worth the additional labour in construction.

Early Hybrid Breeding.

An Extraordinary Instance.

Sir,—It may be of interest to your many readers to know that I have a hen Bullie which is at present hatching her first clutch of four eggs. I received her along with a few more at the beginning of the catching season, and I selected her as a breeder, and mated her off with a cock Greenie, the result being as stated above. The eggs are due to hatch out on Jan. 11. But I observe that there is only one fertile egg in the lot. However, we will wait and see the result.

A Social and Prize Distribution for Newcastle and District.

Sir,—Some time back the Northern Specialist Clubs decided to hold an annual social and tea, at which the presentation of the prizes of the various clubs could take place. Some little while ago a meeting of these deputed by the different clubs to make the necessary arrangements was held. It was decided that we have a substantial tea. The prices to be 1s 6d. single and 2s. 6d. double ticket, in some suitable hall in Newcastle. It fell to my lot to make the final arrangements, so I have fixed up for it to be held on March 27 (Wednesday) at Crosby's Cafe, 51, Northumberland Street, Newcastle, tea to be on the tables at 7 p.m. Tickets can be had from the secretaries of the various specialist clubs. Some good artistes having promised their services, we anticipate an enjoyable evening. I hope there will be a good muster to show how we appreciate their services. As this is not confined to members of specialist clubs only, I hope the Fancy will avail themselves of the opportunity.

A Visit to Some Continental Zoo's.

Where English Cities Lag Behind.

Sir,—At the opening of the recent Bradford National Show one of the prominent officials of the committee gave a little hint to the City fathers present concerning the provision (or, I ought to say, non-provision) of aviaries in the public parks, Bradford being a long way behind some other towns in this respect. The country as a whole, in fact, is far behind the Continent for things of this description, that tend to educate the rising generatiou. During the last summer I had the pleasure of visiting several Continental towns, and was struck by the number of Zoological Gardens to be found; if they cannot have one on a large scale, they have at least a large aviary or a deer park. The principal and most interesting place I saw was the great affair of Messrs. Hagenbecks, at Stillington, near Hamburg, whose travelling circus is even well-known here in England, having visited Halifax (for one place) some years ago. The eight hours I had to spare were not anywhere near sufficient to even glance round—eight days would have been much better, so great are its dimensions and so great is its interest. To see the lions in the open air, without any iron bars between them and you, is a little bit startling at first. But there is no danger, the narrow ditch of water between shelving rocks is quite enough to keep them from tearing you to pieces; whilst at the back the rocks rise to a great height and are unclimbable. It is very like seeing them in their native fastnesses. Any amount of other animals were there, but they are out of the latitude of this paper. Birds are to be found in very large numbers, from the tiniest Humming Birds to the Eagles, the latter being perched in many cases on the high summits of rocks above the homes of the lions and other animals, giving a wild and grand appearance to the scene. In the aviaries the birds were far too numerous to mention—splendid specimens, of all sorts of curious shapes and sizes. In the grounds, bordering a lake, are plaster models of the largest prehistoric animals and birds and insects, really marvellous to look upon. In Hamburg, too, they have a Zoological Garden belonging to the City, and it is of very great interest, supplied with good aviaries containing rare and expensive birds. Were it over here it would be considered the finest in the kingdom. Then there is a good botanical garden that would prove very interesting to bird fanciers here, as so many seeds and plants useful for the keeping of birds are in evidence. But of special interest is the museum of natural history. Here some British bird fanciers could spend a full week; there are thousands upon thousands of stuffed specimens from all parts of the world. And the eggs—what a number, case after case, row after row, all indexed and named. To return to Hagenbecks, we must not forget to mention the Ostrich farm, where you can see these birds right away from the incubator to the fully adult specimens. At the time of my visit, one was nearly out of the shell, and I watched this bird until it succeeded in freeing itself. What a pickle it looked to be in! Others were in various stages of growth. The feathers could also be seen, just as they had been taken away from the bird, and others dyed and got up ready for sale and use in ladies' hats. The Zoo at Cologne I found to be another fine place. I was very much struck with the large Vulture and Eagle aviary, with imitatiou mountains and cascades of water, very realistic. During my visit I saw, of course, a few bird shops, and could not forego a call, though unfortunately I did not get a peep into a breeder's room, but hope to do so at some future time.

"STRAIGHT 'UN."

A Cup Competition at Edinburgh Open Show.

Sir,—With reference to "Scotch Fancier's" letter in your issue of Dec. 30, it is evident that great dissatisfaction exists with one of the cup winners in December. Might I ask a query? Suppose "A" had eggs from a pair of birds which he handed to "B" (another fancier) to hatch, and "B" hands over the young when hatched to "C" (another fancier) to rear—according to the cup rule, was it "A," "B," or "C" who bred the birds? Previous winners of the coveted honour have always produced the eggs and hatched, reared, and moulted the birds, a tradition I should like to have seen upheld, as a fancier who cannot rear his own birds does not deserve a cup honour for having bred them.

Fishing for Gulls.

A Youthful Occupation Which Should Be Sternly Discouraged.

Sir,—The following incident may be interesting to some readers of CAGE BIRDS. At 11 a.m. on New Year's Day we were steaming past Start Point Lighthouse, bound from Rotterdam to Liverpool, when I saw a Gull that was flying across the ship suddenly arrested by fouling the forestay and hanging by the neck. I sent a sailor up to get it adrift and bring it to me. I found it had a fish hook right through its neck, to which were attached about four feet of twine and a small piece of wood where the twine had broken off. To get the hook out without further pain to the bird I cut it clean off at the shank with a pair of wire cutters, and drew the hook part out. We then let the bird go, and it flew away quite unconcerned. I expect that a boy on some sailing vessel had been "fishing" for Gulls flying about the stern for food, and the bird had been caught by the neck and the line had smashed. When I was a boy serving my time on a sailing ship, we used to catch Albatrosses off Cape Horn, but we used a strong sail hook with a piece of pork fat lashed to it, and a very strong line.

T. F. SMITH.

To Banish Mice from Bird-rooms.

Sir,—I noticed a correspondent asking how to get rid of mice in the bird room, and I send the following, which I cut out of the Dundee "Weekly News":—"Mice have, as a rule, a rooted aversion to any strong scent foreign to themselves, and will consequcutly avoid it. Essence of peppermint sprinkled in their holes, or chloride of lime, or a little coal tar, generally have the effect of making them seek pastures new. The objectionable point is that the residents of the house are annoyed by the aroma, so that the cure cuts both ways. To avoid this, here is a plan which is certain to succeed. When you have a raid of mice in a place, where you cannot introduce a cat, where strong scents are harmful, and poison is out of the question, set a trap and catch one alive. This mouse liberally spray with eau-de-Cologne and then liberate him. It will act like a charm, and the mice will take a 'moonlight' flitting. The aversion of mice to this perfume is shared by their common enemy, the cat. If your back garden is the centre of a 'gathering of the clans,' don't hurl stones at them; cultivate their acquaintance until you can get a hold of them. Give a dose of eau-de-Cologne with a spray, and they will, after that, shun your garden."

Birds and the Bicycle.

A Charming Design for a Cyclists' Parade.

(See photograph on page 19).

Sir,—My cycle was decorated as a bird aviary. It was very good, and I won first prize out of thirteen entries. I had many kinds of birds on the outside of it—Thrushes, Blackbirds, Goldfinches, Canaries, etc., several big winners of mine, which had died and which I had had stuffed, viz., Bullfinches, Redpolls, Siskins, Hawfinches, and Chaffinches; and in front was Polly with a label on her: "Hallo, pretty Polly." At the back was an aviary of live foreign birds, twenty different kinds, and, of course, my Norwich under that (which the picture of your paper has covered up).—four Norwich in each cage, one each side of the machiue. A stuffed Sparrow Hawk is sitting each side wanting the birds to settle in order to do to them what he would do to the Sparrows if he were alive and free; this took the people's eye very much indeed. The machine was done with grass and moss, which looked very well. The wheels were doue with grass. The flowers were red and pink rose climbers or ramblers, as some call them. The judge said it was a new idea, and was glad to see I advertised a good paper and a good club. So evidently he liked it very much indeed. He is the president of our club, so that went a long way.

A Cure for Colds and Asthma.

Sir,—Replying to C. K. E.'s letter in CAGE BIRDS, I advise him to try the following:—1oz. oxymel of squills, 1oz. glycerine, 1oz. ipecacuanha wine. Take one teaspoonful of the above and add it to 2oz. of drinking water, and I think he will find this what he requires. If C. K. E. takes my advice, he will spend sixpence and buy a copy of CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL—from which the above is taken—and he will, like me, "thank his lucky stars" that we can purchase such a volume of information for sixpence. I can assure him it has been the means of saving for me some very dear favourites. Just hang a copy up in the bird room and—there you are!

PERCY JOHN JAMISON.

Sir,—I notice a brother fancier making an appeal for the above cure. I have pleasure in forwarding him the following recipe, which calls for only the small outlay of 6½d., and will make a bottle large enough to cure his birds and his brother fanciers' as well. Take 1lb. of best golden syrup and dissolve iu one pint of boiling water. When this is cold add the following four drugs, one pennyworth of each: Laudanum, paregoric, peppermint, and aniseed. The best way, I have found out, to use this is to mix it with a little egg food (or a teaspoonful of Spratt's or Hyde's or other good Canary food which you may have by you); damp the food with the mixture instead of using water, and you will find the birds take it freely.

LOVER OF FEATHERED PETS.

Sir,—In answer to "C. K. E.," asking for a remedy for colds and asthma, for colds let him go to a chemist and get the following:—2d. of paregoric, 2d. sweet spirits of nitre, 2d. of glycerine. Let him also get a little of the best Scotch whiskey. He must mix these four together in equal parts. Give in very severe cases five drops in the drinking glass, using water that has been boiled. He must be sure to have his bird covered up with a fine muslin cloth. Give from two to five drops every other day for a week. He will then find that all the cold has left the bird. I have used this for the last ten years, and it has never failed me. Aconite pilules are very good but dangerous if people do not know how to use them. For asthma, if "C. K. E." cares to write me, I will give him a recipe that has never failed me yet. I would like him to try it and then let the readers of CAGE BIRDS know, as I would like other people to test it before it appears in print. I trust that these few words on curing a cold will save many of our pets from an untimely end. I may in the near future write a few lines on constipation, inflammation, consumption, and diarrhœa. (Owing to my eyes being affected through an accident, I am unable to read or write much at present). W. LLOYD.

4, Pott Street, Pendlebury, Manchester.

[We are sure our readers will be very pleased to hear further from Mr. Lloyd, whom we wish a speedy recovery from the eye trouble.—Editor.]

Sir,—The following will, I feel sure, give C. K. E.'s birds relief: Syrup of squills, tincture of lobelia, syrup of tolu, a pennyworth of each; shake up well; stir 12 drops in the drinking water every day.

H. MATTHEW.

Do Fanciers Feed Goldfinches Correctly?

Sir,—I would like to give to all lovers of this particular species, and readers generally, the results of an experiment I recently tried with success. Having several Goldfinches on hand, I meated two off (separately), and fed them on the usual seed diet, viz. canary, 1 part; niger, ½ part; teazle, ½ part; linseed, ¼ part; rape, ¼ part; hemp seed, crushed, occasionally. I gradually reduced the mixture until I had got to white seed only, which took me seven weeks to accomplish. Having attained this end, I kept them on this diet for over thirteen months, and also moulted them on same without any additional tit-bits, and I must say that they looked the picture of health, their plumage being as tight as wax. I may add that I used no flight whatever, as a matter of fact, they were never removed from their respective cages during the whole time, and after keeping them for the time as stated I disposed of them both for a good price, and can vouch for the accuracy of the statement that both birds are living to-day, being fed on white seed only. So I would strongly advise Mr. C. E. A. Gatehill and other readers to give this method a fair trial, as I feel confident their labours will not be in vain, but success will attend them. Now the subject has been opened I would like to see others give their opinions of the methods adopted, and tell of their results in your valuable paper for the benefit of fanciers generally. I am strongly of the opinion that once Goldfinches are got on to good white seed, they will thrive better and live much longer. I have hundreds of fresh-caught Greypates and Goldfinches pass through my hands in the course of a season, and it is very rarely I lose one.

SAM HOWARTH.

An Ingenious Fitting for a Bird Spray.

Sir,—Here is an idea for a spray which I have found very useful, as the rubber balls often used crack when dry, and do not last very long. The end of a bicycle pump connection, "A," is soldered on to a metal spray. This is then connected by a pump connection to a bicycle pump. If only a medium-sized bottle is used, it is quite easy to hold it in the hand together with the pump. This, I find, makes an effectual spray.

A New Society for Runcorn and District.

Sir,—With the object of forming a new cage bird society, a meeting was held in the Primitive Methodist Schoolroom, Runcorn, on Jan. 3, there being a good attendance, including several prominent breeders of the district. Those present showed great enthusiasm, and after a lengthy discussion it was decided to form a new society, which is to be styled "The Runcorn Bird Breeders' Association." It is open to all England. Twenty-two members have been enrolled, and a great increase of membership is expected at the next meeting, to be held on Jan. 17. A table show for breeding pairs at which Mr. Barker has kindly consented to judge, will be held in February. In March a lecture will he given on the subject, "Pairs for Breeding," to be followed by a discussion. The following officers were elected:—Chairman, Mr. Jos. W. Guy; vice-chairman, Mr. J. Sutton; treasurer, Mr. C. Boote; hon. secretary, Mr. John Fearnett, 51, Victoria Road, Runcorn, Cheshire.

Club Shows in Belfast.

Sir,—Under the above heading in last week's issue, and over the signature "Progress," was a suggestion that I certainly would support. I would like to know what has become of the Norwich Plainhead Club of Ireland; they seem to be out of existence now altogether. Would it not be to their advantage also to amalgamate with the B.N.C. and Y.C.C.? "Progress," I quite agree with what you suggest, only I cannot fall in with your remarks re the harmony among fanciers in Belfast, as the Norwich fanciers are at present at logger-heads re the Norwich hen that won the medal at a certain show, as it is alleged the hen that won it was not eligible. The Yorkshire fanciers are also on bad terms re the Yorkshire cock that won the cup, as was quite evident on the day of the show.

"BELFASTMAN."

A Practical Yet Inexpensive Birdroom.

Sir,—Having no room in our present house in which to keep my Yorkshire Canaries, I decided to build an aviary for them, and the enclosed photos show the finished article. The building is constructed in four sections, bolted together at the corners. The flooring boards rest on the stout bottom woodwork, and the roof is screwed into position after the sides are bolted together First of all I built a framework of wood 2in. by 2in. the shape required; this is covered with ⅛in. tongued and grooved match boarding outside and ⅛in. ditto inside; for the floor I used 1in. flooring boards resting from side to side on the bottom rail of the framework; but if the building does not rest flat on the ground it is better to have wood 4in. by 3in. along the bottom of the frame work to make the building stiff. A piece of 4in. by 3in. down the middle of the house will also stiffen the floor. I made a framework for the roof, and when this was screwed into position I covered the inside with ⅛in. boards, making a door in the wood which can be opened for air. The size of this house is 8ft. by 6ft. inside, 6ft high at back, and 8ft. high in front; this gives better top light and more head room inside than a house built the other way. The window, as will be seen, is hinged on the top and opens out with long hooks and eyes; it gives plenty of air without any draught; also if rain comes it cannot beat into the room. Two shelves to hold the cages are fitted along the back, and a shelf is put along the top of the window for pots and pans, etc., while a folding table is erected in front of the window to work on. A wire netting frame is fitted into the window inside, so that if a bird gets out of the cage it cannot get out of the room. I have a lot of framed CAGE BIRDS plates hung on the walls inside, which gives a good finish to the whole building.

Prizes of 1s. and two of 6d. each will be given weekly for the best three anecdotes about birds written on postcards. Competitors must be under sixteen years of age, and state whence stories are taken. Two stars indicate the Winning Contribution, one star the runners-up.

*One for Poll.

An old lady once owned a Parrot, which was very talkative. When the clergyman called (which was every Saturday), Poll was covered up and left to his own thoughts. One Wednesday, however, the minister paid an unexpected visit, and before Poll could be covered up the bird exclaimed: "It's a gey short week, ain't it, cockie?" (From "Bon-Accord.")—David Duguid, 121, Leslie Terrace, Aberdeen.

*A Crystal Palace Story.

In the 'sixties or early 'seventies an exhibition of Parrots was held in the Crystal Palace, one feature of which was an award offered for the bird which should make the most spontaneous and original remark. Every exhibit was covered with a dark cloth until the judge was ready to decide the point of merit. Upon all the covers being removed simultaneously, one Parrot immediately exclaimed: "Oh, my! what a lot of Parrots!" That Parrot succeeded not only in greatly amusing the onlookers, but also in easily securing the coveted prize.—Willie Allen, 26, Mount Street, Cleckheaton (age 12).

A Singing Sparrow.

I should like to tell you of our singing Sparrow, "Billy." We found him lying on a roadside newly fledged, and took him into the house where we were spending our summer holidays. I fed him on bread and milk, and soon he took seed and green stuff. The Sparrow was allowed his liberty, but he would not go away. Very soon he began to whistle quite nicely, even through his first moult. I think it was partly owing to his being brought up with a Linnet which we had that taught him to whistle. The Sparrow is greatly attached to the Linnet, whose song he has partly learnt. He takes both sand and water baths, and feeds on ordinary stock mixture, with sometimes a little sunflower seed, and is particularly fond of hemp. He is six months old.—Alex. Kirkland (age 15), 8, Saudyford Place, Glasgow.

To Prevent Nest-pulling.

Sent by John H. Harrison, 17, Regent Street, Hebden Bridge.

I send you an idea for preventing hens from pulling pads from their nests. Wrap a piece of wire round a 2lb. jam jar and when you have made it round leave an opening about 1½in. wide. It will bury itself in the pad when you put it in the nest pot or tin.—J. H. Harrison.

In the Courts.

Travelling Gipsy Fined.

At Honiton Petty Sessions on Jan. 3 Joe Orchard, travelling gipsy, pleaded not guilty to a breach of the Wild Birds' Protection Order, 1906. Inspector Lale, R.S.P.C.A., prosecuted, and said the offence was committed in the parish of Farway. The trapping of Goldfinches had become very prevalent among gipsies of late, and as this was a bird protected in Devon throughout the whole of the year the present proceedings were taken.

P.C. Winsor stated that there were some gipsies encamped near Blannicombe Lane. Seeing a lot of cages containing Goldfinches around the caravan and furze, witness kept observation. He also noticed some live birds which were braced, and which were used as a decoy, while on a twig was some bird-lime. Defendant and a companion, seeing they were observed, started to pick up the cages, but witness succeeded in getting hold of two store cages, each of which contained a number of Goldfinches.—P.C. Isaac also gave evidence and a fine of 5s. and costs was imposed.—"Devon and Exeter Gazette."

Dealer Fined for Cruelty.

Charles Archer, bird dealer, of Drury Hill, was charged in the Nottingham Summons Court on Jan. 3 with cruelty to two Larks.

On December 20, Inspector Geddie, of the R.S.P.C.A., visited Drury Hill, and in defendant's window saw a cage containing two Larks There was no food, but a small tin of water was placed in such a position that it was impossible for the birds to get at it. He went again the following morning, this time with a police officer, and when he held out some canary seed in the palm of his hand, the Larks fought with each other as to which should have it. Shortly afterwards the defendant came in, and on being asked when he had last fed the birds, said he had done so the previous morning, but eventually he said he was not sure whether he had fed them at all.—A fine of 5s was imposed.

"Indian Jewels" and "Goldfinch Hybrids."

"Indian Jewels."

Readers will agree we think that Mr. Goodchild's contribution to this Birthday issue, "Indian Jewels," is one of the most beautiful plates ever produced by his accomplished brush. The lovely birds chosen as his subjects have evidently acted as an inspiration.

The SHORT-BILLED MINIVET (Pericrocotus brevirostris) is a dainty, fascinating handsome bird. It seems strange, from its appearance, that it should be a member of the Shrike family, yet such is the case, though its prey consists solely of insects. This species is not at all an easy one to keep in confinement, and we do not remember to have seen one upon the show bench, even in these days of beautiful rarities. A number, however, have been brought over to England, Mr. Brook, of Hoddam Castle (a great aviculturist, and a patron of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE) receiving several examples during the past summer. Its natural haunts are the slopes of the Himalayan mountains, and the adjacent plains. According to Mr. Douglas Dewar, Minivets are regular "Wandering Jews," seldom remaining for many hours in any one locality, except during the breeding season.

The COPPERSMITH BARBET (Xantholaema haematocephala is met with practically all over India, and the note of this bird, which is said to resemble the striking of a hammer upon metail, is at times persistently uttered. Specimens have been exhibited at our shows, a very fine one appearing at the last L.C.B.A. exhibition, staged by Mr. Townsend. The Coppersmith feeds upon "slops" (bread and milk being a favourite dish), fruit, etc., and is not a very cleanly inhabitant of a cage. Its curious shape and remarkable colonration, however, make it a very desirable bird to own.

The HIMALAYAN GOLDFINCH (Carduelis caniceps) is very like our own British Finch, but lighter (more grey) in colonr, and lacking entirely the black band on head and neck. It is not often seen on the English market, and when imported has been found somewhat difficult to keep in heaith for any length of time, which is curions, seeing that its native habitat is the cool heights of the Himalayas. It would be an interesting bird, surely, to pair with a hen Canary.

The AMETHYST-RUMPED SUNBIRD (Arachnechthra zeylonica) is a radiant little creature, marvellously beautiful in garb, its brilliant colonrs being enhanced by the wonderful metallic sheen of the plumage. As is only to be expected, this species is a very difficult subject for aviculturists, feeding largely upon the nectar of flowers and tiny insects. Yet a fair number of them reached our shores safely last summer, and several were exhibited in first-rate condition at certain of our shows, notably Mr. Ezra's little gem seen at the Horticultural Hall. Mr. Frank Finn brought a specimen to England in 1900, the first, we believe, to land here alive.

The WHITE-CAPPED REDSTART (Chimarrhornis leucocephala) is another very handsome species, greatly resembling our own Chats (or our Robin) in size, shape and demeanonr. It is rare, so far as English aviculture is concerned, but is a very suitable bird for cage or aviary, particularly the latter. It quickly becomes steady, being of a more or less fearless nature. Its diet is the usnal mixture given to softbills, such as the Nightingale, with, of course, live insects as procurable, while a little suitable ripe fruit also seems relished now and again.

THE SHAMA (Cittocincla macrura) represents the absolute ideal in cage pets. Although it has no particular gorgeousness of plumage, yet in its coloration of glossy black and ruddy chestnut, and set off by the brilliant white of its tail coverts and edging of its tail feathers, and its graceful shape and sprightly carriage, it is a beautiful bird indeed. As for song, not any bird, foreign or British, fruit-eating, insectivorous, or seed eating, excels the Shama in delightful music. In a room filled with feathered songsters the Shama will sing any and all of their songs, and every song better than its rightful possessor. It is long-lived in captivity and its proper feeding does not entail any particular trouble, all that it needs being some generously mixed stock food, say a portion each of dried flies or silkworm pupæ, desiccated yolk of egg, and best ants' cocoons mixed with three portions of powdered biscuit. This will keep indefinitely, and sufficient for a day's supply may be mixed with boiled potato, chopped greenstuff, grated carrot or even plain water, enough only of the moistening material being used to make the whole of a "crumbly" consistency. Mealworms, smooth caterpillars, gentles, or any kind of live insects are of course a necessity, as with any other insectivorous bird, and it needs a large cage in which to show off its grace of shape and beauty of plumage.

It is not always that a Shama is purchasable in the ordinary way of trade. Sometimes for quite a long while they seem to be unobtainable at the bird-shops, and then suddenly they are imported in considerable numbers and may be bought at about thirty shillings each. The hens are for some reason very rarely sent to this country, and, consequently, are quite as expensive to buy as the male birds. Attempts, therefore, to breed these beautiful birds in captivity are not of frequent occurence, but the successful breeding of the species has been accomplished, Mr. Reginald Phillipps having effected this in his aviaries at South Kensington. In an aviary of mixed birds the Shama is not generally dangerous to the smaller occupants, although there are exceptions to this rule, but two cock Shamas may not be kept together any more than may two Robins.

THE GREATER HILL MYNAH (Eulabes intermedia) is a bird of which as a cage pet one can only write with somewhat mixed feelings. Intelligent in the extreme, capable of being trained into a more or less eloqnent talker and a most docile pet, possessing a plumage which, while it is generally termed black, is resplendent with a metallic sheen—purple, blue, green, all shades of these colours according to the light, yet when we have given it this much praise we have said all that may be urged in its favour. Its "song" has in it about as much music as that of an old gander, and as food it requires a considerable quantity of ripe fruit—bananas, pears, grapes etc., with mealworms by the dozen. It may be got partially on to an insectile diet, but fruit is a desideratum if the bird is to be kept at its best, and the cleaning out of the large cage in which it must be housed is a task which detracts very considerably from its merits as a household pet. Once a day cleaning is an absolute minimum. The bottom of the sand-drawer for such a bird should be of zinc; a wood bottom would soon smell offensively however often the cage be cleaned out. If due attention to scrupulous cleanliness be observed the Mynah is one of the most amusing birds that may be kept.

"Goldfinch Hybrids."

Mr. Norman's exquisite plate of Goldfinch Hybrids should make many converts to this fascinating branch of the cage-bird hobby, excelled by none for excitement and interest. The beauty of the birds themselves and the glow of satisfaction that ensues when one's efforts result in the production of an exceptionally good specimen must be experienced to be adequately appreciated.

Our plate depicts, as only the eye of an artist who is at the same time a fancier can hope to catch them, the characteristic colouring and markings of the parents blended and modified in the Hybrid.

The Goldfinch-Greenfinch is one of the easiest crosses for the beginner to attempt, the hen Greenie being usually very ready to nest in a cage, while the Hybrid itself is bold, hardy, and handsome, a first-class specimen, too, standing an excellent chance of winning on the show bench.

The Goldfinch-Siskin Hybrid is particularly pleasing in colouration, a first-rate songster, and full of quaint, perky mannerisms such as one would expect from this combination of parents. It is not one of the easiest of Hybrids to produce, but has been bred in fair numbers, the Siskin being the generally-chosen representative of the fair sex in the mating.

The Goldfinch-Linnet is another pretty Hybrid, a little sombre in plumage, perhaps, but relieved by beautiful "peeps" of the markings and bright colours of the Goldie. It is, too, an exceptionally nice songster, and not difficult to obtain. The hen Linnet is generally utilised, better coloured youngsters coming when the male parent is the Goldfinch.

The Goldfinch-Bullfinch is perhaps the first favourite amongst the whole tribe of Hybrids. Its chubby form and beautiful colouring captivate everyone. Further, it becomes exceptionally tame, and has most fascinating little ways with it. Neither is it very difficult to produce; but it is not as a rule very long-lived, though we must say that we know of a specimen alive at the present day which is close upon ten years old! This hybrid is mainly tried for with Siberian parents, in order to get size (so important an exhibition point) in the young. Several wonderfully fine, large examples have been produced in this way.

Full particulars as to the breeding of the above crosses will be found in Mr. Houlton's standard work "Cage Bird Hybrids," published by CAGE BIRDS, which should be in the possession of every hybrid enthusiast; Mr. Alexander's article in this issue, too, will be found replete with useful hints.

New Year Members—A Good Beginning

The year has indeed begun in promising fashion for CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, and the roll of membership has been strengthened following ladies and gentlemen. There is room for thousands more, and I hope that our number will be very materially increased before our first great gathering at the Crystal Palace.

This week I have the pleasure of announcing the following additions to our list of Hon. Secs.

Arbroath.—Mr. J. S. Napier, 52, St. Vigeans Rd.

Reduced Admission to Shows.

The date of Bathgate Show was incorrectly given last week. The show is to be held on the 20th inst. at the Corn Exchange, and the admission to League Members will be ninepence during judging and fourpence afterwards (two p.m. until close).

A Member's Suggestion.

I have received from a member of the LEAGUE a letter as below. Of course our LEAGUE Badges are in themselves certificates of membership, but certificates such as those suggested by Mr. Bibb would have the extra recommendation of being signed and dated, and I should like to hear what members generally think of the proposition. If anything approaching a general wish in favour of such certificates be expressed by members I shall be pleased to take steps to have the idea materialised.

Sir,—Just a few lines to wish CAGE BIRDS and the LEAGUE a prosperous New Year. Would it be possible for the LEAGUE to have printed a coloured certificate of membership, signed by you, for a small sum of 6d. or 1s.? Do you think this would help the LEAGUE? Trusting I am not trespassing on your business.

W. BIBB.

Our Scheme to Protect Humane Bird-dealers.

The reception given to our certificate scheme is most gratifying, a large number of bird-shop keepers having voluntarily written inviting a call at any time from a representative of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE. The following is a sample of the letters which are being received from our local hon. secs. I hope that every local hon. sec. to our LEAGUE will bring this matter to the notice of bird-dealers in his district, and get them to co-operate in our endeavours in defence of properly and humanely conducted bird-shops.

SIR,—In answer to your letter of Dec. 20th about visiting the bird-shop of the local dealer named, I went down unexpectedly on Dec. 27th, and again on Jan. 5th. I found a large number of birds of all kinds; all had plenty of cage room, with fine sand in all the cages, clean water, and plenty of seed. What pleased me more than anything else was the seed the dealer gives his birds. I might say he is a seed merchant as well as a dealer, and all birds get the best of seed as supplied by our leading importers. All the large cages and flights are done out with lime, which keeps them nice and white and clean, and healthy; in fact, everything was as it should be—in nice clean order. The dealer tells me any one is welcome at any time to go through his shop (faddists preferred).

Our Photographic Group.

Owing to the fact that there is not now any official firm of photographers at the Palace I have not been able to make definite arrangements in time for publication this week, but negotiations are in hand, and there is no doubt that this memorable photograph will be taken on the Saturday, and a proof will be shown as quickly as possible at the stall of CAGE BIRDS, where orders for copies may be booked. Further particulars next week.

Our First Great Meeting.

I am pleased to gather from a mass of correspondence received that members are looking forward pleasurably to meeting each other at our first reunion. This will be held at the Crystal Palace at 4.30, for 5.0, on the Saturday of the show (3rd Feb.). A tea will be provided, free of charge, and after tea a statement of the progress of the League, and of the work it has done and purposes doing will be submitted to the members present. After this, the views of everyone will be invited. Note will be taken of any suggestions that may be made, and everything that is at all practicable will be carried out. I hope that all London members will make a point of attending whether or not it was their intention to visit the show for itself. Country members will be making their usual visit to the great annual event, and the date and time of meeting have been especially arranged to meet their convenience, Saturday afternoon being the time when most of them would in the ordinary course be at the Palace. The matter is now in the hands of members, and the success of the meeting depends upon their attendance. Don't forget; tea will be provided at 4.30, free of all charge, and all members are particularly requested to make an effort to be present. Those who have delayed joining the LEAGUE should hurry up to be in time for the great meeting.

"An Admirable Movement."

A new member, Mrs. Parker, writes as follows:—

SIR,—Kindly enrol me as a member of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE. I have been a constant reader of your paper ever since I first came across it—about two or more years ago, I think, and I have found it very helpful and the coloured plates excellent. The plate entitled "A Group of Breeds." I consider most artistic, and have had it framed. It has been much admired. I bought two copies at the same time, and recommended it to others who also procured a copy, as much for the information it gave as for the beauty of the grouping. I think CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE an admirable movement, and much needed, and I hope you will be successful in gaining a great number of new members this year. I certainly wish that the cruel little hop cages could be heartily denounced and done away with. Apart from that, I have noticed a great improvement lately in the general care and management of birds in dealers' hands.

Hailsham. (Mrs.) M. J. PARKER.

BRIGHTON AND HOVE C.B.A.

Annual general meeting held January 3rd, headquarters, when a goodly number of members were present. The chairman, in reading the annual report, called attention to the record open show held in November, when entries exceeded 500, beating all past records. The balance-sheet was submitted and showed the club to be on a sound footing. Several new members were added to the roll, after which the officers and committee for the year were elected. An instructive season is expected, as dates have been booked in each month for a meeting, show, or lecture. The annual members' show is fixed for January 31st, at which Mr. W. R. Miles (Chichester) will judge. Messrs. Cadman Bros. have kindly presented a silver cup, for which there is sure to be strong competition.—Will H. Gibb, Hon. Sec.

The Song of the Roller Canary.

Translated by G. B. LECLAIR.

A contribution to "Kanaria" by W. Kluhs (Landberg).

In this remarkable article, a German band-master and Roller Canary devotee discusses the tours of his favourite bird, and reproduces them in musical notation.

The beautiful song of the Roller Canary is a genuine German achievement; it has been created by German tenacity and perseverance. Whilst other nations bred the Canary for colour and form, the German directed his attention solely to the ennoblement of its song. Our Roller song of the present day is absolutely an art production.

A generation ago the Gluck birds dominated everywhere, even in Andreasberg, the principal centre in those days of high-class Canary song. When, however, it became recognised that it was chiefly the Gluck tours which most easily deteriorated, an endeavour to eliminate these set in, and the pure roller song, as we know it now, came into being. The gluck tours were not supplanted by the "roller soug" because this latter was thought more beautiful, as that is a matter of taste, which must naturally differ, but for the sole reason that it was more difficult to breed pure gluck birds, for the majority of the progeny deteriorated in song. The custom to cultivate pure roller song was started in Andreasberg, and as in those days the leading establishments for the production of high-quality song were carried on there, the fate of the gluck song was sealed. In fact, no one who possessed even a particle of musical instinct could withstand the charm exerted by the song of pure Rollers.

Looking Backwards for Half-a-Century.

Brandner says in the second edition of his book "The Hartz Canary":—"Those who possess a good musical ear will soon understand how to judge the song of a 'hartzer.' On the other hand, however, those who feel bored by a Mozart overture or a Haydn symphony should cease to boast further of his knowledge of the Roller's song. Without the gift of a musical ear, a correct judgment is impossible—it cannot be acquired; at least only after experience of 20 to 30 years' standing."

My own recollections of the Canary's song extend back to my earliest childhood, for my father also bred singing Canaries, and from what he related to me I know that even as a child a good conception of song was peculiar to me. In my youth I was acquainted, it is true, only with the song of the so-called gluck birds, which I learned to know perfectly in all its modifications. The Roller's song, which at that time was called "Hartz Canary Song," I became familiar with later (1874). Fine songsters I have always had with me since the days of my childhood. They have remained my constant companions through all vicissitudes, and I have experienced all the changes of fashion in their song. During the 37 years in which I myself have been a fancier, I have specially bred Trute, Erntges, and now Seifert, songsters, and trained them vocally to valuable birds. For this reason, and in consequence of my scientific musical knowledge (as band-master) I consider myself competent to give the following descriptions of Roller song; may they afford to old fanciers and breeders fresh pleasure in their cherished songsters, and facilitate the acquisition of knowledge of the song by the novices in our hobby.

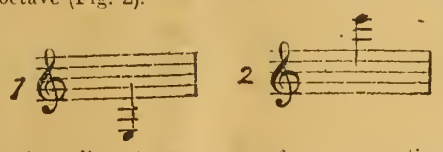
Recently a reader of "Kanaria" asked the following three questions:—

1. What are the limits of the various measures?
2. How many notes does a "measure" consist of?
3. What compass (in octaves) does the Canary's voice possess, and what are the upper and lower limits?

I give the following explanation:—The tours of the Canary's song are not bound to certain notes (intervals of the staff). I could only fix their limits from top to bottom (high and low). If, for instance, a hollow-roll drops in bends, it mostly takes place by degrees; that is, it temporarily rests on certain single notes before it bends further down. In music this is indicated by a pause ⌒ over the note concerned. The term "measure" is quite intelligible to me, but used in this connection it is confusing; actually we can only speak of high, medium and low notes, so it is more comprehensible if we say a tour drops three, four or five times.

"Measure," therefore, does not exist in the sense conveyed by the question. With regard to the octaves covered by the Canary's song I have succeeded in settling this question from valuable songsters of the Seifert strain, by careful measure of the high notes (according to concert pitch). There are exactly three octaves.

The deepest knorre (Fig. 1) lies on "e" of the lower octave, whilst the highest tours (bell and pipes) occur on "e" of the higher octave (Fig. 2).



According to my own former assertions (1887) on the Trute song, there were "three octaves and a trifle"; the extremes lay higher, indeed in the case of the knorre on "g" of the lower, and with the bell and pipes, on "a" of the higher octaves. Therefore the Roller's song of the Seifert strain has become on the highest note limit about a fourth lower, and in depth about a third, compared with the Trute song.

As early as the year 1887, when I gave a description of the Roller's song in the "Gefiederte Welt" doubt existed in my mind whether all the tours of the Canary's song which we describe as "rolls"—especially the water-roll—rightly bore this designation. After mature reflection, however, in which I took into consideration the fact that the description "rolls" had already become so general that it were difficult to introduce other nomenclature, I allowed the appellations hitherto adopted to remain.

We understand by the term "rolls," a rustling such as is caused by a ball set in motion. One cannot very well say water "rolls," but we say thunder "rolls" and waves "roll," When an unevenly-shaped ball is set in motion one perceives, besides the rolling noise, a simultaneous "jumping" sound, to which, as in the case of rolling waves, a water-gluck (gurgle) or even a water-roll and the koller, can reasonably be compared. Anyway, the joy we experience in our birds is obviously not dependent on the nomenclature of the tours of their song; therefore I desist from suggesting another name for the hollow-bell.

Strictly speaking there only exists one bell, with the text "li" or "il," and one "bell-roll" with the text "ir" or "ur" ("ri" or "rü"). In both these tours the vowel in the text ("i" and "ü") and the consonant "l" (in the bell) or "r" (in the bell-roll) are closely connected throughout the whole tour, and the comparison with a ringing noise is therefore pertinent. When the bell-roll appears deeper on the text "ür" or "rü," it is erroneously called hollow-roll by many, yet we know that there are actually bells of deep sound ("ür" or "rü"), and consequently the appellation "bell-roll" in the Canary's song is logically the correct one in this tour.

All really "hollow" trills have pure vowels for their text, which at most are preceded by the consonants "h," "b," or "d." If in the course of the tour, however, only pure vowels vibrate, then we invariably have the hollow-bell or the hollow-roll.

AN INDIAN METHOD OF FIGHTING WITH QUAILS.

ROBERT KEEPS HIS EYE ON 'EM!

Scene in the principal thoroughfare on the occasion of Bradford National Show. The constable, evidently unused to this kind of thing, was observed to make a note of the proceedings! The sketch was sent us by Mr. S. Dean.

A Yorkshireman on the Yorkshire Canary.

By F. GELDER (Little Horton).

The Secretary of the Bankfoot and Dist. C.B.S. advances some decided opinions and gives some useful hints.

Every fancier has his own opinion concerning the cages, but I prefer the single breeders. This kind is far and away the best during the breeding season, because, when a hen has reared her young you can move them into a clean cage, take the dirty one into the yard and there give it a good scouring, returning it to the birdroom in a nice, clean, sweet condition.

Here I might say that I would rather have the wood left bare, or else well enamelled, as the cages are then much easier washed out than when whitewashed. Besides, when cages are whitewashed it makes both work and dirt, for the process has to be gone through each time they are cleaned, if the cages are to be returned to the room in a nice-looking condition. Also, cages that are whitewashed are apt to be shirked; the dirt that is on them just gets covered over with new white wash. As regards the wire fronts, these should always be made loose (removable) so that the inside of your cages can be easily got at.

No More Selective Breeding.

In the selection of his stock, the fancier will have to be ruled by his pocket; but be sure to get the best you can afford. One pair of good birds are worth fifty "wasters," as from the former you will be likely to produce a few youngsters that will be more than value for all the fifty put together; besides, there are plenty of "wasters" without anyone troubling to breed more. (I am not without a few myself!)

They say you have to pay for experience. I have paid for mine. I have given good prices for birds out of one room, and then off I have gone to another room, seeking birds suitable to mate to those bought previously. Mind you, they have all been good birds individually, and I give credit to the breeders who produced them. This method is what is called breeding by selection. I myself intend to have no more of it.

The best plan by far is to go to a man who keeps "touching the prizes" at our shows; he is sure to have the birds required for breeding the exhibition Yorkshire. Mind you, I mean a man who breeds his own winners—not one who buys them. Place yourself in his hands. This, I consider, the best plan for getting your breeding stock together.

Should Cock-birds Feed the Young?

Some fanciers run two hens with one cock bird. Others do not believe in such a method. I favour it myself, for the simple reason that not so much cage room is required during breeding time, as is the case when you run one cock with one hen. Besides, if you run one cock with one hen, and let him assist the hen in feeding the young, the hen comes on to lay again much sooner than she would with the cock away and the young being reared by herself. I consider that when a cock assists the hen in rearing the young it does him more harm than does the running of him with two hens, for when he is not feeding the young he is feeding his mate, and probably is the means of turning a good feeding hen into a lazy one.

Preparing for Breeding.

In preparing the birds for the breeding season at the beginning of February I give the cocks a little extra good food (mixed seed and egg-food) every other day for about three weeks; then I start giving this every day up to the time of commencing breeding. As regards the hens, I let them have as much wing-room as possible all the winter. At the beginning of March I give them egg-food; also plenty of finely ground egg-shells. The shell is better if paced in a small glass vessel in one corner of the cage. I give this, along with ordinary seed, until the time I decide to mate them up. Then I place them in the breeding cages, and in two or three days I introduce their husbands.

I next place some nesting material (I like charpie) between the wires for them to "play with"; I don't put the nest pans in just yet, as a hen not ready to lay will build her nest and then turn it out over the cage floor. Besides, some hens have a habit of "calling" to the cock-bird when in the nest pan, and the result is, generally, a few clear eggs.

I use earthenware nest-pans, and have no desire to change. I always use a lining of thick soft material, which I sew into the pan, letting the birds make the nest itself of charpie.

Humour the Young Hen.

If the hen is a young one, I leave her to sit the full fourteen days without disturbing her, as some young hens are very nervous. On the evening of the thirteenth day I place some prepared egg and biscuit-food in the cage. Should there be any young the following morning (note the broken shells on cage floor) I also give her a little crushed hemp; but very little, as I don't believe in a free use of this seed for Yorkshires.

When the young are three days old I put in a little green food. At the end of three weeks I remove them to a clean cage, taking the dirty one out to give it a good scrub, using carbolic soap; I return it to the room while it smells of carbolic. By doing this it helps to keep the air of the room nice and sweet.

I then give the young ones cracked seed along with their egg-food, until they are seven or eight weeks old. When they are this age I slightly colour their egg-food with tasteless pepper. By this time you will be able to tell what kind of birds they are likely to be, and if they are not satisfactory you should be able to decide how to remedy the fault.

A Trying Time for Both.

The moult is regarded as one of the most trying times in a bird's life, and probably it is the most trying time for the fancier. For one thing, unless he keeps up regular attention, he may as well never start the process of colour-feeding. And even if he has no exhibition birds amongst his lot, he will have to colour-feed or else risk getting a reduced reward for his season's labour. A bird badly colour-fed, too, is an eyesore.

When my birds begin to drop feathers I place a thin covering in front of their cages until such times as I have all the birds in moult, when I remove these small curtains and place a large one over the window. Butter muslin is about as fine a thing as you can get, and it stops very little light from entering your room; it is also quite sufficient to kill the direct rays of the sun, the main thing we want to keep out.

I always give the birds a little saffron in their drinking-water, until such times as they begin to throw their head feathers.

Through a Birdroom Window

New Series by this popular Author.

By the Rev. C. D. FARRAR

This contribution, No. 18 of the series, happily describes the hand-rearing of some Woodpeckers and their amusingly destructive propensities.

In writing, as I am about to do, an article on my Woodpeckers, I must first of all tell you how it all came about that I came to own Woodpeckers at all. The evening before, nothing was further from my thoughts than Woodpeckers; in fact, I don't believe I had ever seen one save in books of natural history. But we have a gamekeeper here, and the story has got abroad that the Vicar likes all sorts of odd beasts and birds, and that he can't refuse the offer of anything out of the common.

Up in the Morning Early!

I was out in the garden one June evening when I was told the gamekeeper wanted to see me. He told me in a confidential tone that he knew of a biggish hole in a tree where he had seen some strange birds about, and he thought they had some young ones. Would I like them, if he could get them out? In a sense I thought I should, but then I knew from past experience what a nuisance young birds are to bring up. I had no visionary ideas about it. It means rising at four o'clock in the morning sharp, and it means keeping awake for the next fourteen hours and feeding these hungry little beggars regularly. Looked at how you like, it is, as a certain politician said of politics, "a beastly career." The only thing that sweetens the toil is when success crowns your efforts, and the youngsters live and grow delightfully tame and familiar. It is not every man that can rear a nest of Woodpeckers, but then there is no harm in trying. We can't all be Prime Ministers, but we can all aspire to a seat on the Parish Council, and so in a moment of weakness I said "yes."

I firmly believe now that the Woodpeckers had already been taken, and that the story about being able to get at the nest was all a fable. It seemed to me afterwards that a task of such colossal difficulty could not have been accomplished so quickly, for in less than an hour after the offer had been made, the young Woodpeckers were in my hands, and the keeper was richer by half-a-crown. I had better have kept the half-crown, and let him have kept the Woodpeckers, as you will see if you read on. I ought to have remembered Wolsey's advice to that particularly offensive sorvant of his—Thomas Cromwell :—

"Cromwell, I charge thee, fling away ambition."

Ambition has again and again been the cause of my undoing.

To be numbered among the household gods of one's countrymen—to be well and kindly thought of by countless unknown readers: that has ever been my longing. Would not the world hang on the tale of how I reared a nest of Woodpeckers alone and unaided? One of the first duties of a writer is to please his public; his second duty is to earn his living. I felt that in this case I could do both. I could point a moral to adorn a tale, and incidentally earn a few shillings.

An Acquired Taste.

My first sight of the Woodpeckers was not inspiring. They were wrapped up in a blue spotted handkerchief, and when I undid a corner, all I could see was a lot of long necks and fearsome gaping mouths, from which proceeded a hissing as if from a nest of vipers. Incidentally I asked what I should feed them on. The answer was not re-assuring: "White grubs." "Where am I to get them?" I asked feebly. "Well," was the reply, "you must get hold of some reet rotten logs, and mebbe you sall fin a many." I did not at all care for this suggestion, as I fancied those Woodpeckers would eat more white grubs than I was ever likely to find, and I fancied that their airy gaping mouths seemed to suggest that white grubs were a rather scarce commodity at Micklefield. Indeed, in my past experience I seemed to remember that the rate of white grubs was about one per good-sized log, and a lot of labour thrown in. I felt then that the keeper's advice as to feeding was merely "a counsel of perfection," and that I must discover some more prosaic form of diet. I knew that whatever I gave these Woodpeckers meant a good deal of labour; but then I thought of S. Paul's words to the Thessalonians, that if any will not work, neither shall he eat, and so I made up my mind that I would be one of the workers.

I thought I would try my own soft food mixture; as, if they would eat this, it would be one step in the right direction. If those young Woodpeckers remained in the handkerchief they would perish, and if I gave them my soft-food they could but die. I accordingly gave them a feed and left them snugly covered up, and retired, and, like the sister of Moses, waited to see what would happen.

Bonny Babies.

When I came back in an hour's time I was delighted to find that nothing serious had happened, but that my babies were evidently quite satisfied with my diet, and, like the children fed on Mellin's food, were going to do me credit. For a week or ten days the laborious process went on. I rose punctually at four a.m., but the Woodpeckers were always up a little before. I believe if I had risen at 1 a.m. they would have opened their eyes at 12.55. At first, as long as they could not move about they were not much bother; it was only the question of a steady hand and eye; but as the days passed and they began to feel their legs, trouble began.

It is not so easy to feed a young Woodpecker that goes dodging about all over the place. I put them in a good sized Canary breeding cage, upside down, and for obvious reasons. Woodpeckers, as my readers may not know, are not perchers like other birds, but rather creepers and crawlers, and if placed in an ordinary wire cage, right side up, would quickly smash their tails all to pieces, as they progress up the trunks of trees with their tails pressed against the bowl. This is all very well on bark, but bark is not the same as wire. One morning I was delighted to see one of the youngsters picking up bits I had dropped on the floor of the cage, and my readers may be sure I was not long in dropping some more bits, like the reapers of Boaz, on purpose. My advice to rearers of young birds is much the same as Tony Weller's about education. You will remember that he said to Pickwick about his son Sam: "I took a deal of pains with his eddication, sir. I let him run in the streets when he were very young and shift for his self." That was just what I did with the baby Woodpeckers, as soon as ever I dared I let them shift for themselves, and then for a few mornings "I rejoiced in my bed."

Gymnastics for Young Birds.

The youngsters soon became wonderfully active and amusing, and were always climbing about the invested wires of their prison, looking, I presume, like Alexander, for new worlds to conquer. I was rather troubled to know where to put them, as whenever I let them out for a few minutes, they went with such a dreadful bang against the aviary wires that I quite expected to have to collect them in pieces. They had no idea of perching, their one thought seemed to be to get on the wire and then run frantically up and down. I knew that no tail could long stand that sort of thing, so I had to catch them and cage them once more. I remember enough of my Plato to recall the fact that he strongly advised gymnastics for the young. A happy inspiration seized me, and I got a lot of big rough fir poles with the bark on, and rigged them up in an aviary and housed the Woodpeckers therein. They were happy and at ease in a moment and were never tired of running up and down the poles, always contriving, like a squirrel, to keep the pole between me and them.

My one anxiety now was about their feeding. Woodpeckers are unsuited for hopping or walking, and so an ordinary feeding pot is no good. My inventive brain got over the difficulty, for I fastened up pots of food and water on the poles, and my small friends soon discovered them, and helped themselves as they felt disposed.

There was only one "fly in my pot of ointment." These Woodpeckers were so abominably destructive. They could demolish a good fir pole at the rate of about one a day. A good strong vigorous fir pole in the morning was by night a poor tottering worm-eaten wreck. I felt that to be daily putting up fresh fir poles was something beyond my time and my patience. There was only one thing to be done. The Woodpeckers and I must part company. But to tell of their misdoings would be fatal. They would not leave my hands. I must dissemble. In this world, although deceptions are welcomed everywhere, it is only on conditions, one of which is that they must be carried through with a high hand.

Making use of Your Friends.

I believe in giving testimonials. The great thing to remember is to dwell on the good points and to be very blind to the failings. I determined that this must be my wisdom in the present case. A friend came to see me, and I could tell that he was "badly struck" with my friends. He timidly asked if they were for sale. After deep reflection I said I might be prevailed upon to part with them, but they were very dear to me, and it would cause me a pang to part with them, still, to a dear friend ——. I carefully said nothing about their destructive capabilities. It is no good hunting for trouble, and I knew that enlightenment would come soon enough.

About a fortnight later I went to see my old friends, and I found them thoroughly happy. They had wrecked a good size aviary, and were still going strong; but as my friend is very rich and has plenty of fir poles, I was not troubled, especially as he did not seem to mind. Indeed, he was quite taken up with the excitement his strange pets caused to visitors; and I listened, careless as Adam in his first state. To me, there seemed to be something intensely humorous in the evident enjoyment these birds put into wrecking their prison home; my friend took it all quite stolidly; "it was their nature to!" but then some men are sadly wanting in humour. It was said of the late Mr. Gladstone, by one of his friends, "He will talk about a bit of cheese as if he were standing before the judgment seat of God."

The Disease That Gives Bird-keepers Most Trouble

By T. UTTLEY.

How asthma may be cured if treated in time.

Were I to be asked which disease caused the most trouble to bird fanciers I should say that which we call "Asthma." How many valuable birds die annually from this disease, and how many it renders unfit for show and breeding purposes, it would be difficult to say. Could we but stamp it out once and for all, what a lot of trouble and disappointment we should save ourselves.

A peculiar feature of asthma is that birds of an otherwise robust nature seem to live on in spite of the disease, though every breath taken seems as if it will prove the last.

A bird suffering from asthma presents a pitiable appearance. The feathers are often ruffled, the breath is taken with considerable effort; whilst the expulsion of air by the lungs is accompanied by a wheezing sound. Personally, I have never known a bird to die during one of the paroxysms; however painful these appear, and are, the birds always seem to survive them, and by gasping, wheezing, and expectorating the mucous, manages to inhale enough air to keep life in their frail bodies.

What is Asthma?

Now, what is asthma? Asthma is a term that has been applied to nearly all cases of difficulty of breathing in birds, but there can be only one true asthma. Canaries, like other birds and animals, are subject to various diseases of the respiratory organs, and we must not class them all as "asthma." Let me explain.

There is no doubt whatever that asthma is the result of a nervous contraction of the bronchial tubes. These tubes are really a continuation of the wind-pipe, and are lined with mucous membrane. Now, the inflammation of this lining membrane is known as bronchitis. It will be found in seventy cases out of every hundred birds suffering from asthma that they will also suffer more or less from bronchitis. It is practically a complication of the disease.

The difficulty we experience in the cure of this disease will be seen when I describe its progress. The continual irritation of coughing causes the mucous membrane to become very much inflamed, which brings about a further contraction of the bronchial tubes, till at last the nervous action becomes almost destroyed, the mucous membrane loses its elasticity, and a chronic inflammation sets in that becomes better or worse according to the temperature and amount of irritation given to the mucous lining. Therefore, true asthma is a nervous disease of the bronchial tubes.

Back to the Causes.

But what causes asthma? it will be asked. Well, there is no doubt that keeping a bird in a close, stuffy room, or above the level of the gas, or overfeeding it on stimulating food will cause it. Or it may follow an attack of acute bronchitis, or (I firmly believe this) it may be communicated from one bird to another.

If you have any suspicious cases, immediately completely separate them from your other birds. Never use an asthmatical bird to breed with; you will surely find traces of the disease in the progeny, for a bird that is pre-disposed to this disease will sooner or later show symptoms of it.

Symptoms of asthma often seem to show themselves in hens in breeding condition, especially when about to lay. This is caused by the limited breathing space when the hen is weighted with eggs. I should not discard a hen that showed traces of heavy breathing, or huskiness during this period. But remember that any undue drain on the vital forces—overmating, causing the hen to rear too many nests of young in a season, etc.—may cause an otherwise fine bird to become an asthmatical wreck.

The Easiest Victims.

All Canaries seem to fall easy victims to this disease. Our British birds can resist it for a long time, even it kept amongst a lot of Canaries suffering from it, but that they will eventually contract the disease I have proved conclusively, just as they will suffer from chronic bronchitis if kept in a warm, stuffy kitchen, or a draughty room.

Asthma is a difficult disease to cure; of this there is no doubt whatever. But that it can be cured is, I make bold to say, a certainty. I do not say that in neglected cases, where the nervous action has been destroyed, or where the mucous membrane has become irreparably damaged, a cure can be effected, but I do say that if taken in time the disease can be cured.

When treating a bird, first of all put your patient into a box cage sufficiently large to ensure that in hopping from one perch to another it will have to use its wings. This will cause it to breathe more deeply, and the lungs to expand. The bird should be kept in a room at an even temperature, free from draught and gas fumes. In cold, frosty days I should certainly recommend that there be heat both night and day in the room. Keep the cage scrupulously clean, and supplied with plenty of sand and grit.

The Cure Described.

Begin your treatment by giving your birds a dose of Dinneford's magnesia, a teaspoonful in two tablespoonfuls of drinking water. The next day let fall ten drops of pure Stockholm tar (not coal tar be it noted) on to about two teaspoonfuls of very fine icing sugar. Mix well, in a breakfast-cup, and pour on some boiling water, stirring it all the time (see that you well mix). Then fill the cup three-quarters full with cold water, afterwards giving it to your birds in their water-vessels to drink. Be sure and carefully follow out these directions, or the tar will not mix with the water. Whilst drinking this the fumes from the tar will set about the cure.

Once a week leave off the tar, and give magnesia in water. Give plenty of green food, or ripe apple, etc. If the bird is very weak give three or four times weekly egg-food with a drop or two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed amongst it.

Sometimes a chlorate of potash lozenge dissolved in half-a-teacupful of water will help in a case where the voice is very husky; this also seems to prevent a slight attack of catarrh from spreading.

I repeat that asthma is a troublesome disease to deal with. Therefore, fanciers, take warning: do your best to cure your birds on the first symptoms showing themselves. After the cure, give Parrish's chemical food in the drinking-water. This must be continued for at least three weeks to a month. Iron tonics are useless unless continued until the blood has had time to become richer.

THREE METHODS of increasing your business,
WHICH IS THE BEST?

Advertising by Circulars.

Supposing you wish to get right at 10,000 fanciers. Bearing in mind that the better the 'get-up' of your circular the likelier it is to pull, 10,000 circulars will cost you 10 guineas. This is a low estimate. Then there is the postage, another 20 guineas, roughly. But what about the addresses? You have to get them; that is difficult; and even if you had them, remember, the waste paper basket is the premature grave of many a circular.

Arguments against—too strong.

Relying on Prestige.

Success on the show bench brings a certain amount of fame to exhibitors, but the scope afforded here is limited to comparatively a few. The best results, in new business, cannot possibly be obtained, even by successful exhibitors, unless the prestige is backed up by judicious advertising.

What about Breeders, Food and Medicine retailers, Appliance makers! A reputation for fair dealing is valuable to them. But they are more handicapped than exhibitors, for few shows cater fully for them, and cannot bring them anything like the amount of business they could wish for.

Not sufficient—Turn to the third method.

Thirty-Three Years of the Norwich Plainhead.

A paper by Mr. H. Bell, given before the members of the London and Counties A.C.B. on December 9th, 1911.

I have been asked to give a few hints upon the breeding of Norwich Plainheads. What I have to say is entirely from my own experience and not from what I have read. As near as I can remember I have had some thirty-three years' experience in Norwich Plainhead breeding. Nottingham was where I made my first start, and at the present time Nottingham can hold their own with any other town. I have been in London over 20 years, so I have seen the different methods of both places. I have had a few good birds in my time, but have not what you might call reached the top of the tree, so what I am about to say is more for anyone starting in the Fancy, or for a Novice.

Always the Lecturer's Fancy.

The Norwich Plainhead has always been my fancy. I like a short, thick-set bird. But you must have plenty of size with it or you cannot win now, as judges seem to go for the big birds. Type and colour have always been my aim, and to get it I always keep plenty of variegated birds in stock. I think a good yellow variegated is the most useful bird for breeding with, as you seem to get plenty of buffs where you do not get so many yellows. Before now I have bred a good show bird from two variegated birds, but as a rule I pair a yellow and a buff together.

I do not think it matters much whether the cock or the hen is yellow, but I like to have the hen as near the Norwich type as I can get it, and I like the cock to be of a good size and colour. But whether it be a buff or yellow it must be of a good colour.

Years gone by, when there were plenty of yellow Crests about, I liked to get a yellow Crestbred cock of the Norwich type to breed with: this brought me both size and colour. But a bird like that is hard to find now, as the Crestbred birds of to-day are too long and coarse in feather for the purpose named. Years ago you used to see birds more of an equal size in a class where you could hardly tell one from the other; that was the time when they wanted a bit of judging. I do not like to see great big birds and little birds in the same class, as that is disheartening to an exhibitor. A man has got a few fair-sized birds at home, and he thinks he stands a good chance of winning, which his birds would do if they had birds to compete against of their own size; but when they are put on the show bench by the side of the big ones they are down at once, looking more like Borders by comparison with them.

When Buying Birds.

As regards buying birds I like to get a few fresh ones each year. I go to a fancier who, I know, has some good birds and pick one or two out which I think will suit me. But I have it in my mind that I want some birds as good as I have myself or they are of no use to me. I ask him the price, and if we can come to terms I buy them. If you go to look a man's birds over, and pick some of his best out you must expect to pay for them, as a good bird is worth a good price. Don't think you are going to breed all winners from it, because nine times out of ten you will not. I have a few good birds together and think I am all right if I can but get some from them; then either one or the other goes wrong and my best birds come from a pair which I never expected to get good ones from!

Double-buffing I have not done much of, but if a man has plenty of birds and would like to try it, I should suggest that he takes two birds of good colour, close-feathered and of the Norwich type as near as he can get them. My idea is, if you do much double-buffing you will lose colour. For myself I should prefer to double yellow if I have the right sort to do it with; what I mean is, it is no use pairing together two Yellows about as thick as your finger. I should not mind if they were clear or variegated, so long as they had some size in them.

Three Compartments and their Uses.

I like the cage with three compartments about the size of an ordinary breeding cage; it must have two sliding partitions, one with a little wire in about the size of a cage door and about two inches from the bottom. If you have a partition all wire, the young ones fly on it and the old birds pull their tails out.

As a rule I take my young ones away before they get out of the nest or as soon as I think the hen wants to go to nest again. Out come the young, nest and all, and I stand them on the bottom of the middle compartment. I find that, as a rule, the old birds feed the young ones better away from them than if the latter are left with them too long. I have a pair of birds in each compartment, and leave the middle one empty till I get some young ones. I always like to feed inside the cages; I have no fountain holes to my cages. I stand a water-pot inside just in front of the door, and when the weather is wet or damp I put a handful of sawdust each week when I clean the cages out where I stand the water, and I find that that keeps the cage bottom from getting very wet. Seed I put in a little pot inside, about as much as I think will last the day as I am troubled with mice, and what is left I usually throw away.

If these few remarks, made in a rather crude way, are of any advantage to those who are beginners and novices I shall feel that my evening with you has not been spent in vain.

Wild-Bird Life.

New Year Notes.

The dull winter mornings are made cheerful by the song of the Thrush, especially in the early part, for the birds may be heard singing before it is actually daylight. To sing must be their first occupation, even before that of hunting for their breakfasts. For several weeks now they have been "recording," and are now carolling as loud and as clear as they do in the early Spring. It is rather unusual for the Blackbird to sing much in the Winter, but this year very many may be heard, and not a few of them are in fine voice—loud and clear, and flute-like. In some Blackbirds' songs there are passages that are almost human. Unlike the Song Thrush, he sings with no regularity, and does not appear to know which will be the next passage, or even what turn his note will take. He is a careless, happy performer. His notes are wild and free, and, like the flowers of the fields, are lacking in order.

All birds appear to be affected by the mild weather. Insect life must be plentiful, so that the wild birds are revelling in luxury. The berries on the privet, hawthorn and dog-rose bushes are left untouched, they are a store for the future, and will be drawn upon when frost and snow enclose the earth's surface, and grub and worm bury themselves deeper into the soil.

In the elms near the writer's garden a pair of precocious Wood Pigeons are cooing and love-making the greater part of the day. They are notoriously free breeders, and young ones have been found in almost every month of the year. The Starlings have also been cajoled by the atmospheric conditions. A pair are busily carrying straw and other rubbish to last year's nesting site in an old walnut tree. We have a chance, now that the trees are somewhat bare, of seeing the lovely little Golden-crested Wren. So small and light is he that a single leaf at the end of a branch is strong enough to sustain his weight, and a small twig is not depressed by him. During the winter one may find them at any time, and in almost any place—among a few straggling pines by the side of the roadside, in the thick thorn hedges, in the very centre of a wood, and even on the edge where the timber is somewhat open. But, like all other species, they have their favourite localities, and if one is conversant with the district, he knows where to look for them during th winter months, or in leafy summer.

Thrushes' Nests Unlined.

During the past summer one frequently found nests of the Song Thrush minus the usual mud lining. This was easily accounted for by the hot dry weather, the birds having a difficulty in procuring the wet mud necessary to line the structure in the usual manner. In some districts, where decayed wood is difficult to obtain, they will dispense with it entirely.

The Pigeon's Crop.

The crop of a bird is capable of a good deal of distension. This is demonstrated very clearly in the Woodpigeon, especially when the acorns are ripe. From twenty to forty acorns have been taken from a single bird, and so distended has the bag appeared that contained them that one wondered how the last few were forced into it. It is a question if the bird eat all these itself, or shares them with others—possibly half-grown young ones.

The Tuneful Tree Pipit.

The song of the Tree Pipit is, in some ways, very like that of the Canary. He is a very energetic songster. When perching, his song is short, generally commencing with some Lark-like notes. He sings longest while flying from one position to another. This is a very graceful performance; he glides through the air in a kind of half-circle with outstretched wings, his legs dangling, and his tail expanded, singing lustily all the time.

SOUTH SHIELDS C.B.S.

The [illegible] was held Boxing Day, in the [illegible] Hotel. Entries came up well, [illegible] and the quality throughout was exceedingly good. The large room of the hotel [illegible] is a good place for holding a bird show, having any amount of space, and with a bit more light would be practically ideal. The hon. secretary, Mr. James Barrass, had everything in tip-top order, and judging was completed and cards up in good time. He was ably assisted in his secretarial duties by Mr. Wm. Duke; and with two such good fanciers at the head of affairs it is little wonder that everything passed off without the slightest hitch. The society is favoured with a grand list of officers with the genial chairman, Mr Wm. Thompson at the head. He in turn is well backed up by Messrs. W. L. Smith (Vice-Chairman), Matt Coltman (Treasurer), Joe Richardson, T. Winter, A. Addison, R. Addison, R. Blore, W. Dixon, and A. Widdowfield. Fine weather favoured the event, and the committee are confidently anticipating a satisfactory balance-sheet. The principal special winner was Mr. J Richardson, who received special for best in show with a nice yell. Norwich. Mr. J. Riseborough (Sunderland) judged, and his awards were well received.

Seventh annual show held Boilermakers' Hall, Cathcart Street, Greenock, a very suitable place for the purpose, being well lighted and free from draughts. Entries were in advance of last year's, 200 in all, which were well arranged all round the hall. The management was all that could be desired. GUISBOROUGH.

Fourth annual show of the Guisborough Priory C.B.S. held in the Chaloner Hall, Jan. 6th. This hall, which is a splendid building in which to hold a show, being lofty, well lighted, and ventilated, without any draught, is very kindly lent free of charge by Colonel Chaloner, whose wife is president of the society, and takes a very active and helpful interest in it. The Chaloner cup was won outright by Mr. J. Maddison with a beautiful clear Goldfinch Mule. Mrs. Chaloner during the afternoon presented the cup and other specials to the fortunate winners. Mr. S. H. Lambert, the secretary, had everything in order, and was ever looking after the interests of the birds and exhibitors. He was ably backed up by Mr. J. Cook (chairman), Messrs. H. Hood, F. Jones, Allison, Barker, Blackburn, Dixon, Jobling, Jackson, Wesson, Wilson, Atkinson, Hardy and Mays. These fanciers are to be congratulated upon an interesting and well-managed exhibition. Mr. H. W. Battye judged.

Dunfermline's "Happy New Year" Show.

Remarkable Juvenile Classes; Grant from the Carnegie Trust Fund.

Dunfermline and West of Fife O.S. show held Jan. 2 and 3, in the Drill Hall, Bruce Street. The hall is a good one, being large, well lighted from the roof. The cage birds were well sheltered from all draughts by a partition running through the hall. The management are to be complimented on their long list of distinguished patronage of nobility, including Lord Bruce; from what we saw of this gentleman he is a true fancier, genial and kind to all he met. A few more real live lords of his kind would make our "puir auld" country a very much pleasanter place to reside in. Through him the society receives a grant from the Carnegie Trust, to defray all expenses in two classes for juveniles —one for the best Canary and the other for best British birds, the judges being requested to make their awards on condition, and to give prize to the bird which had received the greatest care and attention. These classes were strong, and the quality all over was very good, and judging from the keen attention paid to the awards by the young exhibitors, Dunfermline ought to turn out many good fanciers very soon. In the Canary class the entry was 26, and 12 were awarded prizes. The winner was a very nice yellow Border cock, owned by Miss Maggie Kennoway. In the British bird class the entry was 21, and the winner, Master Andrew Birrell, must indeed have felt proud. The judge awarded ten prizes for merit. The secretary, Mr. A. Hynd, is the right man in the right place. He had everything well in hand, being ably assisted by Mr. A. Burt, Mr. Buchanan, and a hard working committee. The entry all over was much the same as last year, leaving out the Scotch Fancy section, which had to be cancelled owing to want of entries. We heard that this section had not been paying for a number of years, and the executive had decided to reduce the classes one half; seemingly this did not meet with the approval of exhibitors, with the result no entries. This, to our mind, seems very foolish of the Scotch Fancy breeders; they must either hold a show of their own, or support the shows better which give them classification. The Norwich section was well handled by Mr. J. Young (secretary of the Scottish Crest Club), and contained many noted winners. Crests came out strongly, and competition was very keen. Borders all over were of a high-class order. Mr. J. Craig (Brechin) won the medal with one of the finest buff cocks seen out this year, Mr. A. Gilchrist (Coldstream) being the runner-up with his Bradford winner. Mr. J. Patterson (Chirnside) made the awards. The remaining classes were well handled by Mr. G. Marlin (Hamilton). Mention might be made of Mr. Gardiner's pair of Hawfinches, two gems. The show was well patronised.

CRIEFF.

Crieff and Dis. C.B., etc., Association's first annual show was held in the Porteous Hall 6th January. This society has just started, and very few of their members have had any experience in running a cage bird show. The birds were staged along one side of the hall, poultry, etc., occupying the rest of the floor space. The hall, which is fairly well lighted, was free from draughts, but the staging itself was of a primitive order, the birds being crowded together so that the different classes could not easily be picked out. It would pay the society to have some expert advice on staging, etc., by the time their next show comes round. The entry unfortunately was a poor one; there was not a single full class in the section. Mr. W. C. Smith (Balguhidder) won special for best in Norwich, while Messrs. Smith and Jas. Kerr (Dundee) tied for special for most points over section. Mr. Munro won special in Borders with his National and Glasgow, etc., winning Yellow cock. Mr. J. G. Halley won special for best member's bird with a nice young Crest. The President, Mr. A. P. Barrie, and vice-president, Mr. Hodgton, were in evidence nearly the whole day, and were very courteous and obliging, while the hon. secs., Messrs. Cameron and Watt, had their arrangements in very good order, and worked hard for the success of the show. The show was visited by a large number of people during the day, and we hope it will turn out a success financially. With a revised classification, and reduced entry fee, we have no doubt this will turn out a popular fixture. Messrs. D. Low (Dundee), and McLay (Kirkintilloch) judged, and their awards were well received.

ALNMOUTH.

Show held Town Hall, Dec. 30th, when entries came up well. The fanciers of this district only made up their mind to hold an open show a month ago, and the show would have been an even greater success if it had been advertised. We advise the committee to advertise in CAGE BIRDS next year. The Rev. Linton Bogle is president; vice-presidents, Messrs. Cooke, Kitchen, Hudson, and Dixon, and there is a hard working committee composed of Messrs. Jowsey (chairman), Moffitt, Hudson, Donaldson, Scott, Rutherford, Smith, and Bodie. Mr. E. Geggie (sec.) is the right man in the right place; everything passed off without a hitch, and the show was a grand success. The show was well patronised by visitors. Mr. H. Seely (Choppington) judged, and his awards were well received.

NEWTOWNARDS.

First annual show of Newtownards and Dist. C.B.S. held in the spacious Town Hall, Dec. 16th. Judging from the manner in which the arrangements were carried out it is certain the show is a forerunner of many to come. The entries themselves were of such a class and number that it not only came as a surprise, but gave great encouragement to the promoters. Special mention must be made of the birds in the Scotch Fancy classes exhibited by Messrs. Trimble and Neill. The judging was ably carried out by Mr. Isaac Reid, who gave entire satisfaction to all.

ANFIELD, EVERTON, C.B.S.

Members' show held Dec. 26th, Mission Hall, Burleigh Road South, Anfield, Liverpool. There was a very good response, especially so, considering the majority of the members are only now commencing to interest themselves in show specimens. The show (the first venture of this new society) was held in a very fine room, the only drawback being the wretched day, rain coming down in torrents. The committee and stewards worked very energetically to make everything a success. Mr. W. Bell (chairman) and Messrs. Southward, Williams, Frankham, Rumsby, Holden, Hawkes, Crow and Weston, together with Mr. R. B. Wright, hon. sec., carried out their duties in a very efficient manner. We understand that 19 new members were enrolled on the day of the show, while the attendance totalled over 400. Judging by the enthusiasm, this go-ahead society will be very strong 'ere the next annual show comes round, when there are to be over 20 open champion and novice classes in addition to the classes for members, for which a valuable cup is provided, to be won outright. Mr. Rawsthorne (Seaforth) has presented the society with a valuable special for the next show. Mr. J. Thornton (Liscard) judged, under very trying circumstances, and his awards were well received by all. Mr. R. B. Wright deserves all the support the members can give him. It would be difficult to find a harder worker or a more intelligent hon. sec. Mr. Knight won special for best Yorks.; special for best Nor, Mr Crow

LEADGATE (Co. Durham.)

Third annual show, held January 6th. The venue was again the Church Square Hall, which is nicely adapted for the purpose, being entirely free from draughts, and with a little more light would be a really grand hall. Entries came up well, totalling 216, against 197 last year, and the quality in all sections was up to a high standard. The society is well favoured in the matter of officials, with the genial chairman, Mr. C. Westthorp, at the head of affairs. He in turn is well backed up by a fine body of fanciers, viz., Messrs. J. Rowell (vice-chairman), T. J. Collins (treasurer), and Messrs. T. Collins, Walton, Reed, Owens, Wilson and Ouigley, everyone doing his best for the good of the show. Mr. J. A. Turnbull makes a grand secretary, with a thorough knowledge of his duties, and he gets through his work in A1 style. We always found him most courteous and obliging to everybody, and we think the society is very fortunate in having so capable a fancier holding the secretarial reins. He was well supported by Mr. J. Walton, and the assistance of this gentleman in the clerical work was highly appreciated. Special for best British went to Mr. J. W. Rowell, with a very shapely good coloured Greenfinch, the runner-up being Mr. T. Rice, with a fine Bullie. Medal for best Border was won by Mr. J. Walton, with a nice yellow varieg. The weather during the afternoon and evening was wretched, yet despite this the show was grandly patronised, the hall being simply packed with visitors, and there is no doubt the show will be a financial success. Mr. W. Reid (Sunderland) judged.

BIRKENHEAD.

Annual old bird show, held Dec. 9th, Co-operative Hall. No wonder it was a record show, considering the amount of specials the committee had got together. The society are blessed with a secretary second to none, who never seems to tire in his duties. The show was opened by Miss Proudman, daughter of the Mayor of Birkenhead, who arrived at the show late in the afternoon, but was not too late to render financial assistance. The chairman, Mr. Burns, was busy looking after the wants of the birds. He was well backed up by Messrs. Moston, Bird, Jones, and the committee. Mr. Shaw won Hyde's special; best bird in show, W. Young; most points Yorks., W. Jones; Yorks. Greens, W. Young; Norwich, J. Burns; Borders, W. Young; British, A. E. Lloyd; Sandiford's medal, W. Bird; season's specials leaders:—1, Young; 2, Jones. Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Mite. Kills all insects. Harmless to everything else.

SANDY LANE.

Sandy Lane and Dis. C.B.A. annual exhibition was held Jan. 6th, in the Baptist School. There were 23 classes, 10 of them for novices. Messrs. Ratcliffe and Shaw as joint secs., had everything well in hand, being ably assisted by a band of well-known fanciers, including the President (Mr. J. A. Whitwham), vice-presidents (Messrs. J. Edmondson and A. Shaw), and Messrs. Moore, Drake, Hanson, Wilson, and J. Watmuff as general workers. Mr. E. W. Walsh (Halifax) judged, his awards meeting with general approval. The room is a nice one, being well adapted for a show. The "gate" was very meagre, it being very bad travelling, snow falling almost continually the whole day, and by the time the birds were on their way home, the snow was several inches deep, and still falling.

GRANITE CITY C.B.S. (Aberdeen).

Nineteenth annual show held 1st and 2nd January, E.W. Hall, John Street, a good hall for such a purpose. Entries numbered 830, a decrease on last year's. The arrangements were nicely carried out, by a strong committee, with Mr. W. Rae, as president, Mr. A. Cruickshank as vice-president, and Mr. J. Duguid, secretary and treasurer; and they deserve great praise for the able manner in which they carried out their respective duties. The challenge cup for best bird was won by Mr. W. Rae, he being also runner-up and winner of the Ramsden medal. Mr. W. Hampton (Brechin) judged Norwich, and Mr. F. A. Watt (Banff) British, etc., and their awards gave every satisfaction.

IRVINE COMMENCES WITH A SUCCESS

Irvine and Dis. O.C.B.S. first annual show held Jan. 6th, in the Masonic Hall. As an initial venture this must be voted a fair success. All are good young enthusiastic fanciers, and at their next show we hope to see a much bigger entry, as they are worthy of it. The hall is upstairs, but is a grand one for staging birds; it is also well lighted, and is kept at the proper heat. The society started with a good capital, and all specials competed for were in hand before the show, and each was given to the successful exhibitor before leaving the hall. Mr. Clark (president) is a well-known exhibitor and judge of Border Fancies, and under his supervision and sterling advice all arrangements were well made in advance. Mr. Edwards won the handsome cup outright for most points in any one class, and Mr. Watson special for most points in Nor. The secretary, Mr. Young, is the right man in the right place, and was well supported by a hard-working committee and capable stewards. The committee comprise Messrs. H. McColl, W. Savage, T. Cowan, J. Young, J. Alexander, W. Murray, J. McGee, H. Bowman, and H. Fergusson. Judges: Messrs. D. Smart (Grangemouth) for Canaries, and A. W. Watson (Edinburgh) the remainder, and their awards met with general approval. The Scotch Fancies and Crests were cancelled.

"OUR CANARIES"

By CLAUDE ST. JOHN. Edited by C. A. HOUSE, & G. E. WESTON. Assisted by a large number of the leading breeders and exhibitors of the day.

The Great Standard Work on one subject only, CANARIES. Compiled in one way, THOROUGHLY, by experts.

A Compendium of Expert Knowledge.

Practically and completely set forth. That is the keynote of this splendid work. Canaries only are dealt with, and every variety of these popular pets is exhaustively described. Everything it is necessary to know to keep these charming songsters in the best of health and vigour (in fanciers' terms "THE PINK OF CONDITION") their housing in cages or aviaries, feeding, moulting, breeding, exhibiting and general management, is comprehensively given, and the greatest breeders and exhibitors of each variety explain in detail the methods they have adopted to bring about their success on the show bench.

Illustrations of every known Canary in Colour are contained in this wonderful volume. The greatest Canary artist of the day—Mr. H. Norman, has given us of his best in the 32 magnificent coloured plates with which, together with 32 brilliant art plates and innumerable descriptive sketches he has embellished this work. Every variety is illustrated by a beautiful plate in colour, in which all details of colouring are minutely shown, and every plate is a STANDARD OF TYPE. These together with the frontispiece showing the original wild canary and its domesticated descendants give the work a charm which has never before been approached.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

LOOK AT YOUR BACK

numbers of CAGE BIRDS and see if any other man has ever published anything like the number of testimonials that I have. This should prove to you that no man supplies such good birds as I do. I make no exaggerated claims or false statements, so that people sending to me always know what they are going to receive, and always receive what they expect. When a person sends me 2/6 for a bird he gets one worth 2/6, not one that he could have bought in his own streets for 6d., and this is why I always send on approval and guarantee to instantly return every penny of your money if you are not in every way satisfied. I now have, without doubt, the finest collection of English cock Goldfinches in United Kingdom, every bird guaranteed in pink of health and condition and thoroughly on hard seed, at 2/- each; three, 5/-; six, 9/-; specially selected large cocks for muling and guaranteed now in free song, 3/- and 4/- each. Few real exhibition specimens, with full complements of show points, 5/- and 7/6 each. Grand lot of genuine white legged cock Goldfinches that really have bred mules, 6/-, 7/6, and 10/- each. Splendid lot of cock brown Linnets, every one perfectly on seed, 9d. each; three, 2/-; specially picked cocks for muling and contest singing and now in good song, 1/- and 1/6 each; Cock Bullfinches, 2/- and 3/- each; exhibition specimens, 5/- each. Exhibitors please note, I handle more real English birds than any man alive, and therefore have a better chance of picking out exhibition specimens. Those described by me as exhibition specimens in this advt. are birds capable of winning well when used to show cage, and purchasers may always rely upon getting good specimens at top price, but please don't ask for Palace winners at bottom price, because you won't get them. Following letters will give an idea of quality I send out: "3, Burnett Place, Aberdeen, Dec. 27th; Sir,—Snow Bunting duly came to hand. Many thanks for such a good one. You can be certain of all my orders in future.—Yours., W. Allison." "2, Kingsland, Cummock, Dec. 22nd; Sir,—I received Goldie and Bullie all right, and am highly satisfied with them.—Yours, J. Mrs. E. T. Williams, 16, Chesham Buildings, Grosvenor Square, W., writes: "The bird I had from you is a real little beauty. WAR DECLARED.

War is declared against high prices and poor quality. It is high time they were things of the past. The pride of songsters is rightly claimed by the Rollers as imported by me direct from their native land, and every bird properly tested and proved to be a first-class songster of the quality sold for before being sent out. Every customer guaranteed fullest satisfaction. Read a few of the letters received this month: Barnsley, January 2, 1912. Roller arrived in splendid condition. I am more than satisfied with it. —C. Brocklesbank. Ilford, 6/1/12. Bird arrived none the worse for his journey. Am well suited.—M. Gooch. Manchester, 1/1/12. I am very well satisfied with the two birds you sent me. They are grand value.—J. Benson. Hoylake, 6/1/12. Bird arrived safe. Quite satisfied. He sang grand on arrival. Thanking you for promptitude.—W. Anthony. Llanelly, 3/1/12. Received Norwich safe. Jones. Addlestone, 1/1/12. Bird reached me safe. Am quite pleased with same.—A. Langridge. Reepham, 1/1/12. Received Canary on Wednesday. PRIDE OF PLACE in the Roller world is rightly taken by the Leipzig Rollers as imported by me. You might be able to get a Roller as good at double the price, but why should you pay more than you need? When you've read the remarkable number of testimonials I have published (of which a few are given below), you will know why I so emphatically say that no Roller on the market at anything like the price can equal a Leipzig Roller. I have an enormous stock of thoroughly acclimatised Leipzig Rollers on hand; all cocks are guaranteed in full song day and gaslight, with long hollow and double rolls, sweet, silvery trills, water-bubble runs, soft, roulades, piccolo trills, bell, harp and gong notes, and jug-jug of Nightingale, etc.; warranted entirely free from any harsh or objectionable notes whatever; price 7s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. each. Special Bandmasters, which excel in the deep bass and hollow bell rolls, 10/- and 12/6 each. Hens, guaranteed same strain, 2/3 each, 4/- couple. I also have a magnificent stock of real contest Rollers, fit for immediate contesting, price 15/- and 20/- each. These contest birds are of purest race extant, and song is exceptionally soft and mellow. Roller cabinet cages with loose fronts and folding doors, 2/6 and 3/6 each. To those who like a loud, merry, short songster, I have a splendid lot of Hartz cocks, all in full vigorous song, real ceiling lifters, price 5/6 each. See following few letters: "Little Longstone, Bakewell, Jan. 2, 1912. Sir,—I have spent 'Xmas with a friend who has recently purchased one of your Leipzig Rollers, and after hearing it I must have one. I have been a breeder of Rollers for some time, and have a good strain, but nothing like that. I particularly admire the bass rolls. Please send me one on. Yours, J. Barnes."—"25 Enbrook Street, Queen's Park Estate, London; Dec. 27. Sir,—Roller I had from you two years ago is still a good healthy bird and in good song; please send another. Yours, J. Fletcher."—"Moor Place, Hayle, Cornwall, Dec. 27. Sir,—Roller received last week is singing well and gives satisfaction. Yours, T. Jordan."—"5, Davison's Yard, Kirkby-in-Ashfield: Dec. 27. Sir,—The Leipzig Roller you sent is a beauty; he sings well and has many changes, and very cheap at price. Yours, R. Hooton."—"5, Greyfriars Place, Edinburgh; Dec. 12. Sir,—I had one of your renowned Rollers over 4 years, and it sang constantly; its notes were long and sweet, with many variations, as you describe. Please send another. Yours, D. Dawson."—"Steilston School House, Holywood by Dumfries; Dec. 18. Sir,—Leipzig Roller you sent has come up to expectations; he is everything you advertise. Please send following. Yours, A. Kennedy."—"Merthyr Tydvil, Dec. 15. Sir,—I have decided to keep Roller you sent. Thanking you for such a beautiful songster, and also for way he was packed. Yours, G. Arnold."—"New North Road, Honiton; Dec. 15. Sir, —Birds arrived in splendid condition. The cock is a beauty, sings incessantly day and night. They are both very strong and healthy, and I am more than pleased with such a beautiful pair of birds. Yours, J. Hussey."—"17, Holmes Street, Bristol; Dec. 15. Sir,—Roller I had from you two years ago is a champion. He sang as soon as unpacked, but glad to say he sings even better now. Yours, R. Brooks."—"70, Radnor Street, Kilbowie, Scotland. Dec. 16. Sir,—Please send Leipzig Roller cock. Thanking you for the two I had last year, which gave entire satisfaction. Many people who have heard them have been delighted with their tours in melody, and are marvels at price paid. Yours, J. McLean."—"48, Normacott Road, Longton; Dec. 6. Sir,—Thanks for prompt dispatch and safe arrival of Leipzig Roller. Thanking you again for such a splendid songster and straightforward dealing with strangers. Yours, A. Tudor." Please note, I am the only importer of Weber's Leipzig Rollers, and all genuine cocks are stamped on wing, "Hans Weber, Leipzig." All are safely and warmly packed in special travelling cages and sent on full week's trial entirely at my own risk immediately on receipt of cash, or if same is deposited with Editor; and money instantly refunded in full if entire satisfaction not given. Try a Leipzig Roller against one of any other breed, you will then know why I can always fill a column with letters written specially about them.

CODNOR PARK AND EASTWOOD C.B.S.

General meeting, held Jan. 13th, Queen's Head Hotel, Riddings. Balance sheet for 1911 read and found satisfactory; it had been audited by Messrs. J. Driver and L. Parsons, and found correct. Mr. L. Parsons, in moving the adoption of the balance sheet and report of secretary, said he was sure all would agree that the secretary had shown much business ability. In the secretary they had the right man in the right place. Mr. J. Driver seconded by saying that if the secretary did not withdraw his resignation the society might as well close its hooks, and he was going to ask the secretary to withdraw and take the office over again for another year. The secretary responded by stating that if there was no other member who would try his hand at the secretaryship, he would take it over for another twelve months, but stated that he had not the time to attend to it that he would like. Mr. J. Taylor was elected president again. Election of committee left over till another meeting. We have arranged to hold another members' show at Eastwood Jan. 27th, when a grand lot of specials will be given. Schedules will be sent out in the course of the week. This show will be open to members of the Ilkeston C.B.S., so please support.—J. H. Mitchell, Sec.

DARLINGTON C. AND B.B.F.A.

Annual meeting, held Jan. 10th, George Hotel, Mr. W. Cartwright in chair. Secretary read balance sheet, which showed a balance in hand. It was arranged to hold a prize draw, several members having obtained some good and useful prizes. Four delegates appointed to attend Federation meeting at Stockton, Jan. 17th. Following officers elected: Chairman, H. C. Carter; vice-chairman, W. Cartwright; treasurer, J. Wildsmith; auditors, Black and Stevenson; secretary, A. Walker.—A. Walker, Sec.

SOUTHEND & S. COUNTIES O.S.

Annual general meeting held at Alexandra Hotel, January 10th. We missed a few old faces whose presence would have added more zest to our deliberations, and we regret to hear that several members are laid aside by illness. All last year's officers were re-elected with one addition—Mr. E. Hutson, who promises to make an ideal assistant secretary. The financial report showed a small deficit, but it is hoped to reduce this by a members' show, which we propose holding January 24th. The rules were revised, the one important alteration being Rule 8, to read as follows: "All birds exhibited at shows to be the absolute property of exhibitor fourteen days before show." Members are reminded that subs. are now due and that regular attendance at meetings encourages.—W. C. Lockwood, Hon. Sec.

PARTICK AND DISTRICT C.B.C.

Office bearers elected: President, Mr. J. Park; vice-president, Mr. R. Anderson; secretary, Mr. J. Henderson; treasurer, Mr. D. Aitkenhead; Committee, Messrs. Fairweather, Walker, Maxwell, Whitelaw, Henry and McRobbie. Agreed, to hold show of breeding pairs Feb. 2, 6 classes: Crests, Plainheads, Borders, Yorks., A.O.V. and Hybrids. New members: Messrs. E. and A. Steel (Ibrox). Arrangements were made to have "a night with Burns," to be held in McCondach's Rooms, 68, Cranston Street, Jan. 24th, 7.30 p.m. Tickets from members, 1s. 6d. each. A hearty vote of thanks to Messrs. Anderson and Park brought a splendid meeting to a close.—J. Henderson, Sec.

ATTERCLIFFE AND DIST. C.B.S.

Social Evening to be Held.

Annual general meeting, held Horse and Jockey Hotel, Attercliffe Road. Mr. Havenhand presiding. Balance sheet for 1911 submitted showing a splendid balance in hand, notwithstanding heavier expenditure. We enrolled six new members. The presentation of specials won at annual show and table shows was made by Mr. Havenhand. Decided, that a diploma be given with the cup, and a suitably inscribed silver medal in future be presented to retiring cup holder by society. The first silver medal, given by Mr. Hibberson, was presented to Mr. Havenhand. We are to have a supper and social evening on January 25th, 8 o'clock; tickets 2s. each. Supper provided by our worthy treasurer, Mr. Justice, at "Horse and Jockey." Will members desiring tickets kindly let me know on or before Jan. 23rd? A hearty invitation is given to all. Our old friend, Mr. Browning, gave us a champion lecture on the Yorkshire. At the close, questions were invited, and were ably answered by lecturer.—W. A. Hailstone, Hon. Sec.

KENT COUNTY C.B.A.

Meeting held Barton Road School, Dover, Jan. 10th, Mr. E. C. Rayner in chair. Letters read from Messrs. Burton Bros., Lee Green, asking for copy of rules, with a view to membership. Proposed by Rev. H. A. Soames (Bromley) that members may enter as many birds for challenge cup competition as they like (now restricted to two birds per section), each of which must have K.C.C.B.A. stated on entry form and catalogue. This being an alteration to rules, can only be dealt with at annual general meeting. Proposed by Mr. Lockett, seconded by Mr. Abbott, that members be debarred from nominating birds for cup competition in selling classes. This rule, if carried, not to be retrospective. Protest received from Mr. Brett (Folkestone) as to action of committee in awarding British cup to Mr. Wickham, as he (Mr. Brett) gained five points in 15s. selling British class, No. 123, at Canterbury show. The committee, acting under rule No. 24, decided, and maintain, that no points should count for awards in any selling class whatever. Members have an opportunity of voting on the foregoing subjects on election forms, which will accompany balance sheets. Proposed by Mr. Abbott, and seconded by Mr. Reeve, that balance sheets and voting papers be put in hands of printers at once.—A. Hendry, Hon. Sec.

OLDHAM AND DISTRICT C.B.A.

Annual general meeting held January 9th, headquarters. Our annual party is to be held January 27th, when we are hoping to have a good crowd. Three new members were elected. Agreed, that cup rules stand. Balance-sheet for 1911 presented; although showing a slight loss on the previous year's we have a balance in hand of £10 6s. 0½d. Auditor's report was given by Mr. Martin. Election of officers: President, Mr. Hampshire (in place of Mr. Sharples, retired); Vice-Presidents, Messrs. Steeple, Dalzell, and G. Fittom. Mr. Hardy was once again elected treasurer, and Mr. J. Cope secretary. Moved and seconded that the general body of members form committee, five to form a quorum. Messrs. Sims and E. Downes were elected auditors in place of Messrs. Hampshire and Martin. Also agreed that secretary be allowed to take subs. monthly. In regard to our annual party I shall be pleased if all who intend being there will give in their names on or before January 23rd, when we shall be holding our table show of Yorks and British; our friend Mr. G. Fitton will judge. We have decided to purchase two dozen "Cage Birds Annuals"; so will fanciers requiring one please give me their names? On behalf of all our members I thank the retiring officers for their services during 1911. I shall be glad if you will announce our next meeting as a table show of Yorks and British, as I did not put British on the postcard I sent you.—Jas. Cope, Hon. Sec.

Meeting held January 13th, in Lockies, 2, St. James' Street, the President (Mr. R. Neil) in chair. Treas. submitted balance-sheet for 1911; Mr. A. M. McDonald, auditor, also gave a report on same, which was considered most satisfactory. Mr. T. Slater was elected a new member. Two new members were also proposed for next meeting. Secretary intimated the four following judges had agreed to adjudicate at next annual show: Messrs. J. Higgens (Hamilton), A. Nisbet (Galston), P. McAdam (Jamestown), and W. Thornton (Edinburgh). Songs from various members concluded the meeting.—J. Stewart, Sec.

BOLTON AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

First meeting of the year was held headquarters, January 7th. The new officers commenced their duties. Officers: President, Mr. J. Gostling; Vice-President, J. Brooks; Auditors, Messrs. Simms and Taylor; Treas. and Assist. Sec., T. H. Cooper; Sec., James Gerrard, 86, Lonsdale Road, Bolton. The balance sheet shows a loss of £1 6s. on the year, but as we had a loss on our open show of over £9, it was considered quite satisfactory. We decided to have a social at headquarters on February 14th, gents 1s., lady and gent 1s. 6d. Passed, that we have a pair show February 7th (entries 7d.). Judge, Mr. F. Proctor. Also that we have two nest feather shows on June 20th and July 22nd. It is most desirous that we make the social a financial success, and the secretary would be much obliged for any offer of refreshments.—J. Gerrard, Sec.

STOKE-ON-TRENT C.B.A.

First annual meeting held headquarters, January 3rd. There was an excellent attendance. Secretary's report on the work of the past year was listened to very attentively. The statement of accounts showed a balance in treasurer's hands of 15s. 7d., which was considered very satisfactory. A vote of thanks to the retiring officers was unanimously carried. Much regret was expressed when Mr. T. Hawley declined to take office as chairman again. Following officers were elected: Chairman, Mr. H. George; Vice-Chairman, Mr. G. Lea; Treasurer, Mr. W. Roberts; Secretary, J. Pitchford; Auditors, C. Clay and T. Walker. Dr. List was elected a Vice-President. Two new members were elected, Messrs. A. Peake (Stoke) and R. Parker (Chesterton). Mr. Pitchford then presented a nice cup to the society, which was accepted with thanks. As time was getting short, members will decide at a future meeting how it will be competed for. It was decided to have a table show of matched pairs for breeding, for novice only, at our next meeting, February 5th, five classes: Nor. yell. cock and buff hen, buff cock and yell. hen., Yorks. ditto, and pairs for muling. Messrs Roberts, Lea and Davis will judge. Now, novices, this is your night; take advantage of it.—J. Pitchford, Sec.

CHELTENHAM C.B.S.

Annual general meeting held January 10th, the President (Mr. W. Theobald) in chair. There was a good attendance. The Secretary in his report stated that the year has been a very satisfactory one. They had enrolled a number of new members, who more than filled the places of those who had dropped out. The interest in the various shows, lectures and competitions had been well maintained, and the open show had proved a record. Everything in fact had passed off without a hitch, and no complaint had been received. Unfortunately there was an adverse balance of £4 10s. The President set a splendid example by giving £2 towards covering the loss, the remainder will be made up by the members, so that we can start the year free from debt. Mr. Grant, the popular chairman, resigned that office owing to pressure of business, and was heartily thanked for his past services. The Secretary thanked all members for the help given, and paid special tribute to his co-Secretary, without whom it would be impossible to run the show, and who, they would all be sorry to know, was unable to be present, owing to his wife's illness. Following officers appointed: President, Mr. W. Theobald; Chairman, Mr. D. Lewis; Vice-Chairman, Mr. J. Hand; Auditors, Messrs. Lewis and Hands; Hon. Auctioneer, Mr. J. H. Boulter; Assistant Hon. Secretary and Show Manager, Mr. Pounsett; Hon. Secretary and Treasurer, A. S. Treasure.—A. S. Treasure, Hon. Secretary.

BRADFORD EAST O.S.

Fifth annual tea, concert and prize distribution held at Park Chapel Schools, January 9th, when an excellent tea was provided by the members' wives and friends. Over 100 persons sat down, and the tea proved a decided success. Unfortunately, our respected President, Mr. E. Suddards and his wife were prevented from attending, business reasons having called them away to London on the Monday, and thus we were obliged to find substitutes as chairman and a lady to present the prizes. This is the only function in connection with the Society that the President has missed. Mr. G. White, Vice-President, officiated as chairman, and a splendid programme of music, etc., was well maintained by the following popular artistes, each of whom was deservedly encored: Miss A. Hudson (soprano), Miss D. Cruise (elocutionist), Messrs. E. Ludlam (bass), W. Thornton (humorist), Jack Major (humorous elocutionist), along with Miss A. M. Cruise as accompanist. The society feel it would not be like an annual concert if Miss Cruise were not officiating at the piano, for she has obliged us on every occasion that her services have been required, and we appreciate her great kindness. During the interval in the programme, Mrs. G. White kindly presented the prizes to each successful competitor in the members' shows, and the following received valuable prizes: Messrs. F. Allen, W. Stables, C. E. Walker, H. Hill, W. Laycock, G. White, J. Northrop, and Riley Bros. In the champion section. Messrs. Cowell and Calloway, E. Riley, S. Midgley, J. Wroe, G. R. Rushworth, J. Rhodes, W. Turner, and S. B. Grayston in the Novice section, and Mr. J. Gregson and Mr. W. Gornall in the Extra Novice section, Mr. J. Farrar and G. R. Rushworth in the Selling Class section. Some splendid prizes were on view, and no doubt will encourage many who were present and had not obtained one, to be up and doing this year, when another lot of valuable prizes will be given for competition. Mr. H. Hill (the Secretary) gave a brief resume of the year's work, and complimented the members on the progress made throughout the last year, when in membership alone the society had advanced from 65 to 79 members, enabling us to take second place in numerical strength of the societies affiliated with the Yorkshire Union. Remarks were also made in his address with regard to the part the society had taken in the recent National Show for Cinderella Club funds, and it was a matter of congratulation to them to know that the magnificent sum of £62 4s. 10d. had been handed over to this deserving charity, thereby benefiting many poor children in the city, and providing them with food and clothing. Mr. Hill thanked all who had taken part in the annual tea and concert, thereby making it a success, and well up to the standard of previous annual events. The programme was then continued, the meeting terminating with the National Anthem. —H. Hill, Sec.

HULL C.B.S.

Annual meeting held January 1st, 34 members present. Secretary reported the club would have a good balance in band, and that the audited balance sheet would be presented at next meeting. The Chairman, Mr. Geo. W. Oliver, not being present (being at the Scottish National Show) and having intimated he did not seek re-election, Mr. F. H. Stamford was elected chairman, along with the following: Vice-chairman, Mr. A. Clayton; hon. treasurer, Mr. F. S. Howe; hon. secretary, Mr. Ernest R. Ridley; auditors, Messrs. Cross and Lambert; hon. solicitor, B. Suddaby, Esq.; hon auctioneer, W. Clark, Esq.; Committee, Messrs. Barwick, Bray, Frith, Harland, Longborn, Mason, M'Kay, Parkes, Pepper, W. T. Prentice, H. Points cups and medals won during 1911 were presented, Mr. F. H. Stamford being declared winner of the cup in the champion section; Mr. J. Precious, gold medal; Mr. Geo. Harland, silver medal; Mr. F. F. Potter received the novice cup, which now becomes his own property, he having won it twice previously; Mr. H. Frith, gold medal; Mr. A. Clayton, silver medal; Mr. J. Precious, most points Mule and British section, gold medal.—E. R. Ridley, Sec.

SHEFFIELD C.B.S.

Meeting held Jan. 4th, Wentworth Cafe, Penstone Street, Mr. F. Jones (president) in chair, supported by the vice-presidents, Messrs. J. Thorpe and T. Hemming. After a good deal of discussion it was decided we adopt the Yorks. Union definition of a tick; and also ask Mr. J. C. Barnes to come and explain the Union's rule. Several members promised to bring birds to illustrate same. Also decided, that February meeting be a table show of matched pairs for novices; one class each Yorks. and Nor.; fixed prize money, 2s. 6d. special for best pair, and no entry fee. Any member joining same night is eligible to compete. A great amount of work is in hand for the committee; instructions to discuss the subject of point specials, cups, and shows; and many excellent recommendations for the programme of present year are down for their consideration. Several specials are already promised for a washing competition for novices; others to follow. Annual open show date fixed for Dec. 14th, and our leading judges were named and voted upon, the two highest in votes we hope to secure. After the election of new members (Messrs. W. Blunt, F. W. Barnes, and F. Daniels), the judge, Mr. Browning, gave an interesting talk on the four winning pairs. He dealt with the various points, and at the close a very hearty vote of thanks was accorded him.—J. Woolhouse, Assistant Sec.

LEEDS C.B.S.

Annual general meeting, held Jan. 6, Lockhart's Cafe, Briggate, Mr. H. J. Mennard in chair. Balance sheet for 1911 showed a cash balance in band of £9 10s.; this was considered satisfactory, and brought forth eloquent remarks from the chairman, and the members kindly presented secretary with £3 3s. as a token of appreciation. Sec. replied, thanking the members for their kindness. Result of ballot for Committee and officers: President, F. Somers, Esq., M.R.C.V.S.; Vice-presidents, W. Turton, Esq., W. Greenwood, Esq., and M. Kitchin, Esq.; chairman of committee, Mr. C. E. Hall; vice-chairman, Mr. H. J. Mennard; committee, Messrs. J. Chambers, A. G. Rhodes, W. Johnson, J. Owen, F. Farrar, W. H. Norton, W. Bristow, H. Smith, J. R. Beckwith, and T. Baldwinson; hon. treasurer, Mr. E. Norton; assistant hon. sec., Mr. J. P. Moir; hon. sec., Mr. W. A. Wilson. Decided that Leeds open show date be fixed for 12th Oct. Will societies in close proximity kindly note to avoid clashing? Judges' names to be advertised in a week or so. Two new members elected: Messrs. R. Cliffe and W. Milner. As we are again including members' names and addresses along with the variety they keep in 1912 Year Book, I invite all intending members to join us at Feb. 3 meeting, and so be in time to have their names printed and also be eligible to exhibit at March 2 pair show. Winning number for bird and cage (given in connection with last Boxing Day show) is 45; kindly apply to sec. for same. Do not forget, members; come in full force to Feb. meeting.—W. A. Wilson, Hon. Sec.

BORDER CITY (Carlisle) O.S.

Annual general meeting held Headquarters, Jan. 3rd, under the chairmanship of Mr. G. Davidson. A large number of members were present; in fact, it was our largest and most enthusiastic meeting. Balance sheet adopted unanimously, showing a balance in hand. Officers elected:—President, E. J. Brook, Esq.; sec., J. C. Bell; treasurer, G. Davidson; show manager, T. J. Robson; the old committee practically elected en bloc with following additions: Messrs. Higgins, Cubby, Holmes, Palfrey, and Frank Bell. A slight addition was made to rules. Date of open show practically fixed for same date as last year. That enthusiastic fancier, T. Holmes, had on exhibition two solid silver cups which he is presenting the society for competition at our open show, the one he presented before having been won outright by Mr. F. F. Lawson, and the thanks of the society were extended to Mr. Holmes for his kindness. Mr. Wilson brought before the meeting a suggestion to have a small confined show, to be held at Stanwix, radius to be fixed at twelve miles from Carlisle. After discussion this matter was left over to find out what expenses would be incurred, and if it would do the society any good. A special meeting was decided on for Jan. 8th to go fully into the matter. Votes of thanks were passed for services rendered by officials, etc.—Meeting held Jan. 8th, re Stanwix show. After discussion it was thought inadvisable, owing to the expense and as the show season is practically over, we should not go on further with this scheme, but leave it until another year. In its place a members' pair show will be held, February 8th; at same time to hold a judging competition for members, and prizes of 5/-, 2/6, and 1/6. Classes arranged: Bord., Nor., Yorks., and Hyb. Pairs most suitable for breeding with British and foreign, singly or in pairs; prize money on sliding scale.—J. C. Bell, Sec.

OBITUARY.

MR. A. WHITWORTH (Rochdale.)

I am sorry to have to inform you of the death of Mr. A. Whitworth, of 7, Clement Royds Street, who was one of the founders of the Rochdale O.S., writes Mr. R. Blincoe, the sec. Mr. Whitworth was 72 years of age, and has been connected with us for over 27 years; he has probably bred more birds than anyone in this district, and was an acknowledged expert in all matters relating to them, many of our most successful fanciers of Lancashires getting their first birds from him. He has done an enormous amount of work for the benefit of this society, and much of its success has been due to his efforts and those of Mrs. Whitworth, who has ably assisted him in every undertaking. His loss will be greatly felt Palace Show.—A class, No. 92a, has been added to schedule in the Novice Section for Cinnamons. A special room has been engaged in which the Rollers are to be judged. Labels will be posted to exhibitors on Saturday, Jan. 27.—Advt.

All prize-money won at the Scottish National C.B.S. Show, writes Mr. A. W. Watson, the hon. sec., was paid out by Jan. 11. Will anyone overlooked kindly write me? Specials are now being sent out as received from donors.

We have been notified of the following corrections in show reports:—Tunbridge Wells, yell. Yorks, 3rd, Mr. C. Lockett; Irvine, 3rd in hen and cock Common Canarics, Mr. Liles (not Moyles), and vhc in Britsih Goldies, Mr. Liles (not Myles).

Ladies are specially invited. Seats reserved on application to J. W. Ramsden, Show Manager.—Advt.

Mr. H. Hill, secretary of the Bradford National Cage Bird Show, writes:—I shall esteem it a favour if secretaries of the various specialist clubs, and especially those whose patronage was obtained for the last show, will kindly bear in mind that all specialist clubs' patronage will be applied for for the second annual show, to be held Dec. 6 and 7. Will secretaries please make a note of this?

Allow me to say how we appreciate the management of Sunderland Show, write Messrs. Martin and Archer (Huddersfield). Our birds were home by eight o'clock last Saturday evening, none the worse for the long journey. This is indee encouraging, and if other shows would only follow in the steps of our friends at Sunderland the short entry cry would be at an end We wish them every success. They deserve to prosper for the kindness we have received at their hands.

An Astounding Production.

A mammoth issue of "The Poultry World" is on sale to-day at all newsagents and bookstalls. It marks the first number of the enlarged edition of this popular periodical, and although containing numerous additional photographs and articles, with a sensational Coloured Plate (illustrating some fifty birds), and a beautiful Art Plate, it is on sale at the popular price of one penny. Readers interested in utility and exhibition poultry should not miss this astounding production.

Cinnamon C.C. Annual Meeting.

A meeting of the Cinnamon C.C. will be held at Crystal Palace Show on Feb. 3, at 4.30 p.m., place of meeting to be notified on winning yellow cock's cage, writes Mr. J. M. Metcalfe, the hon. sec.

Peterhead Fanciers, Please Note!

In reply to my advertisement in last week's Cage Birds, writes Mr. Robt. Jeffrey (Govanhill, Glasgow), I had a reply-paid telegram sent me from Peterhead, but neither name or address was given. I went to the post office here, but they said I could do nothing. Will the sender please write me?

Young Starlings in December.

A pair of Starlings were to be seen at Penrhyn busily feeding a brood of fully-fledged young, hatched two days before Christmas. A similar case happened about the same time last year, and some people think that it is the same pair of birds.

A White Hedge Sparrow.

I have in my possession a pure white Hedge Accentor (or Sparrow, as some call it), writes Mr. Cundell (Doncaster). It is a male bird, and I caught it about a month ago. I may say he is giving his little song as I pen these few lines.

A Correction.

Your reporter at Glasgow Show says that the first yellow cock was not a popular winner of the Border Fancy Club's medal, writes Mr. J. Craig, the judge, but I beg to point out that the bird he mentions as the favourite (the buff cock) did not compete, as it had won its complement of medals before. [We much regret our reporter's error.—Editor.)

L.C.B.A. Annual Dinner,

The annual dinner of the L.C.B.A. will be held in the Sheraton Hall, Popular Cafe, near Piccadilly Circus (Jermyn Street entrance), on Monday, Feb. 5, when an excellent repast and a specially selected light entertainment will be provided, with the object of surpassing previous successes; tickets 4s., which may be obtained of Mr. John Tyson, 169, Sloane Street, London.

Will Things be Lively?

We hear that the agenda for the Crested Canary Club's annual meeting, which will be held at the Crystal Palace, in the Board Room, on Saturday, Feb. 3, at 3 p.m., is likely to provide plenty of debatable matter. For instance, the adoption of closed rings is moved, to prevent over-year birds competing in current year classes; the adoption of a uniform show cage; the withholding of support to all shows extending over Sunday; the extension of the novice time limit; etc.

Southern N P.C. Annual Meeting.

The annual general meeting of the Southern Norwich Plainhead Club will be held at the Crystal Palace, in the Board Room, at four o'clock, on Saturday, Feb. 3, 1912, and a most hearty welcome is given to all Norwich fanciers to attend whether members or not. If any person wishing to join communicates with the secretary, he will be pleased to nominate them, on receipt of 1s. entrance fee.—F. S. Matthes, 34, Rotherhithe New Road, S.E.

I wish to congratulate you on your splendid calendar and coloured plates, which I think are a perfect treat. I have been a reader of Cage Birds for ten years, and have found it very beneficial and instructive.—John Henderson, secretary, Partick and Dis. C.B.S.

I think the latest Birthday Issue of Cage Birds the finest production of art I have ever seen. The calendar will be cherished by all fanciers, and I am sure the artist deserves the highest praise that can be given him. The other plates of the foreign birds and hybrids are also magnificent.—G. Grant (Dartmouth).

We cordially thank the senders of the many congratulatory letters which have reached us, and regret that space does not permit the publication of all of them this week.—Ed.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. Kills all insects. Harmless to everything else.

THE PAINTED FINCH AT HOME.

By W. E. TESCHEMAKER, B.A.

An Account of a lovely Australian Bird when in its native wilds.

Long years ago (1869) the late Mr. Aug. Wiener, who at one time, owned the finest private collection of foreign birds in the country, purchased from a wire-worker who was doing a job in his aviaries a pair of small birds of which the former owner did not even know the name. They proved to be Painted Finches, and were probably the first ever brought alive to Europe. The same fancier succeeded in obtaining another pair in 1873 from a hairdresser in Liverpool, and saw the dead body of one in a London bird-shop a few years later. From that date to the year 1907 it is believed that there was no recorded instance of the importation of these rare little Finches into England, which is very remarkable if, as we have been told, they can be bought in Port Darwin for 6d. each, and shows great want of enterprise on the part of the British sailor-man. In this connection it may be worth while to mention that throughout Australia "Painted Finch" is the popular name for the Gouldian Finch, which may possibly have led to some confusion of ideas.

A Good Aviarist of the "Old School."

We have now had a peep at Painted Finches in their own country; we have seen how they are caught and in what manner they have in recent years been imported, and we have got a general idea of what they look like. Let us follow the fortunes of a few of those imported in 1910, which found their way into certain English aviaries, and for the first time in avicultural history succeeded in rearing a family under the trying conditions of an exceptionally wet and cold English summer.

Of all English aviarists there is probably not one who has had anything like the same length of experience as Mr. Reginald Phillipps. One of the writer's most pleasant recollections is of a warm September afternoon a few years since when he was privileged to pay a visit to a sunny garden in West Kensington, which was completely wired in from end to end. Though small for a garden, it made, as may well be imagined, an immense cage, with immense facilities for outdoor exercise for its fortunate inmates, more especially as Mr. Phillipps is one of those wise people who like to study only a few species at a time, and those few under as natural conditions as possible.

One room had been turned into a bird-room, and through the open window of this room the birds passed freely into one-half of the aviary; the further half being divided off for breeding purposes and containing growing trees and grass. In this way Mr. and Mrs. Phillipps and their birds may be said to form one united family living under the same roof, and we can readily understand that one secret of the former's great success in breeding rare species is that he lives with his birds: the other secrets are probably unique experience and that peculiar sympathy and aptitude for understanding the requirements of birds which are a natural gift and can never be acquired.

In one season, only a few months before our visit, Mr. Phillipps bred no less than three species for the first time in this country (the Pied Rock-thrush, Blue-breasted Waxbill and Quail Finch), and had reared to the age of nine days a brood of Siberian Waxwings—surely a most remarkable record, especially when we reflect that it was achieved in an aviary on the roof of which that arch-enemy of the suburban aviarist, the London cat, holds frequent and noisy political meetings. We saw quite a little flock of the beautiful and delicate Blue-breasted Waxbills and they were so extraordinarily tame that they actually perched on the writer's head and shoulders, though he was a complete stranger to them. Mr. Phillipps' successes have been too numerous to mention, but perhaps the greatest of them was the breeding of the Regent Bower Bird.

This Kensington aviary has been standing for more than a quarter of a century, but its owner's experience goes back very many years before that date, as may be inferred from the following extract from a private letter: "I commenced bird-keeping when a country kid, fully sixty years ago—Jackdaws, Magpies, Crows, Jays, Cuckoos, also Kestrels, Hobbies and Sparrow-hawks—all taken by myself, many of them flying loose and following me about the gardens and fields. I knew much about our British Birds, but very little about forcigners (except from books) in those days."

It is with great pleasure that we present to our readers (see last issue) a portrait of Mr. Phillipps (with a tame Cuckoo), permission to use which was only obtained with great difficulty. One of Mr. Phillipps' objections was that the only photo available was taken many years ago and represents him in the prime of life; but we quite fail to see the force of this objection. Though Time "with effacing fingers" can and does efface much of a man's personality, it cannot efface a strong individuality, and that individuality we think the portrait successfully reproduces.

One of the "Modern School."

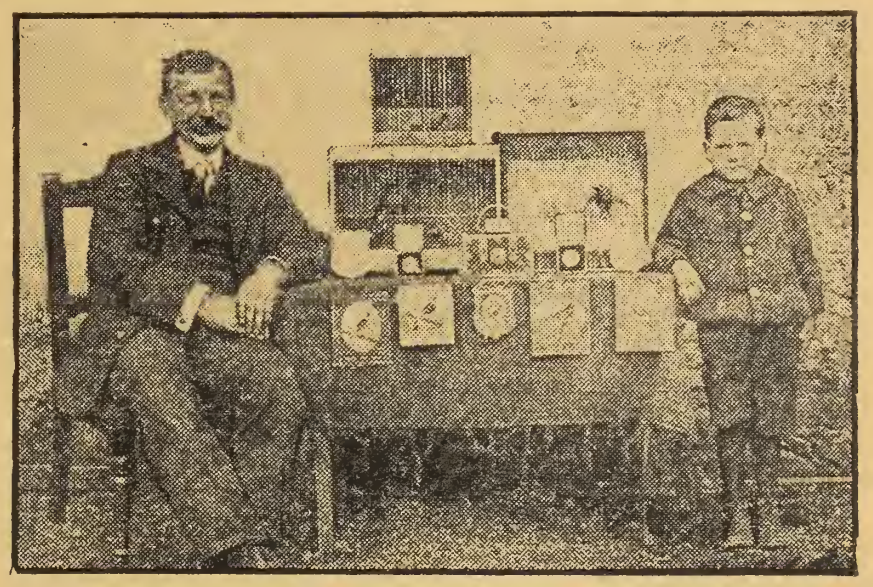
To speak of an "Old School" and a "Modern School" of aviculture is perhaps to draw a purely imaginary and non-existent line; nevertheless, if there be such a thing as a Modern School, we could hardly find a better or more popular representative than Mr. H. Willford. In this hustling century we like to do things quickly and on a large scale. In a very few years Mr. Willford has erected near Ryde, in the Isle of Wight, the most extensive private aviaries in the country (not including under this description, of course, Pheasantries and enclosures for Wildfowl), and has brought together a wonderful collection of foreign and indigenous birds. Here may be seen wired enclosures up to 70ft. square, mostly of the "wilderness" type, and altogether there is fully an acre under wire. Centrally situated and above the level of the aviaries is a large studio-lounge, with a flight of steps leading down into the aviaries and another flight leading up to a roomy look-out platform on the roof.

A Close Race and a Popular Winner.

For some reason or another quite a number of aviarists had set their hearts on breeding the Painted Finch, in 1910. Perhaps the fact that this handsome little species, though long known to exist in the far interior of Australia, had been so very rarely imported, lent a halo of romance to its name; perhaps the fact that two well-known societies were ready to award a medal for the first young Painted Finch fully reared, added a little stimulus to the competition; be this as it may, the result was a race, and as there was plenty of raw material to draw upon (nearly sixty pairs having been imported that year), and as all the competitors obtained their birds from the same consignment, and so got a fairly level start, the race was keenly contested. Some of the competitors made a big effort to pull off the event. Mr. Willford had quite six pairs to breed from. Mr. W. R. Temple, of Datchet, had about the same number and gave up an entire aviary to the experiment.

Many and varied were the experiences of the competitors. In a pleasantly written letter Mr. Temple told us that he had a persistent run of bad luck, losing no less than seven hens one after the other from egg-binding; he also found the cocks very pugnacious, as was only to be expected perhaps seeing that all birds which have scarlet in the plumage are born fighters, and he concluded by saying that he thought that the medal for this species ought to be of "gold, set with diamonds," the true inwardness of which remark we can better grasp when we recollect that Painted Finches sold at that time for not less than £3 a pair!

The result of this sporting event was that Mr. Willford romped in an easy winner, the writer was a bad second, and Mr. Phillipps a good third, no other competitors as far as could be ascertained succeeding in producing a young Emblema. Mr. Phillipps, however, had his revenge in the following season, for, starting with two pairs, he finished up with a little flock of fourteen, and can thus probably claim to have bred more Painted Finches than any other aviarist, and to be the only one to establish a breeding strain.



THE OLD SCHOOL AND THE NEW.

Mr. J. E. Clarke, of Rothesay, and his son, with some of his winning British birds, also medals, etc., 2nd at the Palace, Scottish National, and Rothesay Shows. Mr. Clarke is a member of "Cage Birds League," and the son, too, is a keen fancier.

The Thrilling Hobby of Hybrid Breeding.

By D. E. ALEXANDER (Bangor).

Canaries do not care for these seeds, but most British Finches are very partial to them, particularly to the sorrel, which, where it grew, was stripped so quickly as it ripened that I often, in my frequent tours through the fields, almost felt annoyed with the big batches of Redpolls dangling from its slender stems with a boldness that permitted one to approach within a few feet of them before they flew off with a chitter chatter, only to return in a few seconds. These two seeds, and what I could spare of mouse-ear and ripe chicken-weed from my caged Canaries, constituted at this period the staple food of my Hybridising pairs, with, of course, as much hemp, etc., as they would eat.

I never saw either the Bullie or Linnet touching the egg-food, and to this fact I attribute the robustness and vivacity of the young Hybrid reared by its own parents, as compared with the sickly "worm" which the Canaries fed on egg. After they are once well started they thrive under the Canary all right, but somehow the domesticated species cannot or will not trouble with the newly-hatched Bullie Hybrid.

An Attentive Hen Bullie.

A better and more attentive mother than my English Bullfinch hen could nowhere be found, but still circumstances for which she was not responsible prevented her from altogether rearing her own brood. I had seen the Linnet visit the nest frequently when she was foraging on the floor, and by the commotion in the nest I concluded he was doing a father's duty.

When the young were about a week old I thought I heard less stir than usual proceeding from the nest, which I had so far only looked at once. I therefore dared to push my hand through the bush, and what was my horror to find only one youngster. On looking around I found three dead ones at the far corner from where the nest was situated. Their toes were eaten off, and I at once concluded that this was the work of an unnatural father. Fortunately the best one was left—probably he was too heavy to carry out—and I had him at once removed to a Canary's nest.

However, I was so pleased with the way the Bullfinch had done her maternal duties, that I dropped into her nest two grey mules some two or three days older than her own offspring. These she successfully reared, and one of them proved the biggest Linnet mule I got that season. I should mention that the Linnet seldom or never fed the mules, and never attempted to pull them out of the nest.

As for the Hybrid it never looked back, even when transferred to the Canary. It turned out a splendid cock, but just as the beautiful crimson was breaking out upon its breast it met with an accident, and died. I was in Scotland at the time, and had left the birds in charge of my wife. It was a terrible blow to her as well as to the writer. I felt sick at heart for many days after I got her letter telling me of the unexpected disaster to one of my very best Bullie Hybrids. So that after all, I had only saved to me one Linnet and one very fine cock Goldie Hybrid, both of which I still have in my possession.

The Next Best Thing.

During the past season I had but little success with Hybrid breeding, although I gained experience that will stand me in good stead during the ensuing season. I foolishly flew together three hen Bullies—one Siberian and two Britishers—in the room with the Greenfinch and a new Siberian Goldfinch. You see I was aiming at bigger game. One of the British hens persisted in trying to mate with the Siberian of her own sex, and I had to remove her. But it was the Goldfinch that really spoiled my chances. The foreign Bullfinch was backward in comparison with her Goldie mate, who was bubbling over with condition. The Greenfinch was in like fettle, with the result that immediately the English hen showed indications of calling, the Greenfinch would break into a flood of song, while the jealous Goldfinch on every occasion dashed down when the mates were in the act of pairing and spoiled my chances of Greenie-Bullie Hybrids. Moral: Don't put two exceptionally game Finches in one aviary, nor two hen Bullies, if you want young Hybrids.

This was the same hen Bullie that reared the mules, and with the benefit of last year's experience I hope to be more successful with her during the coming season. The Siberian hen ultimately laid five eggs in an ordinary nest-pan, and sat a few days. This was in September, and too late for her Goldie mate, who had by that time dropped into the moult. However, both birds promise better things for next year.

Wild-Bird Life.

Downs and Uplands.

It is good to get away out upon the downs and uplands far from "the busy haunts of men" in the mild, almost spring-like weather. The one-time brown fields have taken on more than a touch of green, for the sown corn, like the grass, has been growing all the winter. The Skylarks are numerous, flying here and there, calling and twittering in silvery tones, very pleasant to listen to in this usually dreary month of January. The birds are bright and cheerful, full of life and spirits. Occasionally, one more forward than the others extends his flight, mounting for a few minutes in the air, warbling a pleasant, cheerful melody. The song has not the force and power of that of the mated birds, but is perhaps quite as welcome, coming now, as when the hedgerows and woods are full of fine songsters, who sing from dawn until sundown, when the Nightingale breaks the stillness of the night with his glorious melody; and so we frequently get birdy music as long as we care to listen to it.

Although there are plenty of birds about, they are more or less scattered, not in the vast flocks and companies usually seen in most winters, although the Finches are naturally more or less gregarious, and if not in huge flocks, are met with in small parties. One seldom comes upon a single bird quite by himself out in the open. The Greenfinches haunting the gardens appear to be quite happy in the company of the Sparrows, and one often gets a glimpse of golden wings fluttering among the dingy ones belonging to the domestic Sparrow. These latter birds have not been quite so persistent with their attention among the poultry and round the aviaries, as usual; food is still plentiful in the open, and until real wintry weather comes they are content with foraging further afield.

The Hedge Sparrow or Dunnock is a common object along every hedgerow, and his shrill notes can frequently be heard out on the open downs, where, perched upon a spray or bramble, he pipes his sbrillest. No doubt he is doing his best to entice some lady Dunnock to share his fortunes in the coming spring. These birds are among the earliest of our smaller birds to commence nesting operations.

CANARY QUERIES.

Half-a-Dozen.

Dacre L. Flynn.—(1) Your feeding is not correct. For the next month or so give a staple of plain canary only. Every second day give half-a-teaspoonful of summer rape separately, and on tbe alternating days twice a week give a similar quantity of crushed sponge cage sprinkled with equal parts maw and gold of pleasure, and on one or two other days the same quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, millet, teazle, and black rape. Give a spray of watereress three times a week if available. In the drinking water give the same course as advised to "nil desperandum." (2) The pride of Norwich hens depends solely upon their typical qualities, and, of course, the vendor. It ranges from 3s. each upwards, to 20s. or 30s., or even more for highly bred pedigree stock bens. Sorry I cannot name a dealer. Look in the advertisement columns, where you will find plenty. (3) Look through these replies this week, and you will find in one detailed instructions for exterminating red mites. (4) Yes, you may quite safely give Canaries such wild seeds as thistle and teazle, or, in fact, auy of the usual wild seeds you find they appreciate. You will soon discover which kind they reject, and it is waste of time to supply those kinds. Use these seeds the same as you do a special mixture. (5) The tasteless pepper—so-called—which you will see prominently advertised in our columns at the proper season—about August to October—is the best thing to colour feed on. You should get the book on "Colour Feeding," which our Manager would send you for 3½d. post free. (6) Probably five or six years is the average age Canaries reach—not the limit, mind you. I have myself had one die at the ripe age of a little over 20 years.

Show Cages (Cages).—The usual size of show cages is 12ins. or 13ins. long, 12ins. high, and 5ins. or 5½ins. deep. You should adbere to these measurements as closely as possible.

Bare on Back (Yorkshire).—You probably allowed this hen to go on breeding too long last year. See reply to "D. J. R. R." for hen with bald head in last week's issue, and treat your bird the same, but discontinue anointing any part wheu the quills are pushing through well. The bird will probably get all right when the spring gets a little advanced.

Fears of Starving (J. M.—There is not the slightest reason for your anxiety about starving the bird. The dietary I prescribed for him is amply sufficient to keep him very far off starvation. The fact that he has made such a fine improvement in health and condition ought to convince you that the diet was plenty good enough. Now, instead of increasing it, I am going to advise you to still further reduce it, so please don't think I am aiding and abetting starvation. Continue the same general dietary, but give the banana twice only each week, and, when available, substitute a spray of watercress for it. Also drop the sponge cake to twice each week, and omit the oil and sherry altogether. It would do no harm to repeat the previous treatment for a fortnight in a fortnight hence, though if the bird still keeps quite well such treatment is superfluous.

Sits Like a Ball (nil desperandum).—The hen is in a generally congested condition. For the next month give a staple diet of plain canary only. Every third day give half-a-teaspoonful of egg food or crushed sponge cake well sprinkled with a mixture of equal parts maw and gold of pleasure, and on the alternating days give one day a fair sized spray of watercress and next day half-a-teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts inga, black rape, teazle and linseed. If available, chop up two nice fat mealworms, and mix in the sponge cake each time for the first week, and also break open a grape and fix it on the end of a perch for bird to peek at. Add six drops of syrup of rhubarb, and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a split pea to the drinking water every second day for a week, and in the next week four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and dilute sulphuric acid every second day.

Stopped Singing (Mrs. Corben).—You should have said how you feed and where you keep the birds, which would have made the case more clear. See that he is kept in a bright and cosy place. Give a staple of plain canary seed only. Every second day give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake sprinkled with maw, and on the alternate days a similar quantity of summer rape. Twice a week give also a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, millet, and linseed, and two leaves of dandelion four times a week, if you can get the latter in good condition. In the water give 10 drops of syrup of buckthorn for two days, and afterwards 20 drops of whiskey, five each of oxymel of squills and ipecacuanha wine, and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a threepenny-piece every second day for a week.

A Trifle Vague (Colour-fed, Bacup).—To my mind your letter seems a little contradictory. You say the birds that have not been colour-fed are doing well, but that they "stand huddled up." As regards the three Yorkshires, if you mean would the fact of their not being colour-fed at this last moult after being so fed at previous moults, affect their health adversely, I must say certainly not. Indeed, if colour-feeding were injurious they ought certainly to have been all the better now for not being fed. As a matter of fact, I suspect your feeding generally is the cause of your trouble. Give a staple of plain Canary only. Every second day give separately a half teaspoonful of summer rape. On the alternate days give a similar quantity of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed. Three times a week give a pinch of equal parts hemp, inga, millet, and teazle, and on each remaining day a scrap of green food or sweet fruit. Continue this feeding for two or three weeks, then go to the general dietary given in "Canary Breeding for Beginners." In the drinking water give the same course of aperients and tonics as advised to "G. Moore."

A Problem (Willie, Ireland).—I am afraid the hen in question is one of those abnormal creatures who never do any good. Both birds might, probably were, somewhat out of conditiou last season, but the hen was certainly the chief delinquent. It is just possible she may do better the coming season, but I would advise you not to build any hope upon her. Rather get another healthy young hen, suitable for the cock, and then run the cock alternately with both during the coming season, and thus avoid drawing another blauk season. Keep this hen out of hearing of the cock until the mating season arrives, and for the next month give a staple of plain canary seed, a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake once a week, and a scrap of green food or sweet fruit three times a week. In the water add a crystal of sulphate of soda, the size of a small pea three times a week for a fortnight. Limit diet solely to above. Keep one or two china nest eggs lying about cage floor for her to try issues with, and when nesting season arrives she may have learnt to leave such objects alone. Get CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL as soon as ready, and you will find these troubles solved more fully than it is possible to do here.

Bare and Irritable (F. Miller).—Examine cage well for red mites; probe crevices and hinges of door with a pin on to a sheet of white paper. If any mites are found thoroughly overhaul cage. Place bird in a temporary one, and give a bath daily, in which a few drops of essence of quassia have been mixed. Clean its usual cage, and wash out well with a solution of Jeyes' or Izal—a teaspoonful in half a pint of water—working it well into the crevices with a small paint brush. Repeat operation twice at intervals of a day, and after the third dressing run a drop of pure Jeyes' or Izal into every crack or hole. Repaint or distemper cage if necessary, and return bird when quite dry. Clean wall thoroughly where cage has been hanging. In addition, keep bird in a cosy place free from draughts, and give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur and sprinkled with maw seed every third day for a month, and during the same time add 20 drops of whisky and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a sixpence to its drinking water twice a week.

Large White Excreta (G. Moore).—It is the outcome of a sluggish and somewhat plethoric condition. The following treatment for two or three weeks will put things right. As a staple diet, give a mixture of two parts canary to one part summer rape. Twice a week give a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, black rape, inga, and linseed, and two or three times a week a spray of watercress or any other green food that may be available in good condition. Limit the food to this. Keep cages clean, and the floors strewn with clean gritty sand. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a crystal of sulphate of soda, the size of a split pea, every second day for a week, and in the next week give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day. The sample of hemp sent is very poor quality. Try to get a better sample in which the kernel is nice and white. The rape appears a nice sample, but I did not test the flavour. It should have been packed quite separate.

Feathers Still Falling (Bruce).—First of all see that the birds are not exposed to great extremes of temperature or cold draughts. If they are, these causes must be removed before treatment will be of any avail. Until feathers cease dropping, give a staple diet composed of three parts canary to one part rape. Every second day for a fortnight give a half teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed, and on the alternate days a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, millet, and linseed. Give a pinch of Epsom salts in the water for one day. Then dissolve a dram of ammoniated citrate of iron and quinine in two ounces of sherry, add two teaspoonfuls of glycerine, and give 20 drops of this in the water two days in every three for a fortnight.

Goes "Click-Click" (Fairfield, Govan).—Probably a little more generosity in diet would do good, though you do not give any details of your dietary. Also, you must remove the exciting cause before any treatment will do any permanent good. In your case I suspect it is either cold draughts, or, perhaps, hanging the bird too high, and in such a position that it is affected by the fumes of burning lights in the evenings. In addition to the staple seed diet, give a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, prepared as advised to "Bruce," every third day for a fortnight, next day give a pinch of maw and a morsel of banann, and the following day a pinch of mixed seeds. Add 12 drops of syrup of buckthorn to its water for one day, and afterwards 20 drops of whisky, five each of oxymel of squills and ipecacuanha wine, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, every second day for a fortnight.

Roller Hen Ill (Fred Underwood).—Your treatment is very faulty. First of all see that the bird is in a comfortable position, not overheated, but yet quite away from the cold side, and fairly equable, and free from draughts. Then put on a staple diet of plain canary seed only. Every second day give half a teaspoonful of summer rape separately and a morsel of banana, and on the alternate days a similar quantity of crushed sponge cake, well sprinkled with a mixture of equal parts maw and gold of pleasure. Break open a grape and fix it on the end of a perch for the bird to peck at. Limit the diet to this for a fortnight, and in the first week add six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a split pea to the water daily for two days, and every second day for the remainder of the week, and in the second week give 20 drops of Chemical Food in the water every second day. See that all your seeds and food are sweet and sound.

Evil Communications (W. T. Blair).—If the three good singers you refer to are trained Rollers, I would not advise you to risk introducing the two cocks, with undesirable notes into the same room. The song of these two birds will now be fairly well fixed, and the probability of their dropping bad notes which are now fixed, or exchanging them for good ones, is very small, whilst the risk of corrupting the song of the other birds is great. The only way of getting the pure Canary song back would be to let the birds hear nothing but good Canaries singing, in which case you have to take the above risk, or keeping them in company of good singing Canaries all through next moult, whilst they are off song themselves. Then, they might improve, but the result is very doubtful. Much better get rid of them.

Roller Cock Too Forward (J. Booth).—Certainly the cock was wasting energy when he was in the condition you describe, but it would have been sheer folly to have mated the birds in your circumstances. You have done quite the right thing in moving the hen to another room, where you should keep her until ready for mating. Do not, by any means, remove the cock to the cold room from the warm kitchen until the weather gets fairly settled and mild. Meantime keep him well away from the fire or burning lights where the temperature is fairly equable, and quite free from draughts. If he is still very excitable, put on plain canary seed for a day or two, and, in any case, add a crystal of sulphate of soda, the size of a split pea, to his water for two days.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

An Ailing Green Cardinal.

H. C. Banbury.—In the first place a kitchen is a very unsuitable place to keep birds; temperature too variable, especially between day and night, but after 18 months it ought to be fairly acclimatised to its surroundings. Diet: A mixture of four parts each of canary and white millet, and one part each of oats, hemp and sunflower seeds, well mix and use this as the staple diet; also supply ripe fruit, several mealworms or other insects (daily), green food, and keep a small tin of ants' eggs in the cage. The Green Cardinal is very fond of bathing, and should have one daily. Nothing unwholesome in your dietary, but it is not varied enough. I fear there is a draught through the cage between door and fireplace; a box cage (no smaller) would be far better. Give one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in his drinking water for one day, repeat the dose after an interval of three days, and then as required to keep the bowels moving freely, but not really loose. On intervening days for a month put the same quantity of Byno-phosphates in its drinking water. Keep a piece of cuttlebone hangingi in the cage. While out of sorts a little milk sop (sloppy) will do good if it will take it.

Ornamental Finches Out of Tone.

Anxious.—These birds should be kept warm, yet not in an ill-ventilated corner of the room. I do not know how they are kept, but open wire cages are not at all suitable, and are frequently responsible for colds and chill, and again they must not be crowded too many in one cage. Give them a mixture of canary and white millet, hang up spray millet, give a little ripe fruit occasionally, a leaf of fresh lettuce when available. Get a small quantity of the following: Teazle, charlock, clover, plaintain, lettuce, mustard, cornflower, maw, grass and cabbage seeds. Well mix and give each pair of birds a pinch twice a week. Put six drops of Dinneford's Magnesia into two tablespoonfuls of water, serving to birds in this proportion in lieu of the ordinary drinking water every fourth day for a month. When not giving the magnesia put three drops of sherry (or two of whisky) into the ordinary small drinker of water. Give clear water occasionally, and of course when the birds perk up a little, stop supplying the stimulant. They must have a bath on sunny days and of course have access to cuttle bone and grit.

Waxbills and Parrots.

Dacre F. Flynn.—Your queries are too comprehensive to be answered fully here. Get our Nutshell Booklets, "Waxbills," and "The Grey Parrot," 2½d. post free, from our Manager. (1) Canary and white millet seeds, millet sprays, green food, grit, cuttlebone and water for drinking and bathing. (2) Yes. (3) A Grey Parrot or Blue-fronted Amazon. cage. Add half-a-pint of maize to the above for an Amazon Parrot. For either kind a pinch of grit (not sand) should be added to the daily supply of seeds. (5): Yes, but owing to it only being the fortunate few, who can give them breeding accommodation not frequently. (6) Keep bowels moving freely, but not really loose, by an occasional laxative. Keep out of draught, but in a well ventilated room. Do not give slops, messes, table scraps or animal food, and the bird should not get ill. In case of indisposition, seek advice at once.

Pulling its Feathers (C. Ussher).—Your bird, a Quaker Parrakeet, is not getting sufficient varied dietary. Diet:—Seed mixture: Four parts each canary and white millet and one part each hemp, grit (not sand), oats and sunflower seeds; well mix the whole. Also supply ripe fruit, green food (leaf of lettuce), few nuts, and plain biscuit. Keep a stick, with bark on, in its cage for it to cut up. So long as the voidings are not watery loose, put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the daily supply of drinking water every fourth day, and on the intervening days the same quantity of Byno-phosphates. Spray it once a week with quassia solution; use a mist sprayer, and keep strictly out of draught till dry.

What Bird? (L. Morris).—Before I answer your query, will you kindly give me a rough idea of the shape of the bird's beak. Also the colour of its head and sides of face, and the colour also of its legs and feet. How are the toes arranged—two to front and two behind, or three to front and one behind? If you will kindly give me this information I shall hope to name it for you in next issue. I am keeping the query by me.

Birds for Box Cage (J. H.).—For breeding prospects, I should not put more than two pairs in the cage. Any of the following should do well: Gouldian Finches (40s. to 60s.), Parrot Finches (£5), Ruficauda Finches (30s.), Olive Finches (20s. to 25s.), Long-tailed Grasslinches (15s. to 25s.), Hooded Siskins (£5), Colombian Siskins (£3 or £4), Alario Finches (20s.), Cape Canaries (20s.). The above are all handsome species, and I have given approximate prices. Some of them are not easy to obtain even at these prices. If those named above are unsuitable, repeat query.

Washing a Cockatoo (H. R. Titswell).—Apart from the spraying, it all depends on how tame the bird is. If it will let you handle it, then you can wash it. Sponge it or use a mop camel hair brush, with warm soapy (carbolic) water weekly or fortnightly, and then give a final sponge with clear warm water and partially dry with a cloth. As soon as a tame bird gets used to the operation it rather seems to like it. There are no other courses, though in warm summer weather some fanciers use a fine rosed water can instead of a sprayer.

Breeding Zebra Finches (H. Y.).—(1) No, I do not think the young folk are likely to disturb the domestic arrangements of the Zebra Finches, unless they deliberately endeavoured to scare the birds, and that fairly frequently. Their play about the room and the mere noise of their presence would not, I think, harass this species. They are likely breeders. (2) A pair of either of the following would be better than Java Sparrows: Bengalese or Silverbills, or both; but do not put in more than 3 pairs. (3) They will probably breed this spring, or they might not do so till late summer. Individuals are variable, but they usually soon settle down. (4) Ants' eggs, dried flies, crushed Osborne biscuit, and crumbled sponge cake; equal parts by measure. The above keeps well; it must be made crumbly moist for use. "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1/1½d. post free from our Manager would help you.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

A Suitable Hen (Angus).—There is no reason why you should not mate a Roller hen with either a Linnet or a Goldfinch. I should not, of course, call such a hen the most suitable wife you could find.

Ailing Skylark (E. Gaul).—You are not feeding the bird generously enough. Get the "Nutshell" booklet on the Skylark and follow the advice therein. Stir half-a-teaspoonful of Parrish's chemical food (obtainable from any good chemist) into its daily supply of soft food; keep this up for three weeks, at least.

In an Aviary (Prudo).—Your aviary is a fine big place, but if you want results from hybrid pairs, you must be careful not to overcrowd it. To the cock birds you mention I should add a Bramble-finch, a Reed Bunting, a Mealy Redpoll, two more Goldfinches (Siberian, for choice), one more Linnet, and one more Lesser Redpoll. To the hens add two Siberian Bullies, a Yellowhammer and two Siskins, adding a suitable number of good Canaries, of Norwich type for preference.

A Nightingale (Anxious).—1, Paint the joint morning and evening with a little tincture of iodine; a camel-hair brush is handy to do this with. See that the bird gets some vegetable ingredient in its food daily (grated raw carrot or minced lettuce, watercress, etc.), and an occasional mild dose of saline medicine, either sulphate of soda or fluid magnesia in the drinking water. 2, You would find "Nutshells" Nos. 25 and 26 of great value to you, as a keeper of insectivorous birds. 3, No; there has never been produced a hybrid between a Nightingale and a Canary, and there is never likely to be one.

My Idea (A. H. G.).—To my idea your place is too much like a sentry-box in shape; it would be vastly improved if the length were altered to six feet. It would hold six hens and two cocks comfortably enough. You will have to be careful that no birds pop out when you open the door; a kind of wire lobby at the entrance would be the safest. At any rate, do not have the door so high. Is the 1ft. 6ins. square shown at the sides all the light you intend to provide? If so, it is not sufficient; and this window is too low down. The ventilating holes at the back want to be low down—near the floor, not the roof.

Loss of Tail and Flight Feathers (J. R. Berwyn).—You are feeding the Skylark very well indeed, and the loss of the flights, etc., has nothing to do with the nature of its food. The bird must knock out the feathers in the night, while dashing about the cage. Are you sure he cannot be disturbed?—say, by mice getting into the cage after his food, or in some other way.

Food for Snow Bunting (Snow).—I gave this at some length about two weeks ago. The only seed the Snow Bunting cares for is canary seed, and it should be given the very finest quality (Spanish) obtainable. Give a little soft food, containing plenty of ants' eggs, occasionally with a few mealworms amongst it. A little coarse oatmeal should be sprinkled on top of the canary seed now and again.

A Song Thrush (C. H.).—I consider the food you describe is not suitable—it is of too solid and heating a nature—and probably at the root of the trouble. Some vegetable ingredient is, in my opinion, essential, and ripe fruit, too. Consult the "Nutshell" booklet on the Thrush. Don't change the food too suddenly, but do it gradually, or the bird will not take to the new kind, and go out of song.

Four Items (D. L. Flynn).—1, The best way is to put them into box cages (those known as "Finch stock cages") and keep these hanging about breast high in a room wherein people are constantly moving about. If a bird is of a reasonably steady disposition he then very quickly gets over his first nervousness and settles down. 2. You must get the "Nutshell" booklets dealing with Goldfinches, Chaffinches, Thrushes and Skylarks. You will find in them full and up-to-date information concerning the food and general management. I haven't sufficient space at my command to deal with such lengthy matters. They are only twopence each. 3. Some such form is used by many dealers, but generally for Canaries, which, for purposes of identification, have a rubber-stamp mark imprinted on the under side of the wing. Dealers know very well whether a Goldfinch is a cock or a hen before they sell it; I should like to meet the man who will part with a cock at the price of a hen! 4. I should say eight to ten years. Cases exceeding this, however, have been frequently put on record.

Single or Married (Loxia).—Your cock Bullfinch will be better alone. If you introduce hens there will be fighting and blood-shed (or feather-shed, anyway). A Crystal Palace aviary would only hold one pair of Bullfinches in peace and comfort. If any of the cocks become aggressive in the spring, you will have to remove them.

The Redstart (F. Shore).—The Redstart makes a nice pet but requires good food and careful attention (see Nutshell booklet No. 25) as it is a delicate insectivorous species. The price runs from 5s. to 7s. 6d. when well on food (i.e., meated-off, and not just newly caught). The cock has a very pretty song.

Loss of Flights (Puzzled).—I have not the slightest doubt but that the loss is occasioned by the bird dashing about the cage, probably during the night. Note the reply given J. R. Berwyn this week. Can any light (from the moon, or a street lamp, etc.) shine into his cage? "Insects" would not cause it. It might be as well if you got him used to having a suitable cover thrown over his cage at night; at least, for so long as the show season is on.

A Rare Hybrid (Bob).—I presume by "Blackcap" you mean the Great Tit. It might be possible to get a hybrid by mating this bird to a Blue Tit. But a big, well-shrubbed aviary would be the only likely spot; not a cage, at any rate. I should be inclined to let the Blue Tit be the male. What food do you propose providing for them to rear

BRITISH BIRD & HYBRID QUERISTS should consult Houlton's great work, "Coge-Bird Hybrids" (7/6); Norman's "British Bird Manual" (2/3); or Part 1 "Hardbills" (1/1), Part 2 "Softbills" (1/1); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plants" (1/2); "Secrets of Hybrid Breeding" (1/2); Dr. Creswell's "Hygiene of Bird-keeping" (1/1); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each); No. 1 "Goldfinch," No. 2 "Linnet," No. 3 "Skylork," No. 4 "Song Thrush and Blackbird," No. 11 "Bullfinch," No. 13 "Chaffinch," No. 15 "Greenfinch," No. 22 "Siskin, Redpoll, and Twite," No. 25 "Small Insectivorous Birds," No. 26 "Large Insectivorous Birds," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 9 "Disinfection of Cages, Birdrooms, etc.," No. 12 "How to Moult British Birds." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Coge Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

the young (if any) upon? If by Blackcap you mean the Blackcap Warbler, then I have little hesitation in saying that you are wasting time in trying to get hybrids between it and a Blue Tit.

Tastes Differ (Campion).—I sometimes receive letters imploring me to tell writers how to prevent their birds from going on the cage bottom; now you balance matters by asking me how to compel your bird to descend to the floor. I could mention several methods calculated to keep him there (such as depositing a flat-iron on the small of his back), but I presume you would consider this kind of cure as worse than the disease. Candidly, I can't see why you want to interfere. I only wish some of my own birds would follow his example and stick to the perches. Most Goldies are very cleanly little persons, and will not go on the cage floor unless it happens to have been just newly sanded and they want to pick up some grit. It will not make the slightest difference to his chance of breeding; in fact, judging by your letter, I should think him a very likely bird indeed, and he must be in very excellent health and spirits. The signs you describe are very promising.

A Matter of Sex (J. Brown).—If your Blackbird has its body plumage, especially the breast, a deep, solid, jet black, then it is of a certainty a cock. Young cocks usually have the outer flight feathers rusty black in colour. If the breast seems perceptibly mottled in appearance (not a solid black), then may-be you have got hold of an old, good-coloured hen, and such a one usually shows traces of yellow in its bill. The Blackbird has a lovely song; you must have listened to its music, surely, seeing that you say you have so many in your neighbourhood. It is loud, and more flute-like in tone than the melody of the Thrush. Cock and hen Thrush are alike in plumage, and the only safe sex sign is the song.

Several Items (Gurney Grice).—In my opinion your Redpolls are not a true pair. If they sing very little, I should say that you have two hens; or, if the reverse, two cocks. You could have settled the matter last summer by examination of their vents. If you get a Redpoll showing red feathers on its breast you can be certain it is a cock. Enamel the breeding cage a very pale blue. The hen Canary ought to have nested, if in good health and condition; the difficulty, as a rule, is to prevent them doing so. I don't like hens inclined to be asthmatical. Try a young (1911) sound hen. Too much hemp is not good, but it does no harm in moderation. Half-a-crown to five shillings should buy you a real good house-moulted hen Greenfinch; look in the advertisement columns.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

O. E. B.—Death resulted from congestion of the lungs, following on a chill.

"Geistry Go."—There is nothing contagious; death occurred from pneumonia. It is surprising how quickly birds will succumb to this disease, ailing sometimes only a few hours. Yours is not an exceptional case, but is of daily occurrence.

W. Connolly.—Enteritis complicated with liver disease of some standing, probably due to the introduction with the food of some irritant matter.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

Two Photographs (D. C. Williams).—Accept our thanks. We shall be pleased to find a corner for them in a future issue.

Yorkshire with Flights Drawn (W. D.).—You say that you have had to draw "about four" outer flight feathers from each wing of your young Yorkshire, owing to these having become frayed, and you ask whether this would render him incligible to compete at the Palace. In our opinion it most certainly would, as the class heading reads: "..unflighted, bred 1911." Your bird cannot now be called "unflighted" in the strict meaning of that term.

A Couple of Suggestions (T. W. Vickers).—We will give these careful consideration. It is doubtful whether we can carry out the first one, but we may be able to do something in the other matter.

Two Reports (R. Holt; A. Fancier).—These will probably be found published in this issue. Pressure on space has been very severe recently, and, though we always do our best, it is impossible to guarantee insertion of reports of members' shows immediately they are received.

Newspaper Cuttings (D. Thomas; W. Schofield; A. P.; T. W.; and others).—We are much obliged to you for sending the paragraphs from newspapers.

A Photograph (J. Robinson).—We will try to reproduce this in our next issue.

Size of Aviary (D. L. Flynn).—An aviary about 12 feet long by 4 feet wide would answer (5 feet wide would be better). The height is not so important; 7 feet at back would do, with a slope to the front. One square foot of floor space to each bird about the size of a Canary is sometimes taken as a rough guide as to the holding capacity of aviaries and flight cages.

Husks (F. H. Young).—Any of the large dealers in foreign birds will supply you with cocoa-nut husk nests for use with Budgerigars. They are advertised in our columns, especially in the spring.

ISLINGTON, N.

We are having singing contests at the Lord Wolsley, White Lion Street, on January 21st. There were some good scores with Linnets at our last sing, the winners being: 1, J. Cooper; 2, Lake; 3, W. Wigg. We are having several handicaps during the week for Linnets and Chaffinches. We are going to have a Linnet tournament next week (open to all comers), names to be taken on January 21st.—Pony Moore.

MONIAIVE.

Held Jan. 13th, in the Public Hall. The management was all that could be desired, and we were pleased to see the entry greatly increased this year. Some excellent birds were forward. Mr. J. Garrow judged, and his awards were well received. Border Fancies were the best of the Canary classes, the quality being very level. The winning uneven and the green were the Muirkirk winners. The Stranraer winning buff Plainhead Norwich were again at the head of affairs, whilst a good shouldered buff piebald won in Scotch Fancies and secured special for best in show. A very good dark Goldfinch Mule won in his class. Goldfinches were an exceptionally heavy class of fifteen. The winner, however, stood clear ahead, having a wonderful blaze and being shown in exceptional condition. In the variety British bird class an excellent Hawfinch won from a good Bearded Tit, whilst a massive Bullfinch came third. The following were the principal awards.

GUILDFORD.

A very nice little collection of birds was got together by the Guildford F.A., at its show on January 16th. The quality was generally good, some capital Norwich, Yorkshires, and British being staged. Messrs. Stevens and Turner, the secretaries, were most energetic and obliging, and, being assisted by an enthusiastic lot of stewards, everything passed off well. Mr. T. J. Ambrose judged.

DAILLY (Ayrshire).

Sixth annual show held Working Men's Club Rooms, Jan. 6. Cage birds were nicely staged in one of the side rooms, an ideal place for a show of the kind, being well lighted and free from draughts. Unfortunately some of the staging was rather high, as the top row could not be seen to advantage. The entries were well up to those of former years, and quality was the best we have seen at Dailly. Mr. McKinley again scored heavily in the prize list, and won the sp. for best bird, with a fine Bullie hen. Mr. White, hon. sec., worked hard to ensure success, and was ably helped by an admirable committee. Mr. D. Holden (Muirkirk) judged, and his awards were well received.

A Novice Cinnamon Class at the Palace Show.

Sir,—Several novices have written me expressing regret that a class had not been provided for Cinnamons in the Novice Section at the Palace Show. To meet their wishes, and relying on their promise to fill same, a class has now been made, viz., No. 92a. I hope novice fanciers of the Cinnamon Canary will support this.

Prize-money and Specials at Annan Show.

Sir,—Owing to our secretary being promoted to assistant superintendent in an assurance company, he has been called away to another district since the Monday after our show, and has been somewhat handicapped in getting prize-money and specials away. If exhibitors who have not yet received their prize-money will excuse him a little, he will send it as early as he can. I hope this will help to settle the minds of those who are getting anxious.

Canary Breeding in the Winter.

Sir,—I thank you for inserting the letter I sent you a few weeks ago about early breeding. The four young birds that were hatched on Nov. 17, 18, and 19 are all doing well. I can go further now, for I have the same hen rearing three young ones. She had five eggs; one youngster was dead in the shell, and the other egg was clear. They were due to hatch on the 6th of this month. One youngster was hatched on the 5th and the other two on the 6th.

A Cup Competition at Edinburgh Open Show.

Sir,—In answer to "A Lover of the Scotch Fancy Canary" in your last issue, "A," under whose roof the eggs were laid, hands them over to "B." "A" figures in the initial stage, but "B" has all the trouble in hatching the said eggs and rearing the young birds. In my opinion, however, neither has a claim to the cup, and I do not understand how the society parted with the cup. Surely the executive were not in possession of all the facts concerning the respective parts "A" and "B" played in the laying, hatching, and rearing? One point has not been touched upon in this correspondence, and that is: To whom does the bird belong? Is "B" having a share of the bird? In other words, what is his interest beyond the laying of the eggs? Cup competitions are exclusively confined to birds belonging in every sense to the competitor, namely, the egg or eggs must be laid in his "room" or "aviary," and the birds hatched, reared, and kept till after the competition. I am certain those officials who were in office when the rule was drawn up did not intend the cup to be competed for on the basis of "A.'s" and "B.'s" combined efforts, the original intention being individual effort. I think it would only be fair that the President or Secretary should argue the point; anything short of open explanation will not satisfy the members.

A SCOTCH FANCIER.

The Decline of the Cinnamon.

What is the Cause and the Cure?

Sir,—I have often wondered if something cannot be done to make the Cinnamon Canary one of the most popular varieties. I am a great lover of a good Cinnamon, but rarely do I get the chance to have a look at a good one. We seem to go on year after year with just about the same number of exhibitors, and there seems to be very little progress made. Certainly we have got nearer the type of a Norwich, but the exhibitors do not increase as they ought to. I have been in conversation with more than one fancier who admires the bird very much, and I have asked what they think is the cause of the bird not being shown more. One fancier said "If you breed Cinnamons you cannot command a fair price for them unless you have got tip-top stuff" meaning of course, the best. Another said, there are not many classes provided for Cinnamons. Another, "I cannot get anyone to supply me with good stock birds to breed good ones." I can quite understand the reasons given above. I have bred Cinnamons, and have had a job to dispose of the surplus stock. The simple reason is that there are not many Cinnamon fanciers about. I believe societies would only be too pleased to provide classes if there were enough exhibitors; then with more exhibitors, we should soon make the Cinnamons more popular and commanding a fair price. It seems to me the Cinnamon Fancy is being killed by just a few exhibitors, who rightly or wrongly are keeping them to themselves, and who if you try to buy a good stock pair, will part only with their "weeds," and then at tip-top prices. Some will say "I don't blame them for not letting them go out of their hands." No more do I, if they do not want the Cinnamon to become popular; for that is the way to keep the variety in the background. I trust something will be done to boom the Cinnamon during this next year, so that we shall see more on our show benches. I should like to hear Cinnamon fanciers' opinions respecting the above.

LOVER OF A CINNAMON.

An Early Start in Canary Breeding.

Sir,—I have three young Canaries which hatched out on Jan. 5. They are now penfeathered, and the hen is feeding splendidly. The same hen bred and reared me twelve young ones last year. She is of the Norwich type, and is two years old. She has never had the assistance of the cock bird to feed her young, and I always take him out when she goes to nest. You may think fit to publish this. I may say I have taken your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, for three years, and have gained much information from it. I should like to know if I am the first for the 1912 season to breed Canaries? H. A. M.

Scotch Fancies and the City of Glasgow

Sir,—Is it right to leave the selecting of the Scotch Fancy committee in the hands of the President? He will persist in holding the meetings on Saturday, an evening which is not convenient for Scotch Fancy men. The disposition to play into the other sections is evident. Members at meetings are not everything; there are fanciers who would be a great benefit on the committee. Beginners are to have no say in the management. They have to be nearly two years a member before they can even vote for a judge. Is it fair? I say no. The society needs all the new members it can get, and should encourage them.

Sir,—I am sending you a photo of my old Cuckoo, taken January 7, 1912, out of doors. He is now nearing four years old. It was dull and cold weather, and this made him shiver a good deal. He is not quite through with the moult yet. He is having dinner

An Amalgamated Show at Manchester.

Sir,—We beg to inform you that four of the Cage Bird Societies in the Manchester district are holding an amalgamated members' show on Feb. 3 next. The clubs joined are as follows: North Manchester, Ardwick, Pendleton and Salford, and South Manchester. It is suggested to make the show an annual one under the name of Manchester, Salford and District Amalgamated Societies' Show. We have engaged Mr. C. Houlton as one of the judges; another to be selected later. We hope that the members will try to make the show a success.

The Food of a Nightingale.

Sir,—As one interested in Nightingales, I should like to thank Mr. Otto Puck for his letter in a recent number of CAGE BIRDS. It is far more interesting to read the experience of those who have the birds actually singing at the time of writing. My one regret is that I am so far distant as to be unable to avail myself of the opportunity afforded by Mr. Puck to call and hear his birds sing. I have kept six Nightingales at a time (purchased from different fanciers) in different cages, but have been unable to obtain any song, and, as my friends assured me from the first that I should not hear a single note, I was very annoyed when such proved the case. We all realise that it is far more difficult to get a 'Gale to sing in a cage than in an aviary, however tame he may be.

Pity the Poor Secretaries.

Sir,—Mr. Stevens thinks I have a very bad case as to what causes short entries. As a matter of fact, I have no case at all, unless he refers to my upholding the 1s. entry fee. As he did not mention that in any of his letters, I let it drop. What I did, so far as concerns Mr. Stevens, was to pass an opinion that I was beginning to think that what caused short entries was secretaries not sending schedules when applied for. In Mr. Stevens' case I made a mistake and admitted it, and although in doing so I gave Mr. Stevens a little "chaff," I thought he would have accepted it gracefully. May I now ask a favour of him, viz., in order to save me making another mistake, will he kindly put my name on his list for a schedule next season? Of course, if he thinks my entries, like my letter, are not worth troubling about, then I will politely wish him "Good-day."

Club Shows in Belfast.

Sir,—I expect "Progress," in your issue of Jan. 6 has forgotten there are members in the Belfast C. and Y.C.C. that remember nine or ten years ago, when they were compelled to abandon "The Old Club," as it is called, because they did not breed Scotch Fancies or Belgians. Norwich and Yorkshires would not be tolerated by "The Old Club" members, and were looked upon as feeders; but since the origin of the Belfast N.C. and Y.C.C. they are greatly increased in numbers, and, seeing they have won a hard fight, they are justified in celebrating the victory. The Norwich and Yorkshire breeders will not amalgamate with "The Old Club," but there is one course open to the Scotch Fancy and Belgian breeders; that is to join the B.N.C. and Y.C.C. and appeal for classes to suit them. Re the letter from "Belfastman," he should learn, before writing, what is really the rumpus among the Norwich fanciers. The real cause of this unpleasantness is: a member of the B.N.C. and Y.C.C. exhibited a Norwich hen, and when he called at the hall after judging was over he alleges his hen was awarded first prize, and then when he called in the evening she was sixth. He accused the stewards of changing the tickets. So at their last meeting the secretary was instructed to write and ask him for an explanation, and the matter stands over to the next meeting, which I hope to see reported in CAGE BIRDS. "Belfastman" says there is some suspicion about a Yorkshire that won. He is not far wrong, but it is not an easy matter proving who bred it, and if a certain gentleman will not stand by his accusations made on the day of the show and prove them, he had better take his beating and "sing dumb."

A. MEMBER.

My Birdie Pets.

Sir,—I have kept Canaries and bred them for many years, and have been successful. My first pair, a yellow Norwich hen and a green half-Belgian cock, in their first nest had four eggs. They hatched all; and of two more nests of four and three, all the young were reared. I cleaned the cage daily, and gave only pure egg, and seed as usual. The largest number of pairs I had was four, and I was very successful with all. I bred from the same number for several years; then, through illness, I gave them up, and did not breed any more until two years ago, with a pair of Yorkshires, I bred sixteen young ones. Now, owing to another illness, I shall have to give up breeding birds, but shall keep birds as long as I possibly can, though my bad health prevents my enjoying them as I did. Though only an amateur, and though I do not sell any, I take great pleasure in my feathered friends. When I pair my birds I give egg food purely, and seed as usual daily; but when the young are hatched I give egg fresh four times a day and as often as they require more. I wash the trays of cages daily, and use camphor under the nest lining. I am not troubled with red mites, and I read somewhere in a book that camphor is good in every way. I have kept a number of foreign birds, but have never tried breeding them. I have now six Parrots, one Polly Grey being nearly eighteen years old, fourteen Canaries, a pair of Goldfinches, and a few small foreign birds. I also tame the wild birds as my father did before me, and get them to feed from my dish while I hold it. But now, having no garden, I have had to give up my dear wild birds. I take CAGE BIRDS in weekly, and consider it the best paper of all I have seen; I wish it every success.

Crest Classes at Palace Show.

Sir,—Having insured the eight classes in the Crest Section with the Crested Canary Club, I copied last year's heading in schedule, stating that full prize-money was guaranteed by the Crested C.C., irrespective of the number of entries. Mr. John Tyson, Hon. Sec., C.C.C., has written me pointing ont that this is incorrect. This year the C.C.C. insurance scheme insures against loss, but full prize-money is only paid for over eight entries—eight entries and under receive half prize money. I hasten to make the correction, and trust exhibitors in Crest Section will note same.

An Almost Clear Goldfinch Mule Goes Astray.

A Reward Offered.

Sir,—I had four birds sent from Edinburgh to Glasgow Show, held Jan. 2 and 3. On arrival home on Friday, Jan. 5, the lock of the case was broken off, and a Light Mule was absent from its cage. I have a letter from the secretary stating that the birds were packed by Mr. Muir, of Glasgow (under his supervision), and that the four birds were put in the case. I am making no complaint about anything, save the bird. I visited Edinburgh and Paisley, and was treated splendidly, both myself and birds. If any person should have got the bird in mistake, I would be glad if they would return it to me. It is an almost clear Mule, with light ticks on eyes and wings. I will give 10s. reward for any information regarding this bird. I wish CAGE BIRDS continued success.

A Plea for Novice British Bird Classes.

Sir,—"Whiskers" writes that "sometimes professional exhibitors breed birds that win for them, and sell them to novices, but the birds never win again. Why? Echo answers 'Why'" Well, that "why" makes me get upon my hind legs and echo back that probably the birds themselves are so disgusted at their drop from champion classes into those despised novice classes that they become in a week or two quite slovenly in appearance and develop open shirt-fronts, etc., and, also, sometimes change a little in colour. Is not this so, Mr. Whiskers? And the novice as a rule is not one who can reproduce those beautiful tight-fitting breasts like some professionals can. I am a novice, but do not belong to any bird society, but I am proud to be a member of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE. I have a great fancy to join the Ardwick Society, as I think there is there a better chance for novices.

GEO. J. SWANNELL.

Sir,—I was rather surprised to read "Whiskers'" excuse for the poor entries in the open show, on which I had based my appeal for novice classes. What difference does it make to champions showing or even entering their birds because a secretary happens to go away and another one be elected in his place two or three weeks before the show? It was not the fault of the secretary, but of the champions that the classes were cancelled. How comes it the novices showed their birds? A much better excuse would have been that the "stakes" were larger elsewhere. He also asks me why not make an illustration of Manchester All-England Show. I have taken the trouble to work out the Norwich and Yorkshire classes for his consideration, and we find the open Yorkshire and Norwich classes averaging just over 19 per class and the novice Yorkshire and Norwich classes averaging 27 per class! What does he think of these figures? His version of the novice birds is that they are very bad, yet how often we find the judge's comment: "Could have won in the open." Many winning birds in the open have been bought from the novices, and I can prove cases where birds have been bought off novices for a mere song and sold at much larger figures. Also, do the champions sell most birds to the novices or to fellow competitors? We do not deny the champions what they have worked hard for in the past; we only want to be placed on an equal footing regarding our classes. Then we will fight our way through, and no doubt be as eager and willing to get to the top of the tree as ever the champions were. Do not let us stick to things as they were in the old days, but let us go with the times, improving our hobby, and then we will make fanciers, not turn them away, as no doubt we should if we kept to "Whiskers'" methods.

R. BOOTH.

Sir,—Mr. Long states I am wasting my time in fighting for the novice reform for British birds; but my opinion is very different. I feel assured that good has been done by ventilating the question. He is too eager to see results. Bide a wee, laddie; Rome was not built in a day. We have already made some little headway. What puzzles me is why societies have not years ago given facilities to the novice for showing his British, because if done in a proper manner it would certainly benefit the societies and also show the novice his welfare was being considered. Of course, if a society decides to make the change it ought to advise its novices that it will pay them best not to be in a hurry to exercise the privilege for a time, but to wait until an idea can be formed as to how many societies are willing to make the change, because if they put their British in the open classes there would be plenty waiting to have them made "professionals" with their Canaries. But if a few more societies will go in for the new rule and let us know through CAGE BIRDS that they have done so, then we can send the birds out with confidence, win or lose. If the rule became universal we would see a largely increased number of fanciers keeping high-class British birds and showing them; also it would materially increase the number of Hybrid breeders, and an increased number of these feathered beauties (Hybrids and British) would greatly help to solve the problem of a profitable gate.

A Novel Decoration for a Room.

Sir,—One of our members, Mr. Jas. McVicar (Factory Road, Cowdenbeath), who is a hairdresser and bird fancier, in his hairdressing saloon, which is situated behind the bird shop, has had a border left two feet from the ceiling downward, painted white, and on this he has placed a glorious collection of birds cut from CAGE BIRDS Coloured Plates. There are over 300 birds altogether, so you will have some idea of the work it has entailed to cut these out. They have been artistically put up—a group of Mules in one corner, Yorkshires in another, filled in with all sorts and conditions of birds. Altogether it is one of the most pleasing displays it has been my good fortune to witness. Mr. McVicar is an enthusiastic Mule breeder and British bird exhibitor, and has had a fair measure of success as an exhibitor.

TROUBLE OVER A BRITISH BIRD CUP.

Should Points Gained in Selling Classes Count?

Sir,—In my endeavour to obtain justice at the hands of the members of the Kent County C.B.A., I feel it my duty to lay before them the plain facts of the case (published in this issue under "Club Reports"), which has arisen through the action of the Headquarters Committee in unjustly deducting five points from my aggregate in connection with the British Bird Cup Competition. The case has arisen through Mr. Wickham, of Chatham, writing to the secretary of the K.C.C.B.A. to the effect that an exhibit nominated by me at Canterbury Show was in a selling class confined to the British Bird Section, and in his opinion the points gained ought not to be allowed to count in the competition. The Headquarters Committee, without advising me of this letter, concurred with Mr. Wickham's opinion, and at their next meeting deducted the five points from my aggregate, thereby making me twenty points instead of twenty-five, as against Mr. Wickham's twenty-four, and awarded him the cup. I knew nothing of this till the report of the meeting was published in CAGE BIRDS the following week, and I at once communicated with the secretary, drawing his attention to the facts, saying I was under the impression that a mistake had occurred, and I asked him to look into the matter. Upon hearing from him, he advised me that the committee had deducted the points in question through the nomination being made in a selling class; but I pointed out to him that as far as I was concerned my exhibits had competed strictly in accordance with the rules laid down, as sent out with the schedules of each show to which patronage is given. I am enclosing you a printed copy as received with Canterbury schedule, by which you will notice that it distinctly states that "each competitor is to nominate not more than two birds in each section for cups and bowls, and the exhibitor making the highest number of points throughout the year at shows patronised by the K.C.C.B.A. to be adjudged the winner." You will see that there is no mention whatever about any particular class; all that the competitor has to do is to nominate two birds in each section, and even when this has been done he has to leave his chances of winning to the judge's decision. Now I maintain that, having carried out the details of the competition in their entirety, and won the cup in a fair and just manner, it is only right that the same should be awarded to me. I attended the meeting held on Wednesday last in support of my protest, and during the evening a second letter received from Mr. Wickham was read. In this he gives his answer to my statement that I have complied with the rules of the competition as "correct." Well, now, if Mr. Wickham is convinced on this point, why did he object to my nominations? Then, again, he finishes this same letter by saying that "next season it had better be printed in schedules that no points are to count in selling classes." This also shows that he is convinced that my nominations were quite in order. The result of the meeting was that the matter should be settled by a ballot of the members, and they should decide as to who is entitled to the cup. To this solution I am quite agreeable. I hope I have not trespassed too much on your space, and thank you for the insertion of this letter in your next issue.

The Week's Membership List.

The list of members made during the past week is published below. I hope next week to have to announce a still larger addition to our ranks, and that all members joining before the 3rd of February will attend the tea and meeting to be held at 4.30 on that day.

Miss Bass, Tunbridge Wells; Mrs. Jenkins, Llangollen; Messrs. Madewell, Dulwich; Lawson, Rigside; Smith, Barnsley; Broxup, Burnley; Palmer, Lavender Hill; Wesley, Wath-on-Dearne; Jenkins, Llangollen; Richards, Rhewl; Holden, Pembroke; Parker, Newcastle; Round, Thornaby-on-Tees; Smith, Battersea; Stevenson, Glasgow; Beake, Swanley Junction; Simmonds, Dartford; Goodall and Samuel, Rotherhithe.

Our Hon. Sec. List.

Pembroke, S. Wales: Mr. E. Holden, "Royal George," Pembroke.

Members willing to act as Local Hon. Secs. for towns not yet represented will oblige by letting me have their names immediately. CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL is now on the point of going to press, and names for inclusion in the list of LEAGUE HON. SECS., which will be therein published, must reach me not later than Tuesday next, the 23rd inst. I should like to make this list as representative as possible of the whole country, and I should be glad to have a name for every town in Great Britain and Ireland, but only those reaching me by next Tuesday will have a chance of being included in the published list.

Cage Birds League Membership Certificates: A Member's View of Last Week's Suggestion.

Last week there was published a suggestion from one of our members that we should provide coloured certificates of membership, to be renewed from year to year. I have received a considerable number of replies agreeing with the idea, and I should be glad to hear more generally what members think of it. Following is an example of letters received:—

> I quite agree with Mr. Bibbs' idea of a printed coloured Certificate of Membership. I think nothing would be nicer for a bird-room or living room than to see a neatly coloured Certificate of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE framed and hung on the wall, so you may count me as one in favour of the proposition at whatever price you may issue the certificate.

Cage Birds League First Meeting.—Post Cards Please.

The success of our first annual meeting, which will be held at the Palace on the Saturday of the show, is now entirely dependent upon the presence of every member who can possibly attend. Tea will be provided at 4.30 p.m., and there will be no charge whatever for this. After tea, then the meeting, and I hope there to make the acquaintance of many hundreds of members who are as yet only known to me by name. If those members who intend being present will kindly drop me a postcard, I shall be obliged, as an estimate of the approximate number will be of assistance in making the final arrangements with the caterers. No obligation will attach to the sending of the postcard.

Members will have been aware, from what has appeared previously in these notes, that arrangements were being made to have a photograph taken on the Saturday of Crystal Palace Show of all CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE members present. I am glad now to be able to say that these are completed. The photograph will be taken in the Palace by Messrs. Everitt, of Upper Norwood, at some convenient time on the Saturday afternoon, and a proof will be shown as quickly as possible at CAGE BIRDS stall, where orders may be booked. The photograph will be twelve inches by ten inches, and will be mounted on a plate-sunk mount. The price of finished copies will be half-a-crown each. The place and time of assembly will be announced at CAGE BIRDS Stall, and I hope that all members will make a point of being represented in this pictorial record of the first meeting of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE.

Answers to Correspondents.

G. H. Peck.—It would, as you say, have been a matter of extra interest if at our first great meeting at the Palace the time had come for the distribution of prizes in our competitions for the introduction of recruits to CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE. This competition, however, remains open until March 11th next, and there is plenty of time for considerable alteration in the present state of the running. This is especially the case with the prizes for societies, as with the close of the show season they will have the opportunity of giving their attention to the question of becoming members of the LEAGUE. Several societies are members almost to a man, and I hope that before the closing date—March 11th—many more will join our ranks, and help us in the pursuit of our efforts to make the cage bird Fancy strong enough to repel any attacks levelled against it.

C. Round.—I am afraid that your idea of coloured dated seals to affix to the back of the pendant and brooch badges is an impracticable one. Members would scarcely care to stick a paper label at the back of a rolled gold badge; further, it would need a special gum to stick paper to metal.

Obituary.

I regret to hear from our enthusiastic member, Mr. Peck, of Bexley, of the death of Mr. F. E. Martin, late of Chelsfield, Kent. Mr. Peck writes: "Mr. Martin was a good old Yorkshire fancier, and he will be greatly missed as one of the first to help a brother fancier." On behalf of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE members I tender our sympathies and condolences to the relatives left behind by our fellow fancier who has passed away.

NESTING BOXES AND FEEDING TROUGHS FOR WILD BIRDS.

Interesting Exhibition by the Selborne Society.

A very interesting exhibition opened on Saturday last, and remains open until Saturday this week, at the offices of the Selborne Society, at 42, Bloomsbury Square, London, W. Here are to be seen examples of the nesting boxes which have proved so attractive to the wild birds in the sanctuary established by the society in some twenty acres of the Brent Valley. Most of these have been specially devised for the accommodation of such birds as build in holes in trees, and the result of their provision has been that several species hitherto unknown as nesting residents in the neighbourhood are now regular inhabitants during the spring and summer of the woods held as sanctuary for them. Besides the nest-boxes, various receptacles for food, ranging from an upturned glass bottle containing seed which drops into a perforated zinc tray to cunningly devised adaptations of natural boughs made to hold a quantity of "soft-food" for insectivorous birds, are on show, and all of these are catalogued at reasonable prices for the use of those bird-lovers who take a pleasure in attracting the wild birds to their gardens.

For birds which like to breed under cover, but not in the dark, rustic boxes made of hazel boughs are shown. In actual practice it has been found that although Blackbirds freely make use of these partially enclosed nesting places, yet the hen Thrush does not care for them, presumably because of her habit of turning round and round in modelling the clay lining to her nest. For the special benefit of the Thrushes, therefore, shallow rustic trays are provided, these being sheltered by an overhead board.

Feeding tables fitted with a glass roof and carrying one or more trays have proved a great success both in the sanctuary and in private gardens. At first thought these would seem to be dangerous to the birds where cats are in the neighbourhood, but it is found in practice that the birds get out on the one side more quickly than the cats get up on the other. Further, cats are not particularly troublesome in the Brent valley sanctuary, as they rarely have any opportunity of introducing friends of their kind. There is a keeper who sees to this.

It goes without saying that the sanctuary is strictly preserved from trespassers, but we understand that the Hon. Sec., Mrs. Webb, of Odstock, Hanwell, W., is always glad to make arrangements for any intending visitors to be personally conducted over the grounds, and application should be made to Mrs. Webb by anyone who would like to visit the sanctuary.

The Young Naturalist.

Prizes of 1s. and two of 6d. each will be given weekly for the best three anecdotes about birds written on postcards. Competitors must be under sixteen years of age, and state whence stories are taken. Two stars indicate the Winning Contribution, one star the runners-up.

*Sharing the Food.

In our workshop we have two birds which belong to two of our boys; one is a Linnet, and the other a Redpoll. We placed the two cages together to see what would be the result. The next time I looked at them I found them passing their seed to each other, and ever since these two birds have shared their food every day. This shows us how two birds will make friends although they are not the same breed.—Fred Heath, 13, Cottage Homes, Shenley Fields, Northfield.

*A Greedy Thrush.

While feeding the birds during the recent winter, I saw a Thrush take possession of all the food and stand guard over it. Although there was plenty for a score of birds, yet the Thrush would not allow one of them to touch it. A Bluecap, a Hedge Sparrow, a Robin, and several Starlings were amongst those it stood against. When disturbed by a person it did not go far away, but always kept its sharp eyes upon the food, coming back when the line was clear.—Sent by L. Davey (age 12), 1, Henry Street, Plymouth.

An Indian Bird Legend.

Years ago, when the world was new, the Great Spirit went about making everything beautiful. Wherever he walked lovely trees and flowers grew up. All through the long sunny days the leaves wore their bright green dresses. One day they were told they would fall to the ground and die. At last autumn came, and they fell to the ground. The Great Spirit was sad, and did not like to see them dull, so he gave them wings and called them birds. The yellow leaves became Canaries, the brown ones Linnets and Nightingales, the red-and-brown leaves Robins. That is why birds love the trees and build their nests among the branches.—(From "Little Folks.")—Beatrice Garner, Bannold, Waterbeach, Cambs.

Take Time by the Fore-lock.

SOME SEASONABLE HINTS.

MAKE EARLY PREPARATIONS FOR THE BREEDING SEASON.

By J. M. HICKMAN.

Having selected your birds for breeding (which is generally done between November and February) run them into large flight cages, or, better still, a small room, as the amount of exercise they now get is better for their health and well-being afterwards. I run cock and hens together, as I am fortunate in having a large, well lighted and well ventilated attic, light and fresh air being essentials in bird-keeping. If I find any to disagree I separate them and run them in large cages. Of course, it would not do to put exhibition birds together in this way, for fear they might injure their plumage.

Commence with the Cages.

Commence getting your breeding-cages ready. First scrape them thoroughly; then scald them both inside and out with boiling water. Let them dry, and coat them afterwards inside and out with spirits of turpentine, rubbing it well into the cracks and crevices where dust and red mite can harbour; for where these pests are there is a difficulty in rearing young, and I find the use of "Turps" a very effectual way of dealing with them.

After the cages have been exposed to the air for a day or so, give them two coats of what is termed "flatting," by coach-painters, that is, white lead mixed entirely with "turps." with the addition of a little gold size or terebine to bind it, and make it dry. Afterwards finish with a good coat of hard enamel which prevents the bird from pecking it off. Treating the cages in this way is better than using lime, as they can be scalded out, dried, and used again the same day, as water does not saturate the wood as in the case of limewashed cages. Of course, before starting to paint fill up all cracks with good oil putty, and your cages will look equal to new when finished.

Little Necessary Attentions.

The hens can be run into the cages at once after being looked over in order to see they have no dirty feet or long claws or beaks; if this is not done hens with long claws, etc., are liable to indent their eggs while turning them during incubation; and if a hole is made and it admits the air the egg is spoilt. To cut the claws, take a sharp pair of scissors and a pan of warm water; take hold of the bird gently but firmly to prevent it from escaping, and place the legs between your fingers. Cut the claw end off with one cut just clear of the small blood-vessel which can easily be seen; if you cut this blood-vessel it will bleed, and you will run the risk of laming the bird. Afterwards wash the feet in warm water and properly clean them.

Turn the bird into the cage, in which a good supply of sharp gritty sand has been scattered on the bottom, and a piece of cuttle fish bone put in the wires, as this will tend towards keeping the claws and beak short, besides helping to form the material from which the egg-shell is made.

If two hens are to be run with one cock, it is best to run them together for some time so that they can get on friendly terms with one another. Before the cock and hens are finally put together see that both sexes are in robust and vigorous health, for if they are not, disappointment will occur after they are paired. This is a matter that can be judged by their movements. If a bird bounds briskly from perch to perch in a lively and rapid manner and moves its wings in a semi-flapping motion, these are signs of good health and a sound and vigorous constitution, but if it sits dull and mopish this is a sign of some ailment; and I would advise all to discard such birds, as they are no use for breeding.

Forming the Attachment.

About the middle of March is the best time for putting the birds together, but before doing this I run them into a two-compartment cage—that is, a cage with a wire slide or division between them—for if the cock be placed beside the hen without this precaution it often happens that a severe quarrel is the result, especially if the cock is young and ardent; and this will be bad for the future of the pair. A lot more depends on this careful pairing than is usually supposed. After the birds are properly paired it is as well to separate them for a few days by closing the communicating slide between them, as this strengthens the attachment between them; but care must be taken to prevent them from seeing birds of the opposite sex, especially in the case of exhibition birds, as they are apt to select mates that are not intended for them, and it often happens that the hen frets and will not feed the young, or the cock breaks the eggs or destroys the young.

When the cock is run with two hens he might show a preference for one and persecute the other; in that case remove the one hen till the other has commenced to sit; then proceed as at first with the other hen.

Feeding the Newly-Mated Birds.

When you have got the birds together feed them well on hard-boiled egg and home-made bread, well mixed together; I generally rub them through an ordinary household grater. Then mix them well together with a fork and supply each pair with a heaped-up spoonful daily, with the addition of a little maw seed. Also give, every other day, a little hemp and niger seed, also green food. Keep a piece of fat bacon fastened to the wires of the cage, as it is a great preventative of egg-binding; and a piece of cuttle-fish bone, with plenty of grit, broken and crushed egg-shells, and mortar on the cage bottoms. You will never then be troubled with soft or "Wind" eggs, as they are called.

The birds, having been together for a few days, a nest must be given them. The kind I use are made of tin with hollowed perforated tin bottoms about 4in. diameter and 2in. deep, lined with felt, with a back to hang them up by. I give the nest a good dusting with Keatings powder. Then I give the birds nesting material, usually the penny nesting bags sold at all bird stores, which the hens make use of; but generally Canaries are bad architects, and some throw it out before they lay.

When you see a hen carrying nesting material about, you may conclude that she will not be long before she lays. Give her a little green food (lettuce and watercress are about the best), also groundsel, dandelion, etc.; but be sure it is not frosty, or else the consequences may be fatal; it is best to soak it in warm water over night, then shake it dry before giving it to the birds. I trust the above may be of use to fanciers who intend breeding Canaries this next spring.

Under the White Rose.

TO-DAY (Saturday) will see the close of the shows under the auspices of the Yorkshire Union, Bradford City having the doubtful honour of being the last on the list; and if they fare no better than the last two fixtures they will have a large financial loss to face, Sandy Lane and Skelmanthorpe both being, from the point of view of entries, failures. What is more, the Novice section has been the worst part of the shows, the entries from them coming up very badly indeed, several classes at each not having the required number for full prize money. If the novices want to keep up the number of classes, they will have to give better support to the tail-end shows. The champions are still going fairly strong, and they are not missing the chance to have a word or two in regard to the meagre support accorded the shows by the novice section.

BRADFORD National Show, held in aid of the Cinderella Fund, is now a proved success from all points of view. From a fanciers' standpoint, it was a great revelation as to what a bird show really is. And now we can pass the word along that from a financial point of view that it was a big success, the balance sheet showing a balance on the right side of about £62, and of this £50 has been handed over to the Bradford Cinderella Fund. This in all probability will even now have provided some poor children with necessary items for their well-being and comfort. The promoters of the show are well satisfied with the result of their labours, and it is hoped that their next venture will be even greater in all respects. The sum kept over out of the last show—£12—will pay the preliminary expenses, but one thing is still wanting. The past chairman, Mr. H. H. Towers, the past treasurer, Mr. F. Hammond, have both again accepted their offices; but the past secretary, Mr. H. Hill, has not yet definitely accepted office, although it is to be hoped he will. He has proved he can do it, and a thing is always easier the second time, and, besides, all those that exhibited or took any part in the last show have faith and confidence in Mr. Hill. All that can be done has been done to get him again to tackle the position, and the next show will be all the better if he accepts. The work has been well done, and great credit is due to all who took part in it.

THE next item on the books is the Grand Annual Social and Distribution of Prizes. More on this matter will be given shortly; particulars are under consideration.

SUNDERLAND'S BEST.

Fine Entry of High Quality Birds: Management of the Right Kind: A "Toss-up" for Best Bird in Show!

Sunderland held their 22nd annual show on Jan. 12th and 13th, and it proved about the most successful one they have ever held. The society have passed through strenuous times of late years, and last year the committee deemed it advisable to forego the annual open show, and hold a members' show only, in the hope of being able to resume the open shows this year with a few pounds in hand. That the action of the committee was a wise one, events have proved, for the open show this year was backed by a decent balance in hand, and, as we have said, was the best ever held by the society. A big curtailment of open classes was also decided upon, the number being reduced from 260 to 37, and here again the judgment of the committee was fully endorsed, as the amount received in entrance fees alone is sufficient to pay all prize money—a feature which is the exception, rather than the rule in connection with the cage bird shows. The show this year was held in the Miners' Hall, Roker Avenue, and although scarcely so commodious and well lighted as the Workmen's Hall (which is an exceptional place in these respects), it is much more comfortable, both for the birds and visitors, and better situated, being on a main thoroughfare.

Rarity versus Beauty.

Entries came up splendidly, totalling 585, and tip-top specimens were in every section, the big winners being present in strong force. This fine entry was grandly staged, a row down each side of the hall with two rows in the centre, all three tiers high, and the foreign and British Softbills staged by themselves at the end of the hall. Mules, British, and foreign birds were simply great, and were undoubtedly the feature of the show. It would be difficult to find a better collection outside of the two great National events. Several Scottish National winners were on view, and attracted a good deal of attention, the Greenfinch-Chaffinch Hybrid, exhibited by Messrs. Martin and Archer, coming in for a good share. We must confess that the general opinion of fanciers regarding this Hybrid was that excepting for its rarity, it is not a great exhibit, other hybrids being more beautiful. No one, however, questioned Mr. Maddison's judgment in placing it first, it being recognised that its rarity entitled it to that position, and that Mr. Maddison could not go past it. A little difficulty arose in allocating the special for best bird in show, Mr. Maddison bringing out the Greenie-Chaffie, and Mr. Stanger, the well-known Crest-bred hen "Duchess," belonging to Mr. Bewick. Neither judge would give way, and a deadlock ensued, the matter being finally settled after a good deal of argument by tossing a coin, which resulted in favour of "the Duchess." The Canary section was excellent, both in numbers and quality. Norwich, Yorkshires and Borders all came up well.

Some Real Good Workers.

The show management was excellent, and in Mr. Jeffrey the society possesses one of the best secretaries it has been our lot to meet. All his work is done with methodical precision, and he understands his business from end to end; and the manner in which he gets through his work is splendid—no worry or confusion, but everything done at the right time, and in the right place. We sincerely hope the Sunderland society may have the benefit of his services for many years to come, for a great deal of the success of this show is due to hard work on his part. He is ably supported by a grand body of fanciers, headed by the genial chairman, Mr. J. Farrar (who, by the way, does his work in fine style). Under him are the vice-chairman, Mr. W. F. Swan; treasurer, Mr. A. Walker, and the assistant secretary, Mr. F. Riseborough, whose assistance in the clerical work was highly appreciated. They were well backed up by a grand body of enthusiastic fanciers, viz., A. Elliott, G. Davidson, J. Machin, R. Newcombe, J. Riseborough, W. Reid, and C. Waters, and great help during the show was rendered by Mr. R. Tindale, the popular secretary of the Northern Yorkshire C.C., help which was greatly appreciated. A word of praise is also due to Messrs. McKenzie and Young, the well-known foreign bird enthusiasts, who both worked hard, helping to erect the staging. The following are the principal special prize-winners: Best in show, Mr. R. S. Bewick, with his well-known "Duchess." Skin rug for most entries in open show, Mr. J. Riseborough. Most points in Norwich, Mr. W. H. Butler; ditto Crests and Crestbreds, Mr. T. Taylor; ditto Borders, Mr. J. Ross; ditto, Yorks, Mr. H. H. Towers; ditto Mules and Hybrids, Messrs. Martin and Archer; ditto Britisb, Messrs. Nicholson and Son; ditto foreign, Mr. A. C. Young. The Hunter cup for most points gained by a member in the open classes was secured by Mr. T. Taylor, while the Hunter cup for best bird in members' classes went to Mr. W. F. Swan; Thompson's cup for most points in members' classes, Mr. J. Riseborough, and the competition for Davidson's cup, with 5 nominated birds, resulted in a tie between Mr. W. F. Swan and Mr. J. Riseborough. Diploma winners for best in sections were: Norwich, W. H. Butler; Crests and Crestbreds, R. S. Bewick; Yorks., H. Lyall; Borders, J. A. Purves; A.O.V., J. Riseborough; British, C. Waters: Mules and Hybrids, Martin and Archer; foreign, Mrs. T. Taylor; a show cage presented by Mr. R. Newcombe for best commended Border went to Mr. A. Gilchrist; Sandiford's medal was won by Mr. W. Reid, and Ramsden's special by Mr. J. Riseborough. Sales were quite up to the average, and the attendance was excellent, visitors being present from many parts of the country. Amongst the visitors were Miss Briggs, a keen local enthusiast, and Mr. Mark Sheridan, the well-known comedian. The judges were: Messrs. J. Stanger (Pelton Fell), and J. Maddison (Newcastle), the former taking Canaries, and the latter the British, Mules, foreign and selling classes.

Novelties on the Continent.

German Canaries judged for beauty of plumage. Some good specimens of English varieties on view. Fine show at The Hague.

On January 12th, 13th, and 14th, was held, in the Zoological Gardens, at The Hague, the twenty-seventh show of the Dutch Aviculture Society (Nederlandsche Vereeniging Avicultura). The cage bird section, although not strong when compared with our English shows, was nevertheless very interesting, and several of the exhibits could have held their own at some of our shows on this side. Nicely staged, in a well-lighted and beautifully warm room opening out of the main hall, in which were the poultry, the cage birds presented an attractive and pleasing sight. Only 120 exhibits were staged in this section for beauty of plumage, but in another room opening out of one of the galleries were 80 German Canaries engaged in a singing competition, and very sweet indeed was their song. The schedule opened with Dutch Frills, and it will seem almost incredible to our readers that only two birds were shown, both from Mr. van Leeuwen. They were beautifully frilled, but were not very large. Next came the German, classes being provided for yellows (which included buffs), greens, cinnamons, variegated and crested, or, in the words of the catalogue, Gele, Groene, Feuilli morti, Bonte and Gekuifde. This is the first time we have seen Germans judged for beauty of plumage, and we must say that some of the birds were exceedingly smart little fellows of lovely colour and feather, whilst the wee little turncrowns of the crests looked very quaint. Mr. V. U. de Villeneuve won the special for the best collection, and also that for the best yellow, whilst Mr. J. G. Bloys van Treslong secured that for the best green. Other exhibitors were Messrs. J. van den Borden, W. Landman, W. A. van Leeuwen, and J. W. Schuurman. Lancashires only had two entries, both from Mr. van Leeuwen. Norwich had three classes, Gekuifde (crests), Gladkop (plainheads), and Cinnamons, here described as cinnamons, and not Feuilli morti as in the Germans. Mr. R. A. Wilson, the son of a Coventry gentleman settled in the Hague, won the special for the best collection, and also that for the best bird. Mr. Wilson, who exhibited 15 Norwich, was the winner in each class. The only other exhibitors were Messrs. W. A. van Leeuwen and V. W. de Villeneuve. The Yorksbires interested us greatly, and some remarkably nice birds were shown. Mr. Wilson again held a strong hand, and did well. He won the special for the best collection, and that for the best yellow, whilst Mr. W. A. van Leeuwen won that for the best cinnamon, and this bird we would like to say was a cinnamon Yorkshire indeed. Judged either as a cinnamon or as a Yorkshire, it deserved to win. It had type, style, colour and quality all in high degree. Another nice stylish bird was Mr. Wilson's heavily marked yellow. Mr. van Leeuwen was the only exhibitor of Lizards, and his birds were good coloured, nicely spangled golds, but they were not so well staged as the same gentleman's other exhibits. Borders had three classes, with Mr. Wilson as the largest exhibitor, and doing all the winning with clears, whilst Mr. Leeuwen won in the greens and cinnamons, and in each case the winners were nice, stylish birds. Mr. Wilson won the special for the best collection of Borders, and also that for the best clear. In Scots, Mr. Wilson had no opponent. Mules, described as "Bastards van Kanarie-en-Wilde Vogel, had only Mr. V. W. de Villeneuve as an exhibitor, and the winner was a variegated buff Goldfinch-Canary of nice shape and colour. In wild birds the winners were: Bullfinches (Gondvinken), Mr. Sutherland; Goldfinches (Putters), Mr. Schuurmann; and in Inlandsche Zaadeters Mr. Schuurmann won with a Green Crossbill. In the class for Albinos, Mr. W. J. M. de Bas won with a pied Robin, pied Blue Tit, and pied Chaffinches. The Foreign classes contained a nice lot of Cardinals, Parrakeets, Grey Parrots, Barbets, and an American Clock Bird, the winners being: Cardinals (Kardinalen), Mr. de Bas; Parrakeets (Parkieten), Mr. Sutherland, with Ringnecks and Rosellas; Parrots (Papageien), Messrs. Sutherland and Kaiser; Cockatoos (Ara or Kaketoe), Mr. W. Landman, with a Blue-and-Buff Macaw, which took the special over the section. In the Uitlandsche Vogels, Mr. de Bas won with a Red Barbet, a Green Barbet, and a Clock Bird. Mr. Wilson won the special for the best collection of Canaries in the show, and Mr. Sutherland that for the best collection of wild birds. These prizes were awarded on the number of points scored by the exhibitors. Points counting, 1st 3, 2nd 2, 3rd 1. The judges were Messrs. C. L. W. Noordwijn (Canaries) and J. N. Blaaw the remainder.

The German songster competition was judged by two German fanciers, Messrs. Wm. Hildebrand, of Hanover, and J. Schoonwater, of Nijmegen. There were ten entries in the class for single birds, and the winners were: 1, 3, van Leeuwen; 2, van Geffen; vhc, Mayen; hc (2) van de Berg and van de Boogaard. In the class for pairs there were 36 entries, and the awards were 1, 't Hart; 2, hc, Schaafsma; 3, Varhaegen; 4, de Grooth; vhc, van Leeuwen; hc, van Geffen. The third class was for quartets, and in this there were 44 entries, and the winners: 1, von Geffen; 2, de Grooth; 3, Lauerman; 4, von Leeuwen; 5, van de Berg, and van de Boogaard.

Plumstead and Woolwich C.B.S. Scores a Success.

Good Novice and British Bird Sections.

Plumstead and Woolwich C.B.S. open show, held at the Sussex Hall Jan. 11th and 12th, being the fifth venture of this progressive society. It proved a big success. The popular secretary, Mr. Meades, was again at the head of affairs, and he this time had the valuable assistance of Mr. G. Smith. Mr. Meades is well known for his tact and ability in show management and capacity for getting through the vast amount of work incidental to an open show; needless to say, everything was carried out in a very able and satisfactory manner, and all the exhibits were comfortably staged and well looked after. In attending to the wants of the specimens entrusted to them, we particularly noticed Messrs. Marley, Hazell, Weston, Hall, and Barton, a select band of willing workers. The number of exhibits was hardly so high as at the last show, the falling off being chiefly noticeable in the Canary and the members' sections. We understand the members are passing through a rather bad time, so many of their best birds falling into moult. Mr. Irons' Buff Norwich cock won special for best in show. Messrs. Hawes Bros.' yell. Yorkshire won special for best Yorkie. Here again quality and type were well in evidence. Special for best Border went to Mr. Bacon's yell., closely pressed by Mrs. Thynne's lovely buff. The novice Nor. and Yorks. classes filled well, and some capital specimens were staged. The British birds were really a good collection, most of the classes being well filled, the two classes alloted to the novices coming out quite "a bumper," 25 birds in the one and 16 good ones in the other. Mr. Marley won special for best champion British with his well-known Blackbird. There were also three very fine classes of Hybrids. The show was well patronised hy visitors and during the evening the company were favoured with music. The hall was beautifully warmed and lighted. Mr. Heath judged the Canaries, and Mr. Frostick the Hyhrids, British and foreign.

Members' show held headquarters, Decemher 9th. The Hyson Green men are particularly strong in Norwich and Crests, and usually any hird good enough to win at their memhers' shows will hold its own in the open classes. POPLAR & DIS. C.B.S.

Fourth annual show held Dec. 15, and was a record one for this society, 190 exhibits being staged. The British bird section was exceptionally strong, with a class of 14 Goldfinches and 14 Linnets, the winners in each being very fine specimens, and capable of holding their own in open competition. The winning Goldfinch took cup for best bird in British. The Foreign bird section, although not large in numbers, was represented by some choice specimens, prominent amongst which was a very fine pair of Cordon Bleus. The Yorks, both novice and amateur, were fairly strong in numbers and of exceptional merit. The Norwich section was well supported, being the largest Canary section. The cup winner also took special for best hird, and the owner may consider himself very fortunate in the possession of such a very fine specimen. Altogether we feel they are to be congratulated on the success of the show, both numerically and (whilst it is rather too early to give a definite statement) we should say, financially. The "gate," we are inclined to think, suffered somewhat owing to having to change the show room at the last moment. The secretary was well supported by the committee and stewards. Mr. J. Robson judged.

IPSWICH.

The Eastern Counties C.B.S. 19th annual show was held on Boxing Day at the Ipswich Social Settlement. The entries totalled 304 as against 186 last year. The management is an excellent one, and well deserving of the good results obtained. Mr. W. Barritt, the popular hon. sec., had arrangements well in hand, and was ably supported by Messrs. C. Mouser (Chairman), W. Schofield (Vice-Chairman), W. Gunn, T. Clarke, W. T. Baker, W. Cook, E. Gooderham and C. Carl (Committee). The quality of the birds staged was not short of magnificent, and the judge (Mr. C. Simpson) had no easy task to separate the winners. The show was opened by Mr. H. J. Lake in the absence of Sir Daniel F. Goddard, M.P. (the President), who, however, attended during the morning. A silver-gilt cream jug and sugar basin were handed to Mr. Simpson (the judge) as a mark of the society's appreciation of his services as judge at each of their 19 shows. Specials were won by Messrs. W. Cook (the President's silver challenge cup for best in show), W. Gunn, J. E. Cole, T. Clarke, A. Tydeman, E. Olle.

NEW STEVENSTON HOLYTOWN C.B.S.

Fourth annual show held in the Masonic Hall, New Stevenson, Dec. 2. Over 300 hirds were staged. The entries in the unflighted classes exceeded last year's by one half, and the quality was even better than at many open shows. We had six classes for British and 28 classes for Canaries. Our radius is five miles, and I am sure there are many fanciers within that radius who would be willing to join us if they only knew. Mr. Allardice won both Scotch Fancy and Border cups with a magnificent specimen of each variety, while the Norwich cup went to Mr. Gallacher with a heautiful yellow cock; Mr. Alex. Harper was runner-up for Border cup. The secretary with a good working committee had everything in A1 order for the judges to commence at 10 o'clock. Judges: Norwich and British, Mr. A. Chalmers (Kirkintilloch); Scotch Fancy, Mr. Hunter (Wishaw); Borders, Mr. Lambie (Whithurn). We will be very happy to enrol new members up to the second Tuesday in May. Meetings notified monthly in CAGE BIRDS "Club Notices."

STAVELEY.

Third annual show held Jan. 13th, in the Speedwell Inn—a large room, which is light and absolutely free from draughts. The entry was a good one, being a matter of 50 more entries than last year, and by far the best as regards quality. The president is Mr. T. Kay, and the vice-president Mr. T. Bunting, a couple of energetic officials. The committee are a band of excellent workers, comprising Messrs. Smith, A. Dodd, G. Dodd, Weeks, Askew, W. Lancaster, J. Lancaster, Bradley, Holden, and Gregory. Mr. C. Bramall, the secretary, works magnificently; he is the right man in the right place, and he is a true fancier. The stewards were Messrs. H. Gregory and J. Lancham, who know their duties to a nicety. The society's challenge cup (to be won three times in succession) was captured by Mr. A. Dodd; he having done the trick on two previous occasions, he now becomes absolute winner of same. It is the intention of Mr. Dedd to present to the society another more valuable silver cup for competition amongst members, donor not to compete for same, providing there are three or more entries. Special for best Yorks., Messrs. Wilkinson and Elliott; that for best Nor. went to an unflighted cl. yell. hen, the property of Mr. A. Dodd; best Yorks. (members), W. Holmes; Nor., A. Dodd; best Brit. (open), J. Milne; members, J. Weeks. Other special winners were Messrs. E. Barker, J. Milne, and W. Baxby. Yorks. were a choice collection, many well-known all-England winners being present. Nor. were the best lot ever seen at this fixture. British birds captivated one. Runner up for challenge cup, Mr. W. Holmes. The management throughout was excellent, and no hitch occurred. The staging was A1, and every bird could be seen at a glance. Judging was over in good time, cards displayed promptly as each class was adjudicated upon. Mr. J. C. Barnes (Sheffield) judged, and his awards were well received.

RAMSEY (I.O.M.).

Annual show held Jan. 11, in the Palace, Ramsey. This exhibition has justly earned its title of the Manx Palace. Being the last show in the Isle, it naturally loses a few entries, but all the cracks and cup winners meet here for a final bout before the breeding season commences. Norwich were not over strong, but every bird was of wonderful quality of feather, and very short and compact. Yorks. were very evenly balanced and hard to separate. The outstanding bird of the show was the tick yell. Yorks., owned by a novice, Mr. Karron. It won the cup after a tight tussle with Mr. Bodden's yell. Nor. cock, Mr. W. H. Gill taking 3rd spl. with a very nice six-pointed yellow Goldie Mule, followed by Mr. Caley's Yellowhammer. As usual in the Island, British and Mules were very hot, some very fine specimens being put down. The attendance was really marvellous; it might have been mid-summer by the crowd of visitors. The usual banquet was held afterwards at the Queen's Hotel, some 70 fanciers sitting down to a very good repast. My word! they do look after the judges here. The secretary, Mr. Ellison, is an ideal show manager, and the amount of work he got through was astonishing, seeing he had full control over the Dog, Poultry, Pigeon and Cage Bird sections. Mr. J. W. Metcalfe (Liverpool) judged, and his placings were well received.

By JOHN ROBSON, and other Leading Bird Specialists.

Edited by S. H. LEWER, of "The Feathered World," &c.

Some of the Coloured Plates.

CINNAMON CANARIES (three lovely specimens in an Aviary).
NORWICH CANARIES (three specimens).
LANCASHIRE CANARIES (two specimens).
YORKSHIRE CANARIES (four specimens).
BRITISH FINCHES (four specimens).
THRUSH, BLACKBIRD, Etc. (three specimens).
BORDER FANCY CANARIES (four specimens).
LIZARD CANARIES (three specimens).
WARBLERS (four specimens).
WOODPECKER, BUNTING, Etc. (four specimens)
LARK, WAGTAIL, PIPIT, Etc.

Thirty-Four Coloured Plates in all.

Every owner and breeder of Cage Birds should possess and should study this new work, which embodies the latest information as to the care and well-being of his songsters, as well as the newest knowledge—scientific, specialist, and practical—on the breeding, rearing, and exhibiting of every known species of British birds.

The chapters dealing with each department of this interesting hobby begin at the beginnings in every instance. The various instructions are so clearly detailed as to tempt any bird lover to enter the interesting field of scientific breeding by practical experiment.

For the professional aviculturist this sound work is a necessity. It is authoritative by reason of its authorship; complete in that it covers the whole ground; and absolutely up-to-date and in line with the newest scientific ideas and practices in aviculture.

"Canaries, Hybrids and British Birds" is supplied by the Publishers at a price and on terms that suit every bird lover in the kingdom.

OUR FREE BOOK

will tell you all about it without expense or obligation on your part.

This work is soundly unique in that it treats the fascinating subject of breeding Hybrids so fully—the British Finch and Canary Hybrids, and the interbreeding of the Canary and Goldfinch, Bullfinch, Linnet, Siskin, Twite, Greenfinch and Redpoll—and also between these birds themselves.

This difficult subject is one of growing interest. Here are the secrets of success explained, and the probable causes of past failures suggested by practical breeders who are at the top of the tree in the avicultural world. Here also is a list of those Crosses that have not as yet been achieved by any breeder, as also very striking evidence that the rare and beautiful Crosses combining the charms of both parents, that so rarely reward the patient breeder are the result of exact scientific knowledge on his part. This knowledge is here tabulated for the first time in the notable section on "Mendelian Inheritance." Send for the Free Book to-day.

C. PRIOR,

whose wins with British seed-eaters, none of them gained with purchased ready-made winners, are now far outnumbered by those of the specimens he has supplied to other exhibitors, invites everyone wishing to find their own name in the show reports to correspond with him, enclosing stamp for reply. His collection of Goldfinches, Linnets, Siskins, Twites, Lesser Redpolls, Chaffinches, Bramblefinches, Yellowhammers, etc., is still large and choice, and must be reduced to suitable limits forthwith: Hill Farm, Ropley, Hants.

LOOK AT YOUR BACK

numbers of CAGE BIRDS and see if any other man has ever published anything like the number of testimonials that I have. This should prove to you that no man supplies such good birds as I do. I make no exaggerated claims or false statements, so that people sending to me always know what they are going to receive, and always receive what they expect. When a person sends me 2/6 for a bird he gets one worth 2/6, not one that he could have bought in his own streets for 6d., and this is why I always send on approval and guarantee to instantly return every penny of your money if you are not in every way satisfied. I now have, without doubt, the finest collection of English cock Goldfinches in United Kingdom, every bird guaranteed in pink of health and condition and thoroughly on hard seed, at 2/- each; three, 5/-; six, 9/-; specially selected large cocks for muling and guaranteed now in free song, 3/- and 4/- each. Few real exhibition specimens, with full complements of show points, 5/- and 7/6 each. Grand lot of genuine white legged cock Goldfinches that really have bred mules, 6/-, 7/6, and 10/- each. Splendid lot of cock brown Linnets, every one perfectly on seed, 9d. each; three, 2/-; specially picked cocks for muling and contest singing and now in good song, 1/- and 1/6 each; Cock Bullfinches, 2/- and 3/- each; exhibition specimens, 5/- each. Exhibitors please note, I handle more real English birds than any man alive, and therefore have a better chance of picking out exhibition specimens. Those described by me as exhibition specimens in this advt. are birds capable of winning well when used to show cage, and purchasers may always rely upon getting good specimens at top price, but please don't ask for Palace winners at bottom price, because you won't get them. Following letters will give an idea of quality I send out: "3, Burnett Place, Aberdeen, Dec. 27th; Sir,—Snow Bunting duly came to hand. Many thanks for such a good one. You can be certain of all my orders in future.—Yours., W. Allison." "2, Kingsland, Cummock, Dec. 22nd; Sir,—I received Goldie and Bullie all right, and am highly satisfied with them.—Yours, J. WAR DECLARED.

War is declared against high prices and poor quality. It is high time they were things of the past. The pride of songsters is rightly claimed by the Rollers as imported by me direct from their native land, and every bird properly tested and proved to be a first-class songster of the quality sold for before being sent out. Every customer guaranteed fullest satisfaction. Read a few of the letters received this month: Barnsley, January 2, 1912. Roller arrived in splendid condition. I am more than satisfied with it. —G. Brocklesbank. Ilford, 6/1/12. Bird arrived none the worse for his journey. Am well suited.—M. Gooch. Manchester, 1/1/12. I am very well satisfied with the two birds you sent me. They are grand value.—J. Benson. Hoylake, 6/1/12. Bird arrived safe. Quite satisfied. He sang grand on arrival. Thanking you for promptitude.—W. Anthony. Llanelly, 3/1/12. Received Norwich safe. Well satisfied. Will recommend your straightforward dealings to all my friends. —D. Thomas. Llandudno, 2/1/12. The birds purchased from you please me very much. I shall give you more orders.—G. Jones. Addlestone, 1/1/12. Bird reached me safe. Am quite pleased with same.—A. Langridge. Reepham, 1/1/12. Received Canary on Wednesday. Thank you very much for sending such a splendid bird for the money. I have thousands of similar letters open for your inspection. Call and see them, and look at my stock; you will be delighted. My genuine trained St. Andreasburg Rollers are real musical boxes; every bird well trained, in full song by day and artificial light. Cocks 7/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6 each; hens 2/6, 3/-, 3/6 each. Neat travelling cages 3d. each. All birds sent to your address on seven days' approval at my risk. Illustrated price list post free: E. L. Storey, Practical Bird Specialist, Crowle, Doncaster.

Every cock guaranteed in full rolling song by day and gaslight. I invite you to come and select one for yourself, but if you cannot do so I will send one for your approval with pleasure. The following are specimens of scores of letters recently received, and which only considerations of space prevent me from printing: "Court Street, Woodville, nr. Burton, Jan. 9, 1912. The Seifert Rollers I had from you 12 months ago have bred well. The cock is a marvellous songster. He sings all hours, daylight or gaslight, even when covered up.—H. Roulston to Joe Thomas." PRIDE OF PLACE in the Roller world is rightly taken by the Leipzig Rollers as imported by me. You might be able to get a Roller as good at double the price, but why should you pay more than you need? When you've read the remarkable number of testimonials I have published (of which a few are given below), you will know why I so emphatically say that no Roller on the market at anything like the price can equal a Leipzig Roller. I have an enormous stock of thoroughly acclimatised Leipzig Rollers on hand; all cocks are guaranteed in full song day and gaslight, with long hollow and double rolls, sweet, silvery trills, water-bubble runs, soft, roulades, piccolo trills, bell, harp and gong notes, and jug-jug of Nightingale, etc.; warranted entirely free from any harsh or objectionable notes whatever; price 7s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. each. Special Bandmasters, which excel in the deep bass and hollow bell rolls, 10/- and 12/6 each. Hens,, guaranteed same strain, 2/3 each, 4/- couple. I also have a magnificent stock of real contest Rollers, fit for immediate contesting, price 15/- and 20/- each. These contest birds are of purest race extant, and song is exceptionally soft and mellow. Roller cabinet cages with loose fronts and folding doors, 2/6 and 3/6 each. To those who like a loud, merry, short songster, I have a splendid lot of Hartz cocks, all in full vigorous song, real ceiling lifters, price 5/6 each. See following few letters: "Little Longstone, Bakewell, Jan. 2, 1912. Sir,—I have spent 'Xmas with a friend who has recently purchased one of your Leipzig Rollers, and after hearing it I must have one. I have been a breeder of Rollers for some time, and have a good strain, but nothing like that. I particularly admire the bass rolls. Please send me one on. Yours, J. Barnes."—"25 Enbrook Street, Queen's Park Estate, London; Dec. 27. Sir,—Roller I had from you two years ago is still a good healthy bird and in good song; please send another. Yours, J. Fletcher."—"Moor Place, Hayle, Cornwall, Dec. 27. Sir,—Roller received last week is singing well and gives satisfaction. Yours, T. Jordan."—"5, Davison's Yard, Kirkby-in-Ashfield; Dec. 27. Sir,—The Leipzig Roller you sent is a beauty; he sings well and has many changes, and very cheap at price. Yours, R. Hooton."—"5, Greyfriars Place, Edinburgh; Dec. 12. Sir,—I had one of your renowned Rollers over 4 years, and it sang constantly; its notes were long and sweet, with many variations, as you describe. Please send another. Yours, D. Dawson."—"Steilston School House, Holywood by Dumfries; Dec. 18. Sir,—Leipzig Roller you sent has come up to expectations; he is everything you advertise. Please send following. Yours, A. Kennedy."—"Merthyr Tydvil, Dec. 15. Sir,—I have decided to keep Roller you sent. Thanking you for such a beautiful songster, and also for way he was packed. Yours, G. Arnold."—"New North Road, Honiton; Dec. 15. Sir, —Birds arrived in splendid condition. The cock is a beauty, sings incessantly day and night. Sir,—Thanks for prompt dispatch and safe arrival of Leipzig Roller. Thanking you again for such a splendid songster and straightforward dealing with strangers. Yours, A. Tudor." Please note, I am the only importer of Weber's Leipzig Rollers, and all genuine cocks are stamped on wing, "Hans Weber, Leipzig." All are safely and warmly packed in special travelling cages and sent on full week's trial entirely at my own risk immediately on receipt of cash, or if same is deposited with Editor; and money instantly refunded in full if entire satisfaction not given. Try a Leipzig Roller against one of any other breed, you will then know why I can always fill a column with letters written specially about them.

The entries for this great annual event total this year 2,527, a drop of seventy-three on last year, which is mainly accounted for by the troubles in the cotton manufacturing districts, many operatives in this great industry withholding their entries because of the stress which has been for some time existing. Comparing the total number of exhibitors for this year with that of last year, it becomes apparent that labour troubles have had their effect, for, while the drop in total entries is only seventy-three, the individual exhibitors number fifty-two less than last year (650 as against 702). Notwithstanding the slight drop, the Palace Show holds its own as a feast for the sight of bird-lovers, and the magnificent array of over twenty-five hundred birds, comprising among themselves the very cream of the champions, will as usual attract many thousands of the ordinary public, as well as the army of fanciers who look upon the Palace as their Mecca, and as a rendezvous where experiences may be exchanged and acquaintanceships renewed.

A feature of this year's show is the very large proportion of lady exhibitors. Time was when the lady fanciers might be counted on one's fingers; now, as in other walks of life, they are very much in evidence, and this is all to the good of the Fancy—they are very welcome additions to our ranks. We learn with surprise that the class for furnished or decorated cages produced only one entry, and was perforce cancelled. Seeing that many tastefully decorated cages have from time to time appeared in the ordinary way, it was surely to be anticipated that an especial class for these would have met with considerable support. The innovation of a class for Wagtails also fails to realise anticipations, only six entries having been received. This class, with proper support, should form one of the prettiest in the show, and it is to be hoped that it may be allowed to stand for another year.

The special class for White Canaries has produced nine entries, and much interest will centre upon the spot where these birds are staged. The foreign section is not quite up to its usual form, many exhibitors having doubtless kept their birds at home because of the expected competition of one or two of the owners of exceptional teams. These expectations have not materialised, but the section, nevertheless, will prove, as usual, one of the chief attractions of the great exhibition.

The Canary Classes.

Over 1,400 birds will be competing in this section, the detailed entries being as follows:—

	Classes.	Birds.
Norwich Plainheads (open)	10	179
Ditto (Novice)	6	94
Norwich Greens	4	37
Crests, etc. (Open)	9	75
Ditto (Novice)	2	26
Yorkshires (Open)	9	165
Ditto (Novice)	7	111
Ditto, Green marked	4	47
Ditto, Cinnamon marked	4	37
Ditto, Greens	4	63
Cinnamons (Open)	5	63
Ditto (Novice) (new class)	—	17
Lancashires	2	14
Lizards	2	19
Border Fancies (Open)	7	152
Ditto (Novice)	2	35
Green Border	4	50
Scotch Fancies	2	11
Belgians	3	24
Frills	1	6
White (new class)	1	9
Rollers	3	23
Limit Classes	7	161
A.O.V. (Open)		Cancelled

Champion Norwich nearly sustain the extraordinary jump of last year, being only four down from the then total of 183. Champion Crests are considerably down, but the Novice Crests show a slight increase. The greatest drop is in the Yorkshires, due doubtless to the cause mentioned above. Borders are exceedingly good, only six short of last year's total. Altogether, the Canary Section promises to be worthy of the best traditions of the Great Glass House.

Mules, British and Foreign Birds.

The eleven open classes, three novice, and a limit class provided for Mules and Hybrids have produced 200 entries, one more than last year's total. Among these will be found representatives of every cross known to up-to-date Hybrid breeders, and the classes form a show in themselves. In the British Section Mr. Weston's five classes—Bullfinch cock, ditto hen, Goldfinch, Linnet, and Chaffinch—contain in all 151 competitors; and in the remaining twenty classes, divided between Mr. Allen Silver and Mr. Walter Swaysland, will be seen a grand array of every species of British bird which may be kept in cages, including among them a Dipper, that bird of the mountain streams, which, we think, has never before been seen on the show bench. Besides the open British classes are Novice, 49 birds; and Limit, 23.

Of the three Parrot classes allotted to Mr. Camps, one has had to be cancelled; there are twenty entries in the two standing classes. Mr. Finn's seven classes contain forty birds in all. the section, though somewhat small, will be of very great interest.

The class for Foreign Goldfinches and Bullfinches (judge, Mr. Weston) has produced twenty-one entries.

There are 311 birds entered in the extra stock class, and the locality of the class will doubtless be crowded, as usual, by those who take the unique opportunity here afforded them of improviug their stud by the addition of exhibition birds, which may be purchased at reasonable prices.

Mr. J. W. Ramsden, of 11, Josephine Avenue, Brixton, has again, and for the twelfth year in succession, the sole management of the show, and in the multifarious duties incidental to the carrying-out of his gigantic task has the great advantage of the enthusiastic help of Mrs. Ramsden and Mr. Geo. Ramsden. All three were, when our representative called, tackliug the work with that quiet orderliness which bespeaks success, and we have to thauk Mr. Ramsden for having found time to furnish us with the particulars above given.

Letters during the time of the show should be addressed to Mr. Ramsden at the Crystal Palace, not to his private address, and exhibits must be delivered at the Palace on Thursday, 1st, or they will not be able to compete.

The annual judges' lunch will take place on Feb. 2 in the Grill Room at the Palace at 1.45. Tickets, 2s. 6d. each, may be obtained of Mr. Ramsden.

Club Meetings.

The following Club meetings have already been arranged: Crest Club, Board Room, 3.30; N.B.B. and M.C., Board Room, 6.30; Southern Norwich P.C., Press Room, 3.30, followed by Cinnamon Club; CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, tea at 4.30, in Grill Room, meeting to follow.

Twitterings.

IT affords us very considerable pleasure to be able to record the great success achieved by CAGE BIRDS' recent Birthday Number. Despite the exceptionally large edition we had printed, not a copy remained on hand, and judging by the number of congratulatory letters received from kindly disposed readers, the fare provided in commemoration of our tenth natal day met with widespread appreciation. We return our most grateful thanks.

Last week's issue of CAGE BIRDS, too, despite a still further increase in our printing order, was right out of print on Saturday morning, and we have been unable to fill a number of late orders which have reached us. We are sorry if anyone should have been disappointed by reason of being unable to obtain a copy, but would point out that the remedy —i.e. to order in advance from their newsagents—lies in the hands of our friends. At present we cannot supply any further copies of last week's CAGE BIRDS; of the Birthday issue we hope to have two or three dozen copies for disposal in a few days, and these, with the two coloured plates and calendar in colours, can be sent carefully packed (flat) for 6d. each, post free; or 5d. if rolled in cardboard tube; or they may be ordered through a newsagent.

In conclusion, we would once again express our deep appreciation of the manner in which the bird-loving public have taken our journal CAGE BIRDS to their hearts; may we long continue to deserve their favours.

Your Birthday Number of CAGE BIRDS is superb, and does you and your artists credit.—(Miss) M. Thomas (Boscombe).

Will secretaries kindly note I have removed from Albion Street, Sutton, to 68, Pitts Street, Macclesfield, writes Mr. Barrett.

Allow me to congratulate you on the Birthday Number of CAGE BIRDS. It is a very good threepennyworth.—F. H. Tannyane (Southampton).

I have been appointed secretary of Inverness O.A., and all communications should be addressed to me at 15, Wells Street, Inverness, writes Mr. Thomas Sutherland.

For your absolutely astounding Birthday Number, my heartiest congratulations. It was a delight, and the pictures a dream—the work of true artists.—Thos. Charleton (Boston).

I am no longer general secretary for the Hanley C.B.S., writes Mr. G. Lawton. Mr. W. Llewellyn, 45, Hawthorn Street, Cobridge, Hanley, Staffs, now occupies that position.

Will members kindly note that a table show (of pairs of Crests and Plainheads matched for breeding, also a sale class) is arranged for Feb. 5, writes Mr. Fredk. Rackham, hon. sec., Lowestoft and Dis. C.B.S.

Owing to our secretary having to go out of Jarrow to work all communications should be sent to me, as treasurer of the Jarrow and Hebburn Dis. C.B.F.S., writes Mr. M. Coltman, West Street, Hebburn Colliery.

I have taken over the whole of the stock of birds belonging to Mr. Greenwood, and in future they will be exhibited with my own in my name, writes Mr. A. Pickles (of Messrs. Greenwood and Pickles, Helden Bridge).

The Hyson Green (Nottingham) C.B.S., writes Mr. W. Cottingham, sec., have fixed their three show dates as follows:—June 15, Oct. 12, and Dec. 7. Will the other local societies please note, to avoid clashing with our dates?

We are requested to state that entries for Nantwich Show on Feb. 2 and 3 are very meagre. The sec. (Mr. F. Powell, 38, Walsh Row, Nantwich) writes to say that he will accept entries up to first post on Monday, Jan. 29, and he hopes exhibitors will favour him with their support.

OBITUARY.

It is with deep regret, writes Mr. R. Charleson, hon. sec. of the Leigh and Dis. C.B.S., that I have to announce the sudden death of the wife of one of our members, Mr. G. Slater. Mrs. Slater was my own mother-in-law. All our members extend their deepest sympathy towards Mr. Slater and family in their recent sad bereavement. She was always a jolly woman, and one whose presence will be missed, especially at our annual dinner, where she has always been so ready with a good song.

Mr. G. Benson, chairman of the Wallasey C.B.S., will give a washing exhibition and lecture on pairing up to the members of the Anfield, Everton, and Dis. C.B.S. at their next meeting, writes Mr. R. B. Wright.

I wish to congratulate you on your splendid calendar and coloured plates issued with the Birthday Number of CAGE BIRDS, which I think are a perfect treat. I have been a reader of CAGE BIRDS for many years, and have found it very beneficial and instructive.—W. Sherington (Preston).

We were sorry to hear when at Bathgate Show, writes our representative, that Mr. J. Brown, the well-known British bird fancier and exhibitor, of Edinburgh, is rather poorly at present. We hope to hear of his speedy recovery, which was the wish of all the fanciers present.

The Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S., and in particular the sec., Mr. W. Hodson, and his assistant, Mr. H. W. Tomsett, are to be congratulated on the excellent result of the past year's working, the balance sheet for 1911 showing 13s. 7d. to the good, while the assets of the society include a challenge shield, a cup, and a bowl. The society has had great lee-way to make up.

I am delighted to note the rapid headway CAGE BIRDS has made. It has long been the fanciers' premier journal. You always have something "up your sleeve." Truly, CAGE BIRDS and its staff are a nest of magicians, hatching surprises all the year round. You have given your readers a treat in your splendid Birthday Number and calendar.—Albert E. Chency (Devonport).

The London and Provincial O.S. have, writes Mr. C. W. Law, the sec., left the Leysian Hall owing to the floor on which their room was situated being let. They have therefore gone back to their old headquarters, "The Raglan," Aldersgate Street, next the old G.P.O., where they will be pleased to welcome all friends and fanciers at their meetings. The first meeting to be held at "The Raglan" will be the Pair Show and British Bird Show, Feb. 15. Judges: Messrs. T. Heath and H. Norman.

A Change at North London.

As already announced, I have with great reluctance resigned my position as secretary of the North London C.B.A., writes Mr. R. P. Harper. During my eight years of office I have made many friends, who have helped me to place the N.L.C.B.A. in the splendid position it now holds, by supporting me with their presence at the shows, lectures, etc. May I, therefore, tender my sincere thanks to these friends for their kind support, and to CAGE BIRDS for the prompt attention and courtesy which it has always extended to me? Although no longer secretary, I am on the committee, and shall still continue to do all in my power in the interests of the association, and so help them to retain their good name. In conclusion, I sincerely trust all friends will extend their help and patronage to the new secretary, Mr. P. W. Jeffries, who, I am sure, will appreciate same.

Will fanciers belonging to the Chesterfield and Dist. C.B.S. please kindly attend meeting to be held at the Club Room, Welbeck Inn, Jan. 27, for the purpose of fixing next annual open show, also table show for Feb. and audit of books? writes Mr. T. Booker, the sec.

Palace Show.—Labels will be posted to exhibitors on Saturday, 27th. All birds must be in the show on Thursday, Feb. 1, or they will be too late for competition. In reply to many requests, I cannot claim limit class winners for anyone. In common fairness to all, the rules in schedule will be adhered to strictly. Consequently, claims by letter will only be attended to after first sales at Show Office Window.—J. W. Ramsden, Show Manager.—(Advt.)

A Painful Tale.

Stranger: "I noticed your advertisement in the paper this morning for a man to retail imported Canaries."—Proprietor of Bird Store: "Yes, sir; are you looking for the job?"—Stranger: "Oh, no; I merely had a curiosity to know how the Canaries came to lose their tails!"

Death of Noted Pied Blackbird.

It is with regret I have to inform fanciers of the death of Mr. Edgar E. Griffith's noted Pied Blackbird, writes Mr. J. H. Relf (Llandudno) on Jan. 21. Old age was no doubt the cause. This bird was well-known throughout North Wales, and was an attraction at the shows. He was a winner of numerous prizes, including silver cup at the W.N.C. show 1910 for best in show.

Yorks County B.B. & M.C. Specials.

Now that the shows where patronage is given are over, below will be found the figures of the winners of Club Specials. Anyone finding same not correct, please inform secretary:—Open Section—1, Martin and Archer, 119 points; 2, T. H. Inman, 103; 3, W. Lee, 65; 4, J. P. Stamp, 54; 5, J. Bousfield, 32. Amateur Section—1, J. Lane, 127 points; 2, B. H. Wilson, 35; 3, J. Isherwood, 18; 4, T. Bishop, 16; 5, E. Clegg, 10. CAGE BIRDS Competition result will appear later. Meeting Feb. 10 (wind up).—J. Lane, hon. sec.

Rare Visitor at Llandudno.

In the January issue of "British Birds" Mr. R. W. Jones records having seen a Black Redstart on Great Orme's Head on Nov. 25. The bird was a female and very shy, resenting too close an approach. A male of the same species was observed in the same place by Mr. Jones on Dec. 27, 1910, and recorded by him at the time. The Black Redstart is a rare visitor to Britain. The majority noted have been in winter, but several have been seen in summer, though there is no satisfactory evidence that it has ever nested here.

An Expert Opinion.

Several readers have written to ask whether one or other of the specialists upon our staff would for a small fee give them a private opinion upon the merits, or mating, etc., of birds they are exhibiting at the Crystal Palace Show. We shall be pleased to arrange this. Exhibitors desirous of taking advantage of the offer must send to CAGE BIRDS Offices a stamped addressed envelope, together with sixpence (postal order) for each bird (Canary, Hybrid, British, or Foreign) they wish to receive an opinion upon, when a letter will be sent them in due course.

N.B.B. and M.C. Annual Meeting.

The annual general meeting of the National British Bird and Mule Club will be held in the Board Room, Crystal Palace, on Feb. 3, at 6.30 p.m., write Messrs. Plumbridge and Carr, the hon. secs. Agenda:—Propositions to include the Siberian Goldfinch and Bullfinch in the Club List; the advisability of offering a medal for the new and rarest Hybrid of the year; and a slight alteration in Rule 17. We earnestly request that all members (especially country members) visiting the show on Saturday will strain a point to be present at the meeting, as this will go a long way to stimulate the secretaries in their work.

Sparrow's Luxurious Quarters.

A Small Heath correspondent reports (says the "Daily Mail") that recently the plumbers engaged in repairing the bath room of a house at Acock's Green, which had not been tenanted for four year, had occasion to remove some boarding near the hot water tank. Much to their surprise, behind the boarding they found a Sparrow's nest. The nest was quite empty, silent evidence, it is hoped, of the safe rearing of the brood. The birds could have easily gained admission to the room through the open window of the bath room. Why should they have chosen to build inside, rather than in the ivy which covers the side of the house? Probably the luxuriance of having "hot and cold laid on" proved too great a temptation!

Then He Wink(l)ed.

Two young fellows were walking up and down the seashore trying to get a shot at some Oyster Catchers. They stalked the birds all the afternoon, but couldn't get within gunshot. The birds would wait till the men were almost near enough; then, uttering their peculiar piping note, they would fly half a mile or so away. An aged seaman stood smoking by a boat, so the young men approached him and asked: "Can you tell us how we can shoot these Oyster Catchers?" The old man slowly removed his pipe, and replied: "Well, it ain't no use to chase 'un up and down the shore. Ye must lay in wait for 'un. They be very fond o' shell-fish, they Oyster Catchers, so walk along till ye come to a nice big rock, and bob down behind it and keep very quiet. Then after a bit ye must make a noise like a winkle. They'll come then!"—Sent by "A. P."

One of the finest foods for insectivorous birds which has ever come before our notice is "Stamin," a sample of which reaches us from Mr. O. Millsum, of Everberg, Brabant, Belgium. The quality of the ingredients is remarkable, the ants' eggs being especially fine, while the price is very moderate. "Stamin" will keep the rarest and most delicate specimens in perfect health and feather. It is very easily and quickly prepared for use, while when placed dry in the cage or aviary it will be found a grand tit-bit for all Finches, Buntings, Parrakeets, etc., and a fine conditioner. For fruit-eating birds a few scalded currants should be added. The price of "Stamin" is 1s. 6d. per lb. (postage 4d); 10s. per 7lb. bag (carriage paid); 1s. 3d. per lb. in not less than 28lb. lots (carriage paid). We can recommend readers in need of a food of this kind to give "Stamin" a trial.

No. 19: My Pied Shrikes.

The restlessness which drove Elizabethan seamen Westward Ho, sets me East, itching to cross the borders of the Asian World in these latter days; there to seek for new creatures, and to see new things,. to experience new dangers, excitements, privations, disappointments.

The land I loved was the land I saw
Just dropping below the sky;
And when I was there, it was good no more
So forward again trudged I.

When, therefore, one morning in the early summer of many years ago I received a letter from my friend Mr. George Carrick (and I fear fallen from grace, and from his ancient love of birds) telling me that he had brought over a pair of Pied Shrikes from Australia for a friend, who now declined to have them; and offering them to me, what could I do but get a friend out of a nasty hole by saying I would have them? My good nature is such that, as a quaint friend once said to me, "If it was only the cocks ye saw fightin' on the road, yer heart'd take part with one of them." Which witness, as S. Paul saith, is true.

Duty: Or Parental Pride?

To put it simply, I am a martyr to a sense of duty. About a year since my eldest son was having an orchestral rhapsody performed by the municipal band at the Town Hall, and this is what the family said: "Father will be on the steps of the Town Hall an hour before the doors open!" I was; but why should they have said so? It was my sense of duty. It was the same in the present case; a sense of duty—and curiosity. The old bait of knowledge is still effective. We cannot get rid of Eden. We all take a bite out of the apple now and then; some of us from the green side, others from the rosy, but we all like a bite now and then, sooner or later. It is a truth to be regretted, as knowledge seems to bring a deal of trouble in its train; from the sticking on of the primitive fig leaves down to its close acquaintance with our neighbours' lives.

The birds arrived in due course, and quite took my fancy, with their quaint quaker-like costumes. The Pied Shrike may be briefly described as a study in black and white. The cock is about eight inches long; he has a bold black eye, and a head of a beautiful glossy black; chin and breast nearly white; wings black, with a white shoulder patch, and a small patch on the top of the flights; back and sides of the rump black. The beak has a strong curved hook at the end, as I know by bitter experience. Like a simple child of nature, I was trying to stroke his bonny head, when he suddenly seized my finger, and inserted that hook up to the hilt. I fairly screamed with agony, but what was the good? I know they say it always makes you feel better to utter a piercing scream when a molar comes out. I always act on the advice, but I can never see that it makes any difference to the agony! Have you ever run a fish-hook into your hand? If so, you will appreciate my sufferings—and language. It was, as the police-courts say, unreportable!

The legs are black, the outer tail feathers white, except just at the base; those next them are black, except on the outer edges and tip; the centre of the tail is black.

The hen is rather smaller than the cock, and altogether slimmer. She has only one white patch, and is reddish on the sides and under the wings.

A Golden Opportunity.

I looked at those birds with the fondest longing. I felt nearly certain that there were no others in England, and probably never would be, at any rate in my lifetime. Here was an opportunity of making my fellow aviculturists green with envy. I felt quite like Gehazi as Naaman left him with the two changes of garment and the two talents of silver. His thoughts ran on the men servants, maid servants, their goods, and vineyards, sheep and oxen; mine on nests and eggs and young Pied Shrikes successfully reared. I suppose the look only lasted a second or two, but it left me as dazzled as the Eastern king who seemed to have lived whole dream lives between dipping his head into a bowl of water and taking it out again. They were the dreams of Jupiter; but, as you will see, if you care to read on, they were only dreams.

My next work was to get the birds out of their travelling cage. I tried coaxing, but it was no good. They only got as far away from my hand as they could, and cowered in the darkest recesses of the cage. The moment I withdrew, they came boldly and defiantly to the wires. I knew that the only thing wanting was courage. It was a fact, I said to myself, that catching those birds was like swimming—all that was needed was confidence. That was the very thing I couldn't muster. The burnt child dreads the fire. I could not forget what that curved beak had done in the past, and had no doubt would do again, if it got the chance. I got quite tired of waiting at last. Hour after hour I said to myself that those birds should come out of that cage, but the hours went by and still the birds remained where they were. Nothing fills one with so exquisite a weariness as a dry speech on good resolutions and great thoughts. I was as indifferent to time as a boy sent on an errand. I could not make up my mind as to which bill looked the more cruel and bloodthirsty; in fact, my eyes kept flying from one to another, as bees do from flower to flower.

At last I felt that something must be done, so I carefully wrapped my hand in a duster and then carefully inserted it into the cage and felt around until I got my fingers well at the back of a neck and held tight. Then I knew I was safe, and like Cromwell at Dunbar, said to myself, "The Lord hath delivered them into my hand." I carefully extracted them one by one, and carried them off and put them by themselves in a big aviary, where they seemed thoroughly to enjoy themselves after their late rather narrow quarters.

Always Spick and Span.

They were wonderfully tame, and seemed to have no fear of man whatever. Of course, being Shrikes, they required a great deal of animal food. Give them a small mouse, and they will kill and eat it without compunction, as a nice old lady would swallow an oyster.

The Pied Shrike is one of the most beautiful and dapper birds I have ever kept; always spotlessly clean, and in his beautiful white waistcoat and glossy black coat, reminds me of the late Mr. Panmure Gordon, of Stock Exchange renown.

My Pied friends were very easy to feed. Very little seemed to come amiss. I gave them my own soft bill mixture. I won't say it is the best in the world (because I am not a vain man, and am not, like some, accustomed to overcome others, as the Israelites threw down the walls of Jericho, by the blast of their own trumpets); still, it is most excellent; in fact, as they say of some advertised articles, "You cannot do without it." I can, fortunately, always supply black clocks in abundance, as our kitchen lifts with them at night. To parody the words of a favourite obituary writer I often see in the local paper:—

We find those black clocks everywhere.

Then, as we have no domestic grimalkin now (thank Goodness), we can always be sure of a good and sufficient catch of mice.

As the weather grows more genial, I quite hoped that I should win a medal for a nest of Pied Shrikes. My birds seemed already inclined to perpetuate their species. I determined to give them every possible chance. If they did not succeed, it should not be my fault.

S. Anthony had no harder fight with the ladies he was impolite enough to call demons, than I in resisting the temptation to be always watching the birds. Day by day, I hoped, like Micawber, that something would turn up. We never know what surprise there may be round the next corner. Nature has no more intoxicating illusion than that of turning over a new leaf or beginning a new life. My attention was directed to one particular dark and secluded corner. I felt sure that if anything could happen in that aviary it would be found there. At last I could bear it no longer, the suspense was killing me. I decided that I would go into the aviary and look. To come to a decision is always to bring something to an end. It did so in this particular case, for when I got to that dark and secluded spot, there was nothing, no, not so much as the semblance of a nest. I can't tell you what these Shrikes had been doing, but it was not nest-building. I sat down, and realised, as one only can sometimes, how empty life is if it holds not our desire.

Skin-deep Beauty!

I never heard my Shrikes utter a sound but a harsh rasping note, that fairly set my teeth on edge; but I suppose one can't have beauty and song combined. It made me think of the saying of the old Scotch housekeeper. On one occasion she absented herself from the kirk. The minister, who had a good idea of himself, asked her why? She replied promptly "You would'na like to hear the reason." "Oh," he rejoined, "but I should, you and I are old friends." "Well," came the answer, "if ye we'el ha'et; when I saw your long grey beard gang wagging by the window, I said to mysen: 'Fools wi' fine feathers hae na'e song,' and I stayed at hame!"

Summer passed into autumn, the days became dull and chilly, and the trees grew bare, and my hopes of a nest fell to zero. One day a rich friend came to visit me and saw my Shrikes. He fell in love with them, and asked me to sell them. Like Adam, I fell before temptation. You ask me, why I did not wait till the next year. Because next year anything might happen. When a true sportsman sees a trout jump within casting distance of him, he does not wait until the next day. After a little discussion, a price was agreed upon, and my two friends were sent away to their new home. Then for years after I used to go and pay them a visit of ceremony; and I took care to bring them a feed of mealworms, to show there was no ill-feeling between us. They were always accepted in the most obliging manner; mealworms will ever have a fair sepulchre in the grateful stomach of this judicious bird epicure!

I think now, I had better stop; or you will be saying to me what a great financier said to a female bore, who had got into his office by mistake. She talked away for hours, wasting his valuable time, and aggravating her offence by punctuating her remarks with "And I know you're a very busy man." During a half-hour the victim had not a single chance to get in a word, so voluble was his visitor. But in telling of a surprise she had experienced, she said 'Why, I assure you my heart was in my mouth." I couldn't speak." "Marvellous!" exclaimed the big operator, rising; "I regret it was not my pleasure to have met you then." And he bowed her out. As I don't want you to bow me out, I will stop.

The Crested Tit at Home.

By SIR ROLAND CORBET, Bt.

The appended interesting observations of the wild life of a Crested Tit were made by Sir R. Corbet (who is a patron of "Cage Birds League") at Arndilly, Banff, during April, 1910.

THE nature of the country is eminently suited for the genus "Parus." Great Blue and Coal Tits are common, the two latter species often being seen together. The other Tit I had the opportunity of studying was the Crested Tit. This rare little bird is fairly common in these old pine woods in Strathspey. On the one property I should reckon there were as many as 20 breeding pairs. He is a handsome little fellow, with his white cheeks and brown body, and black feathers, tipped with white, forming his crest.

A Tame Little Chap.

The Crested Tit is essentially a bird of the forests, but is, nevertheless, a tame little chap. With the aid of a pair of field glasses I was often able to approach near enough to see every detail of the plumage quite clearly. Their call note is like that of the Coal Tit, but it has a peculiar trill at the end, which is unmistakable.

In Stonham's "Birds of the British Isles" the author says: "The nest is placed in a hole or crack in a fir tree; sometimes the birds excavate or deepen a hole for themselves." Howard Saunders says: "The nest is placed sometimes in gate-posts, iron supports of fences and fissures in living trees." I have quoted these two passages, as during my short study of these birds I found it was hardly ever the case. The birds always chose the rotten stump of a fir-tree which had become so soft with age that the wood almost crumbled into dust on being touched. The height of the nest from the ground varied from six inches to about five feet. The nesting-hole was usually from one to two feet deep, and was always made by the birds themselves. They never seemed to occupy a hole that had been made by other means, nor would they take to a nesting-box, many of which had been hung up for that purpose.

The Cosy Home.

The nest itself was in most cases constructed of a groundwork of moss, and thickly lined with rabbits' fur. The eggs were white, spotted with light red, and were rather larger than those of the Blue Tit.

When disturbed off her nest, the hen bird flew up into a tree near by and showed little fear of the intruder. The male bird also appeared on the scene, and remained near until we moved away. The only exception I found of the bird not making its own nesting hole, was a pair that built in a fissure of a fir-tree over which a board had been placed.

The food of the Crested Tit consists of insects, larvæ and pine seeds. I did not notice Crested Tits feeding or consorting with any other of the Parus tribe; but in the autumn, I believe, they do associate with other members of their genus.

CANARY QUERIES.

Sits Curled Up.

C. W. B.—I think it most likely this bird's laziness is merely the outsome of a too well-fed condition. Treat as follows for two or three weeks: Staple diet plain canary seed only. Once a week give separately a small teaspoonful of summer rape, and on one other day a similar quantity of crushed sponge cake sprinkled with maw. If available in good condition, give a little green food on each of the remaining days—watercress, tender tops of inner stalks of celery, or any green salad grown under cover. Limit the diet strictly to this for, say, three weeks. In the first week add six drops of syrup of buckthorn to the water every second day. Omit it in the second week, and give again, as before, in the third week. Assuming you are quite certain the bird has not moulted, I take it you might have been away for a time in the autumn and the bird possibly moulted during your absence. You should move him to a quite warm position, but bright and healthful, and free from draughts, and then if he does not show signs of moulting in a fortnight or so, move him to a cold room, but see that it is free from draughts and damp. One or other of these moves should bring on a moult. You will find this subject dealt with more fully in the forthcoming "Cage Birds Annual."

Aviary Accommodation.

A Constant Reader.—(1) Half-inch walls will not prevent the building being extremely susceptible to climatic influences, which would be detrimental to your birds. I take it there is a framework on to which these walls are built, in which case you should line the inside with another thickness of half-inch timber, and fill in the space between the two thicknesses with sawdust or wool waste, as advised to "W.C.R.," which reply, generally, will be useful to you. It would be better for the small North window to be fast, and a portion of the one looking South made to open. (2) I do not quite see how you can get in all the cages and flight you mention, and I am handicapped in not knowing the position of the door. If you would send me a rough sketch just to show position of door and windows, and ventilating apertures, if any, with measurements marked on them, I should be glad to help you as far as possible. The two large six-compartment cages might go on each side—the six-feet sides—but I do not see how a flight can go at this end without building it over the window, which would be very undesirable. (3) It depends upon the nature and extent of the deformity whether a cock with a crippled foot would breed successfully. If it is fairly active in getting about the perches, it would probably breed all right.

Sudden Death (R. S. B.).—The bird undoubtedly died from an apoplectic seizure, which might have been brought on by a shock at some strange sight or movement, or by an overfed condition. Nothing you could have done would have been of any avail. The heat of the room is not sufficient to have been an exciting cause.

Wing and Song (Johnnie Walker).—(1) Yes, you should certainly leave the wing feather alone. It is quite possible they may grow the proper length next moult. You might catch the bird and look whether there are broken quills left in where feathers appear to be missing. If there is, you may carefully remove these stumps, but do nothing else in this way. You might also treat him as advised to "M.S." for a fortnight to bring him on song. (2) Assuming you are quite certain about the sex of the Norwich cock, and he is, as you say, in perfect health and active, there is no reason at all why he should not breed successfully. If, however, you are breeding birds for singing, a cock with such poor vocal powers is a very undesirable stock bird.

Seed Samples (Tavistock Clear).—The Spanish canary is a good all-round seed of excellent quality. The sample called German rape is not summer rape, but probably a mixture of bird rapes containing a proportion of hot mustardy seed. I do not care for this seed for regular use. Try to get some of the mild, nutty-flavoured sort. The cole is a very nice clean and good seed. If you cannot get good nutty summer rape, you may mix equal parts of this cole with the sample of rape you now have for use in the same way as rape. The hemp is an excellent quality. The conditional mixture is very fair, and will serve its purpose well.

A Mixed Aviary (Whib).—In the first place you should only try this experiment of turning out the Canaries if they have hitherto been accustomed to a quite normal temperature; and, secondly, if you wish to be tolerably certain of fair results you will keep the birds caged in the aviary as you suggest. Otherwise, in such a mixture as you would have, the chance of the birds making a hash of breeding matters is somewhat great. Or you might keep the Canaries caged until about nesting. Then open the door and allow them the freedom of the aviary, but keep nest-boxes in the cages to induce hens to return to them to build their nests.

Stopped Singing (M.S.).—When you treated the bird as you had been advised here you should have started at the beginning and first of all removed the causes. Then the treatment might have been permanently, instead of temporarily successful. Keep the bird now in a cosy place, not overheated, nor yet on the cold side, but let the temperature be as equable as possible, and quite free from draughts. Give a staple of plain canary only. Every second day give in addition ¼ a teaspoonful of summer rape and a morsel of banana, and on the alternate days a similar quantity of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it and sprinkled with maw. Limit the diet to this for the next three weeks. In the water add six drops of syrup of buckthorn for two days, and afterwards 20 drops of whisky, five each of oxymel of squills and ipecacuanha wine, and two of eucalyptus oil well shaken together every second day for a week or fortnight, as may seem necessary. The bird will not sing again until the moulting has quite ceased.

Warm Sand (Sand).—It is not unusual for birds to be quite voracious after sand when it has been withheld for a time, or when a different sort is put in the cages. In the case of your birds it would be the naturally saline flavour which was the chief attraction, and the warmth would but add to the ardour of their feast. Clean sea sand is greatly appreciated by Canaries, and is beneficial.

Exterminating Mice (Anxious).—Really, I would not like to dogmatise about what mice could not do in the way of climbing. If your wall-paper has a matt, or rough, or coated surface, or is even torn a bit here and there, I believe it quite possible for a mouse to climb up the 5ft. to cage. Remember they are perfect masters of the art, taking advantage of the least possible aid which may be present. You can disperse them by introducing tarred straws into the holes, or a little chloride of lime, and then sealing holes with cement. But the best way would be to use a course of "Virus," and fill up the holes a month later.

Loud Squeaky Noise (W.I.).—Is this noise continuous sometimes, going on, say, for ten minutes, and worse at night, or is it only an intermittent squeak now and again? and does the bird sing at all? If the answers to these questions are in the negative I am inclined to think nothing at all is wrong, but that the bird is a hen, with perhaps a rather harsh voice, and the squeak is nothing worse than the bird's natural "tweet" call-note, which most hens are now beginning to give vent to. You might give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry, and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed, every second day for a week or so. Then if not better, and you think my surmise cannot be correct, please write again, and give more particulars about the occurrence and frequency of the noise. See that the bird is in no draughts.

Converting Greenhouse (Beginner, Stonehouse).—The greenhouse of which you send sketch will make quite a nice and most suitable birdroom by carrying out the alterations you suggest. I should strongly advise you to cover the glass roof with boards and felt in preference to corrugated iron, and you might, if there appears any likelihood of the light being dull near the top at the back, leave a small space uncovered in the centre of boarded roof to act as a small skylight, being careful to make it as watertight as possible. If the glass is not particularly required for other purposes, you should certainly allow it to remain in. Then, before another winter arrives, you should make movable wood shutters to cover the greater part of the glass front in very severe weather. In this space you should be able to run up to 15 pairs, allowing a single breeding cage 20ins. long for each pair, arranged on the back wall in three tiers—5 in each tier—starting from about 18ins. from the floor, and two large flights on top, say, 4ft. 6ins. long each, for the young. If required, you could also find space for another good sized flight at the end opposite the door.

Finishing Aviary (W.C.R.).—The walls of timber an inch thick are substantial enough for your purpose, but it would be a very considerable improvement to line inside the framework with quarter inch boards and fill in the space between with sawdust or wool waste. Then, even if the outer boards crack or warp, the house remains practically draught-proof. Of course, well painting the outside is, in any case, a very wise economy. It would also have been better to leave a third part of each glass "light" available for opening. As regards ventilation you want only an inlet for fresh air near the floor. If the house stands on firm dry ground, I would place this in the centre of the floor. Otherwise, insert one in the door near the bottom similar to those in the ends, and arrange a deflector, if required, inside to prevent draught going direct to the cages. You should be able to close this if necessary in bad weather.

Calcarious Growth (Royston).—I'm afraid I do not know what kind of growth this is. Is it a kind of scurfy growth on the skin, or has it the appearance of an abscess filled with yellowish matter? If the latter, paint the place every second day for a week with tincture of iodine, and keep the bird as quiet and restful as possible. If it is a scurfy growth anoint it every second day with Lanocyllin. In either case give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur, and sprinkled with maw seed every second day, and on the alternate days add 20 drops of whisky, a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a split pea, and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a threepenny-piece, to the drinking water. Then report progress, and describe the growth as minutely as you can.

A Great Eater (P. Allen).—See that the hen is kept in a fairly comfortable place, quite free from draughts and extreme fluctuations, and in a good-sized cage, where she can get a fair amount of exercise. Limit the supply of food, and for staple give a teaspoonful, only, of plain canary seed each day. Every third day reduce this ration by one-half, and add the same quantity of summer rape. Once a week give, in addition to seed, a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake sprinkled with maw and gold of pleasure, and on each of the remaining days give a spray of green food, if available in good condition. Continue this restricted dietary for two or three weeks. Keep cage floor strewn with clean, gritty sand. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb, and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a split pea every second day for a week, and in the following week give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid, every second day

Tender Feet (D. L. Finn).—(1) You should have given some particulars about the condition of the feed and the bird's age. The tenderness may arise from more than one cause. Keep cage floor and perches as clean as possible, and bathe the feet daily for a few days with a warm solution of boracic acid—a teaspoonful of acid in a saucerful of water. Then dry, and slightly anoint feet with zinc ointment. See that claws are not overgrown. (2) This depends upon the cause of the tenderness. If otherwise quite well and active, it probably would be fit for mating. (3) Treat Crest for a fortnight as advised "G.W.B.," but in the third week add to the diet half a teaspoonful of mixed seed on two different days, and every second day a similar quantity of sponge cake moistened with a few drops of sherry and sprinkled with gold of pleasure seed, and in the drinking water give four drops each tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid, every second day.

Concerning Cinnamons (Cinnamon).—(1) In the yellow bird the colour is carried right to the edge of the web of the feathers, whereas in buff type it stops a little short of the edge, leaving a narrow margin of white at the tip and round the edge of web of the feathers. This makes the birds appear a few shades lighter, and gives a somewhat frosted or mealy appearance. If you got Parts III. and VIII. of "Our Canaries," which contain coloured plates of yellow and buff cinnamons respectively, you would, perhaps, better grip the distinction. (2) Yes, it is necessary to colour-feed them for show. (3) If the ordinary hen, as you put it, had no cinnamon blood in her veins, the result would be greens and very heavily variegated young. (4) No, but if the hen was properly bred they may be "light," more or less. (5) The reason you see so few advertised is that there are comparatively few breeders of pure cinnamons. This is unfortunate, and a trifle difficult to understand, as they are certainly most interesting birds, and as hardy and easy to breed as most Fancy breeds. There is really no valid drawback.

Doubtful Sex (Stockton).—Did not you see reply to "Novice Sex" on Jan. 6th, re distinguishing the sex of Canaries. In a general way the cock is bolder, more dominant in appearance, has a rather larger and more bolting eye, and a softer and more musical call, than the hen. In appearance all differences are sometimes very trifling and comparative. When the cock sings he inflates his throat considerably, and a palpable throbbing is apparent as the notes are produced. If a hen sings, it is a short, choppy, broken strain, more of a sustained twitter than a song, and there is little or no swelling of the throat. If examined, the cock will now have a prominent and rather pointed vent, that of the hen being on a level with the abdomen. It is not unlikely that both your birds are hens. If a true pair, the young cock will be fit for breeding about the end of March or beginning of April. Give each half-a-teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake moistened with four drops of sherry and sprinkled with a mixture of equal parts maw and gold of pleasure every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days a pinch of mixed seed.

Asthma Not Cured (Paradox).—Right! There seems no lack of so-called cures, some of them, believe me, not a little risky to use. The non-success of your treatment may be due to failure to remove the existing cause, or it may also be due to the birds being past their youth, or the duration of the disease, causing it to become chronic, in either of which cases the outlook is in no sense hopeful. The birds are probably not acclimatised to a cold room, and I would advise you to move them, if convenient, to a place where the temperature is nice and comfortable, not overheated, but as equable as possible, and quite free from draught or damp. In addition to the staple seed diet, give half-a-teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion, well mixed in it, every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days a third of a teaspoonful of maw. Then give nothing but the staple for a week, and repeat these extras for another fortnight. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb, and as much Epsom salts, as will cover a sixpence, every second day for a week, and afterwards 20 drops of the mixture you are now giving every second day for a week. Then suspend all drugs for a week, and repeat this course over again, continuing the mixture for a fortnight this time. Treat strictly as above; give nothing else either in foods of medicines, and report result at end of the course.

Eating Feathers (E. E. N.).—Catch the birds and examine plumage carefully to see if they are pestered with grey lice. If they are, hand-wash each bird twice, with an interval of a week between, and in the first and second waters used for washing well, stir a teaspoonful of creolin to each pint of water. Each time, whilst birds are drying, well wash out the cages with a warm solution of creolin, about double the above strength. If no lice are found, give a staple diet of plain canary only. Every second day give separately half-a-teaspoonful of summer rape, and a morsel of banana, and on the alternate days twice a week a similar quantity of crushed sponge cake, with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed. On the first two occasions only also slightly dust the latter with flowers of sulphur. A mealworm a day if available would do good, and a spray of watercress may be given three times a week. In the drinking water add 20 drops of whisky, as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and half as much chlorate of potash every second day for a week.

Birds Dying (Pinxton).—I am not quite clear whether your birds have been dying recently or only during the moult. You ought also to have given some details of your general management, which I have no doubt whatever is at fault, though your letter gives me no clue as to how or where. Get "Canary Breeding for Beginners," which our Manager will send you for 7d. post free, and see if you cannot discover where you go wrong. Meanlime treat as follows: See that the birds are kept in a bright and healthy place, and well protected from draughts and damp, and that all your seeds and foods are sound and sweet. Keep cage floor strewn with clean gritty sand, and all food and water vessels scrupulously clean. In addition to the staple of plain canary, give half-a-teaspoonful of summer rape every second day, and on each alternate day for a fortnight, and twice a week afterwards give a similar quantity of egg food, or crushed sponge cake, sprinkled with maw seed. Two or three times a week give a morsel of sweet fruit, or a spray of watercress if obtainable in good condition. In the drinking water add six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a split pea, every second day for a week, and afterwards 20 drops of chemical food every second day for a fortnight. If not well in a month write again referring to this reply.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

Yellow Budgerigar Ailing.

A. H.—I should keep this bird quite separate from my healthy stock, but keep it in a room which has a fire. Use a crock drinker, and for one week put one drop daily of aromatic sulphuric acid into the drinking water (one tablespoonful)—Budgerigars are small drinkers. Take the bird gently in the hand, and from a quill give three drops of Dinneford's Magnesia direct to the beak, and after a week's interval repeat the dose. As regards food, supply a mixture of canary and white millet seed in equal parts, adding a pinch of cuttlebone (crushed to size of millet seed) to the daily supply. Keep a spray of millet hanging in the cage, also a piece of cuttlebone and a small tin of oats and crushed plain biscuit. I almost doubt its being alive when you see this. If it still lives, keep its cage very clean, and as soon as it has recovered put it in a fresh one, and thoroughly cleanse and disinfect its present one. You cannot put it out of doors till spring.

A Question of Diet.

Silver Sea.—(1) Keep the Gouldians warm, but not in a vitiated atmosphere. Supply them with canary and white millet, also millet sprays ad lib., and supply a small tin of crushed oats and paddy rice. They will also require greenfood (lettuce or apple at the season), and should have access to cuttlebone and grit. I should also give them a little milk sop (rather sloppy); this will certainly help to tide them over the critical time. They may refuse it at first, but will ultimately take it. If the voidings are at all hard give an occasional dose of Dinneford's Magnesia (one teaspoonful) in the daily supply of drinking water, also about twice weekly put the same quantity of Byno-phosphates in the drinking water—use a crock or china drinker. Same treatment for Diamonds. Both species have bred in captivity. (2) It is a question of fine condition mainly with these, but the chances of the following are all good: Gold-breasted, St. Helena and Orange-cheeked Waxbills, Green Avadavats, Cordon Bleus, and Firefinches.

A Grey Parrot.

"Didactyl."—(1) Either because of some slight irritation it has pulled out these feathers, or shed them in the ordinary way, or it has had some sore there in the past which has left this small area bare. Providing the skin is healthy and sound, the feathers should be renewed in due course. (2) Providing there is no skin disease, the most that can happen is the permanence of the bare patch. If there is any skin trouble, the area of bareness may spread. (3) A laxative (1 part Dinneford's Magnesia to 3 parts of water), given in lieu of the ordinary drinking water as required to keep the bowels moving freely—fæces should not be watery loose. Examine the plumage and skin for parasites; if such exist, they must be got rid of. The best way is to use a mist sprayer, and well damp the bird's plumage twice a week—either dilute solutions of quassia and firtree oil. Special precaution should be taken against draught while the plumage is damp, and with the fir-tree oil solution, do not get it into the bird's eyes. (4) I should say not. (5) Only those who have had some experience with the feathered tribe. In general, improper dietary usually ends in an irritated skin and feather pulling, or chronic dyspepsia; but, as the bird appears healthy, a proper course of dietary and the regular use for a time of the laxative, should bring about a normal condition of things. Diet: Seed mixture, ripe fruit, nuts, and plain biscuits or stale crust of household bread, with grit, cuttlebone, and water, will form an ample range of diet. Either the Chemical Food or Byno-phosphates of commerce form good tonics. You would find our Nutshell Booklet, "Grey Parrot," 2½ post free, from our Manager, very helpful.

Parrakeets or Finches.

J. B.—You raise many interesting points, some of which are by no means easy to answer. Carefully note the following brevities: Foreign birds of all orders do not breed as freely indoors as out. Parrakeets take longer to settle down than the Finch tribe; yet many of them are very active in roomy quarters. There is so much individuality among individual pairs of birds, of all orders, that a species amiable in one aviary is not so in another; again, a species will breed freely in one aviary and do nothing in another with even better and more natural accommodation. Again, with Parrakeets these take longer to settle down, and many species will not tolerate other species in their enclosure when breeding. Personally, I have not found Parrakeets lethargic in roomy quarters, though some Lovebirds are. Again, there ought to be no lack of life and activity in your aviary with three pairs of Budgerigars, 1 pair of Passerine Parrakeets, and 1 pair Red Rosellas, neither is there much room for more—that is, for there to be breeding encouragement, and all the above are probable breeders. With them you could keep (odd males preferably), Red-crested, Virginian, and Green Cardinals, which would cause variety, and increase the attractiveness of the aviary. A pair of either Canary-winged or Tui Parrakeets would be a nice species to add to your series, but you'll have to wait opportunity to secure them. If you decide on Finches, the same element of uncertainty comes in, perhaps not so great. You could leave one pair to each foot frontage of the aviary. But before helping you to a final decision, I should like a description of the aviary, some idea of its environment, and whether heated at all during the winter.

Parrot Weak on Legs.

G. P.—Your data gives me very little to go upon; and it would appear that there is something very seriously wrong with your bird, and you would do well to let some vet. (used to treating birds) see it. Foment the legs with hot water (not hot enough for discomfort) daily, dry with cloth, rub with whiskey, and two hours later with Elliman's Embrocation. Give three drops of tasteless castor oil direct to the beak from a quill, at intervals of three hours, till full relief is given—then give as drinking water every four day, a mixture of one part Dinneford's Magnesia to three parts of water, so long as the fœces are not watery loose. On other days put one teaspoonful of Byno-phosphates in the daily supply of drinking water (about two tablespoonfuls). Weak brandy, sherry, or whiskey and water may be offered occasionally as a stimulant. Get a box of honey and borax from your chemist, and put a little on its tongue, twice daily; this will help to keep its mouth clear. Use a camel hair brush, and clean this and other utensils used in treating the bird both before and after use. Confine its dietary to seed mixture, ripe fruit, nuts, and plain biscuits, with grit, cuttlebone, and water. If it must have a little sop, prepare as follows: Piece of stale household bread or plain biscuit, sprinkle with sugar, put half a teaspoonful of Byno-phosphates over it, and then as much boiling water as it will absorb, and supply to the bird when cool.

An Ailing Amazon (G. H. B.).—You will, of course, continue to diet the bird permanently as advised. Continue the treatment till full relief is given. Try the followiug mixture—that is, when not giving the magnesia: Equal parts of syrup of squills, tincture of lobelia, and syrup of tolu—12 drops of the mixture in two tablespoonfuls of water in lieu of the ordinary driuking water. As soon as the breathing becomes easier, stop this mixture, and put the bird either on a course of Chemical Food or Byno-phosphates. Glad to note the improvement; persevere with the treatment, and undoubtedly there will be a complete recovery.

Kind and Value (E. Daw).—Either you have a female or young male, Ringneck or Alexandrine Parrakeet. About 20s. as a non-talker. Yes, both species talk, but some individuals take a lot of teaching, though they uenally articulate clearly. As soon as it is tame, keep it amongst you, where it will hear plenty of conversation, also pet and fuss about with it (do not scare it), and also teach it by constant repetition of such words and sentences as you wish it to learn. It is no use attempting to train it till you have won its confidence. So long as it is scared by your being in its vicinity, it is no use trying to train it; it must be tamed first. A talented talker, 63s. and upwards.

What Bird, etc. (Kampter).—Your bird appears to be correctly named, but there are several species very alike, and yours is too young yet for a definite opinion. A non-talker in good condition about 21s., a good talker about 63s. You had better tell me how you have been feeding and treating it. In the meantime, give Dinneford's Magnesia and Byno-phosphates as advised to "Thos. Williams" in this issue, and confine its dietary to seed mixture, ripe fruit,, nuts, and plain biscuits, water, of conrse, also cuttlebone and grit. Its full plumage will appear in the course of this year.

Sexual Distinctions of Green Bulbul (C. H.).—The sexes of the Gold-fronted Green Bulbul are practically alike in plumage. I have examined several proved pairs, and could not find any constant variation. The only points I could distinguish were that the black face mask, the blue moustachial streaks, and the area of gold on forehead are a little smaller in the female than in the male, and perhaps a little less brilliant, but the difference is not great, and did not hold good in each instance. Philornis is a synonym of Chloropsis. Soft food (insectile mixture), milk sop, ripe fruit and live insects (mealworms, spiders, earwigs, caterpillars, etc.). They become very tame, and can soon be trained to take a fly round the room and return to their cage at will.

An Ailing Budgerigar (Eaglet).—Cage the bird separately and keep it warm. Give it a mixture of canary and white millet (equal parts), with about one teaspoonful of cuttlebone (crushed to size of millet), mixed in with the daily supply. Give two drops of tasteless castor oil at intervals of three hours till the bowels are fairly well cleansed, and in conjunction therewith for a few days dissolve two drops of laudanum in the daily supply of drinking water (use a crock or china drinker). Let the bird have a little fresh lettuce occasionally, and if it will eat it one or two small pieces of arrowroot biscuit. Keep a millet spray and a piece of clean cuttlebone hanging in the cage. A small piece of apple, if the bird will eat it, will also be beneficial, and grit must not be omitted.

Grey Parrot Ailing (Thos. Williams).—Keep this bird warm, out of the reach of draught, but yet in some ventilated position. Diet: Seed mixture, ripe fruit, nuts, plain biscuit. Keep a piece of cuttlebone hanging in the cage, and add a pinch of grit to the daily supply of seed. Every fourth day for a fortnight add one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia to the daily supply of drinking water, and on other days the same quantity of Byno-phosphates. Do not give milk sop; if it requires sop, give the following: take a stale crust of household bread or piece of plain biscuit, sprinkle with sugar, put over it half a teaspoonful of the Byno-phosphates, then as much boiling water as the bread or biscuit will absorb, and when cool supply to the bird. Our Nutshell Booklet, "The Grey Parrot," 2½d. post free, from our Manager, should help you greatly. Report progress a fortnight hence.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES, AND HYBRIDS.

A Pet Greenfinch.

Norfolk.—You won't have much trouble in satisfying him in the food line. The average Greenie is a very lusty fellow, and thrives well, given good quality seeds and an average amount of attention. The most important item is a daily feed of good, sound (full kernelled) sunflower (or half sunflower, half safflower) seed. This can be offered in a separate dish, or placed among the stock mixture. The latter should be made up as follows: Canary and teazle, two pints each, hemp, summer rape, charlock, and linseed half a pint each. Crack the safflower seed, if used. Wild seed mixture, and some good maker's special packet Finch mixture, can be occasionally offered for a change, while sunflower heads (gathered from the garden) full of seed, thistle and hard-heads, seeding chickweed, groundsel and shepherd's purse, should be freely given as in season.

Our Biggest Finch.

Surrey Reader.—You would do well to peruse some up-to-date book on the subject, say, Mr. Norman's "British Bird Manual" (price, 1s. 1d. from CAGE BIRDS office), which deals with the Hawfinch. The best house cage is the "Finch stock cage, not less than 20 inches long by 14 inches high by 10 inches wide, and the two perches should be ½in. and ⅝in. respectively. The water-hole should, naturally, be a very large one. As regards the proper feeding, the principal food for a caged Hawfinch is sound, plump, white sunflower seed, or mixed sunflower and safflower. Sunflower seed, which is black, or striped, however, is not bad by any means; still, I prefer white myself whenever obtainable. Given this, and a mealworm or two every day or so, the bird asks for little more. The mealworms are a great help in keeping (and getting) a bird steady. The bird also appreciates hemp, linseed, canary, oats, small wheat, and sometimes a little buckwheat, summer rape, small Indian corn, etc. His beak makes short work of beechmast, suitable nuts (crack them when necessary), plum and cherry stones, hawthorn, privet, etc., berries and the like. They appreciate a little young lettuce, watercress, chickweed, shepherd's purse, also ripe apples, pear, etc., occasionally. They make no exception in favour of tender green garden peas, of which they are passionately fond, and these are especially good given in the pod. They are fond of a bath, so let him have one whenever the weather is suitable.

Diet of Linnet.

Young Fancier.—There is plenty of time yet for your Linnet to come into breeding condition before you will want to make a start. Let the stock mixture be: Canary and teazle three pints each, summer rape, one pint, charlock and linseed half-a-pint each. A feed of maw and niger, and a good wild seed mixture can be given frequently (varied) by way of a change, while your bird would undoubtedly benefit by being given a teaspoonful of good hemp seed every other day. Let him have a little green food, especially rape seedlings, in the winter, and flowering dandelion tops and the young leaves, also seeding shepherd's purse, chickweed, plantain, and groundsel freely when obtainable. To bring them in condition for song, etc., the great "secret" is to give them a supply of the best old hemp, and crack it lightly, so that they feed well on it. Also put in the "tit-bit" drawer every other day from about the middle of February a teaspoonful of the following mixture: Two ounces each of gold of pleasure, niger, plantain, sesame, and thistle, one ounce each of mustard (the golden-yellow seed), dandelion, maw, cornflower, and lettuce. The "Nutshell" booklet upon the Linnet would be very helpful to you; also Mr. Norman's book upon British Hardbills.

What Do They Like?

Puzzled.—One has to find out what it is a Bullie hen prefers as nesting material, etc. Mr. Alexander was quite correct in speaking of their vagaries when in captivity. Bullfinch hens vary as much in taste, so far as nesting sites, nesting materials, etc., are concerned, as do Canary hens. Some Canary hens build nests entirely of cow-hair, with a little white deer-hair as lining, ignoring the moss contained in the nest-bag. Others, however, use practically all moss. I never interfere; it is best to let the fair sex have their own way. Give the Canary hens an ordinary nest-bag and a supply of charpie, or white "deer-hair," for nesting materials. If you get out into the country at all, you can find dried grasses, bents, and an old Blackbird's or Greenfinch's nest (pulled to pieces), and give these to the hen Bullies. My own hen Britishers are often fond of charpie, and one or two have built a fine, clean-looking, cosy nest practically entirely of it. Some use an earthenware nest pan, but the majority of hen British birds prefer wooden nest-boxes, or Roller travelling cages with the end (or top) and inside fitments removed. Some like an old Blackbird's nest to re-line, and some will lay their eggs in simply a hole made in dried grasses strewn on the cage floor. They are peculiarly variable. They will rear the young (or attempt to do so, I should say, for few succeed, the usual plan being to put the eggs under foster parents) on the ordinary seeds, but must have unlimited seeding shepherd's purse, groundsel, chickweed, and the like. In addition, mine also relish soft foods, and egg food, and live ants' eggs. About the best nesting material out for hen Bullies can be made from a cheap cocoanut fibre doormat. Unravel the fibre, and cut it into varying lengths (from one to two and a half inches). It works out very cheaply in price, and my Bullies delight to build with it.

A Hybrid Couple.

A Tryer.—You will find that articles giving the experiences of fanciers when hybrid-breeding will appear in due course, and you will get many hints from them. You read the one in the Birthday Issue, I presume? All Hybrid couples (two British birds) can be treated on practically similar lines; there is no need, broadly speaking, to feed one pair one way and another pair another way, for this would be a great tax on one's time where many pairs are put up. All couples should have plenty of young dandelion leaves, likewise the flowering and seeding heads of dandelion and groundsel, shepherd's purse and chickweed, according to season. The dandelion and chickweed are obtainable now in the southern counties, in many places, and it will not be long before you are able to get shepherd's purse freely. Give good feeds of niger and maw seeds to both birds daily, and do not stint Goldies of hemp, Bullie hens of sunflower, while they may have a taste of egg food if they show any liking for it. My own hens all show a liking for it (if they are in cages). Some fanciers believe in transferring the eggs to hen Canaries, and some (but very few) give the hen Britishers a chance to hatch them and feed the young. When the couples are in cages the former invariably prove the most certain method, especially with hen Bullies, whom I never find any too reliable. Should you get young, offer all of the above-mentioned seeding green foods freely, egg food (or rich insectivorous food, if the hen Bullie likes it), small mealworms, live ants' eggs, and sprays off rose or fruit bushes which are infested with smother fly (aphides). The seeding green food is often obtainable (though later on in the year, in time, however, for most young Hybrids) simply covered with "blight" and tiny crawling things, and is then most valuable.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

Wild Birds (J. B.).—We do not know of any such law. Wild birds are sold in Manchester market place. A booklet dealing with the Wild Bird Act is published by Messrs. Trower and Co. (442, Caledonina Road, London, N.), price 7d. post free; it is called the "Bird Dealers' and Catchers' Guide."

A Coloured Plate (C. Smith).—We have not published a coloured plate of the kind you mention. Every variety of Canary (including the original wild Canary) is depicted on the frontispiece to the new standard work, "Our Canaries."

Nightingales, etc., in Italy (E. Geddes).—We must ask you to kindly excuse us from publishing your letter. We have never heard of the practice in connection with Nightingale, and apparently you yourself are not sure the statements are correct.

Two Items (D. L. Fynn).—(1) We have never tried making our own, and do not know of a recipe. We should think you could buy it even more cheaply than you could make it. (2) The subscriptions to most societies vary from 2s. 6d. to 5s., and in some an entrance fee of 1s. is charged. Full particulars concerning practically every society will be found in "Cage Birds Annual," which contains a society directory.

GENERAL Queries. — — emfwy pemfwy pem

Press Cuttings (N. Gibbons; W. Tebbs; A.P.; and Others).—Accept our thanks for the newspaper cuttings sent us.

Photographs (C. Smith).—Mr. Fulljames has handed over your photographs to us, and we will try to find a corner for one or other of them in a future issue. Many thanks.

The Canary Family (B. Chapman).—Such a plate as you describe, depicting the original wild Canary, and every variety of domesticated Canary, appeared in Part 1 of "Our Canaries," and forms the frontispiece of this standard work.

An Address (T. King).—The monthly journal of the Foreign Bird Club ("Bird Notes.") can be obtained from Mr. J. H. Hemstock, Market Place, Ashbourne, Derbyshire. The price to non-members is 1/6. The member's annual subscription is 10/-.

A Solution (A Clear).—We appreciate your point; both eyes, however, were marked—the left is quite closed.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

THE NORWICH PLAINHEAD CLUB.

Presentation of Cup, Medals, Cash Prizes etc., and an Honorarium to the Sec.

A most enjoyable and in every way successful evening was spent on January 20 by members and friends, and was made the occasion of the presentation of the N.P.C. cup, medals, and money prizes won during the recent show season, and also a presentation of a purse of sovereigns to the secretary, Mr. J. Hopkins. Some 60 members and friends sat down to a very sumptuous dinner at 6 o'c. Amongst others present, were: The President, Mr. Dent (Preston), H. W. Battye, A. Wellings, J. Trengove, W. Booth, Taylor (Sheffield), as representing the judges; and Messrs. Hopkins, Brothers, S. Cook, J. Raynes, J. Hayhurst, A. Hirst, J. E. Davies, J. Rukin (the Lizard fancier), P. Atkinson, and many other prominent exhibitors of Norwich and other varieties. Telegrams of congratulation were read from Mr. Carl (Cage Birds), and Mr. E. Baker (Cowes); and numerous other letters were received from members, wishing the Club a successful evening.

After toasting "The King," a very interesting programme of song and recitations was proceeded with, excellent renderings being given by Mr. Simpson (Preston), and Mr. Morris (Stockport). Unfortunately our comic man failed us, but this, on the other hand, brought out our home talent, Mr. Vickers (Shaw) causing roars of laughter with his songs and recitations. Mr. McKail gave us a rendering in Scotch, and an amusing sketch, entitled "on strike," which seemed to appeal feelingly to some of our "locked out" cotton members. Messrs. Grey and Barraclough (both members) also contributed songs which were highly appreciated, and Mr. Chorlton (Stockport) accompanied on the piano in first class style. The president gave the toast of "The Norwich Plainhead Club," and stated with what pleasure he found himself in the chair on the occasion of the first social gathering of the club; he trusted this was the making of an annual gathering. The toast of "The Visitors" was very ably given by Mr. J. Raynes, and responded to by Mr. Rukin. Mr. J. E. Davies gave the toast of "The Judges," and as the winner of the cup and champion medal, said he felt especially grateful to these gentlemen for the noble way in which they had done their work. Mr. H. W. Battye replied, and hinted that he didn't like to see birds staged dirty, a remark that caused sundry hard looks from some gentlemen present. He finished up by saying he told his steward at one N.P.C. show that he was not going to encourage lazy beggars.

The principal event of the evening was, of course, the presentation of the cup and other prizes. This was very gracefully performed by Mr. Dent. The cup has been won outright by Mr. J. E. Davies, who, in accepting same, said how pleased he was to have won it. It had required a great effort, but he had set out to win it, and was of course glad to have done so. He very generously offered for competition next year two £5 5s. cups, one for champions, the other for amateurs, and suggested that these should be won outright the first year, as he considered it was a great strain, and a tax on any fancier's resources, to have to compete three or more years for any trophy. Next in order came the gold medal for runner-up to the cup (Mr. J. Raynes), and the rose-bowl, given by Mr. Davies, which had been won by Mr. Sam Cook, after a strenuous fight, just beating Mr. Vardy by one point. The other medals and prizes were also handed over. Then followed the presentation to Mr. Hopkins of £10, which had been contributed by members as some recompense for the work and care which he had given to the affairs of the Club.

Mr. Hopkins thanks all the members for their kindness, which he appreciates greatly. He was very much surprised and delighted to be made the recipient of such a handsome gift. Mr. W. J. Grey also generously promised a silver cup for the amateurs. Further songs and sketches concluded a very pleasant evening.—Geo. W. F. Lythgoe.

Also arranged, to hold a table show, Feb. 3rd, in the Masonic Hall, at 8 o'clock, also to enroll district members by paying 2s., which includes towns of Dreghorn, Troon, Kilwinninge, Irvine. YORKSHIRE UNION OF C.B.S.

Council meeting held Jan. 20th, at "Flying Dutchman," Leeds Road, the headquarters of the City of Bradford O.S. Mr. H. H. Towers (Pres.) occupied the chair, and there was a good attendance of delegates present. President and Secretary elected representatives on the committee for the annual priz distribution. The ballot for ten shows at which only points gained count towards the gold novice medals, duly carried out. The name of each affiliated society which had held an open show was placed in a sealed envelope, and ten of these envelopes were withdrawn according to rule, the remainder being destroyed. The names of the societies withdrawn were as follows: Lalsterdyke, Bradford West, Huddersfield, Eccleshill, Gt. Horton, Brighouse, Queensbury, Sandy Lane, Skelmanthorpe, and City of Bradford. In addition to these ten shows, all points won at the Bradford National Show on December 8th and 9th have to be added. The order for the supply of Union novice gold medals was given to Messrs. Fattorini and Son (Bradford), to be of similar weight and quality to those supplied last year. A proposition was made that a Union representative attend the meeting of each affiliated society, when the ballot for officials, new rules, etc., is taken, in order that a more thorough ballot may result. But this was heavily defeated on being put to the meeting. Complaints were made by the Halifax Society about certain informalities which appeared in the schedule of rules printed by the Bradford National Show Committee, whose show was held under the patronage of the Union. After a lengthy discussion it was decided to leave question over for the time being, the Sec. explaining these would not be allowed to occur another year. Many subjects of interest were discussed by the Council, and no doubt these will clear many difficulties which appear to stand in the way of rules being put into effect in the interests of all affiliated societies. Secretaries of Union societies should bear in mind that all nominations of officials, alterations and new rules, should be in my hands by the 1st of February otherwise they will be too late to place on the ballot paper for this year. All Union medals, etc., will be presented at the annual prize distribution in March; particulars of same will be published later. H. Hill, Sec.

Stray Thoughts of an Old Fancier.

A few reminiscences of Mr. J. C. Gamson (Woolwich.)

My first experience of breeding the Norwich Canary dates back twenty-two years, before Canary breeders were catered for, as they are to-day, by Cage Birds; when breeders had to be content with short paragraphs found here and there in one or two poultry papers; and when fanciers were not so communicative as they are to-day. At that time I found it very difficult to get information. I used to walk miles and visit all the bird-shops in the neighbourhood to see where the best birds could be obtained. I was introduced to a bootmaker at Peckham, who, I am glad to say, dealt justly with me.

I bought altogether three pairs of Norwich from him, and from these I bred twenty-three young ones, which, I think, was very good for a beginner. I have often wondered how it was I had such success as a novice, and although I have become more experienced since then, I have never seemed to have the same full measure of success.

Heat or No Heat?

I had an attack of "Bird Fever" once again, and thought I would go in for Crests, and looking over my Cage Birds I answered an advertisement and sent to Norwich for a pair, which duly arrived. They were very fine birds, in splendid condition, when I received them, but after a time they went into a soft moult. Then I removed to a more suitable place, and a second pair of Crests I had had sent up from Norwich I kept under better conditions, and they were a success. I reared seven fine birds from the six Crests and one Crest-bred. I have come to the conclusion that the correspondent who wrote to Cage Birds and said that keeping birds in the living-rooms was the cause of their going into a soft moult was correct, as it proved in my case. I now keep my birds in a room leading from the kitchen, and have given them no other heat than they get by my leaving the kitchen door open at night time; and a hardier and healthier set of birds no breeder could wish for.

The type of Norwich bred twenty years ago, it seems to me, was very different to the type of Norwich bred to-day. At the present time the Norwich is a much larger bird, more chubby in every way, and I like its appearance much better.

I remember a breeder talking of the prevention of egg-binding, and he recommended letting the hens have plenty of flying-room. This may account for my success when I was a novice. I built for them, in an off-room, a flight 5ft. long 4ft. high and 20ins. deep, and I never knew what it was to have any of my hens egg-bound. Neither did I ever loose one of my young birds in their first moult.

Early or Late Breeding.

In bygone days I used to put my birds up the third week in February, if the weather were at all suitable and the birds were ready; and I never found any ill effects result. Last year I did not put them up till the second week in April, which I found rather late to get three nests from the hen; especially in view of the fact that I had to take the cock bird away, as he would not let the hen alone, and she had to bring up the young birds by herself. I am in favour of egg and biscuit, as my birds did not seem to get on very well with bread mixed with the egg.

I have had good success in the past using the old wooden square nest-box, with perforated zinc bottom; but recently I have gone in for the earthenware pan with swansdown lining, and I find it much better in every way. With the old type of square box you had to give the hen so much nesting material, very often I have gone and found the eggs covered up, and have had to disarrange the nest to gather them together. With the earthenware pan one does not have to use so much material, and the eggs are kept better together, being more shallow at the bottom and more comfortable for the hen to sit on her eggs; besides being much cleaner.

A Novel Remedy.

We have had many remedies given us for exterminating the red mite. I used to save all my tobacco ashes, and as I took each egg away from the hen I put it in these ashes; when I set the hen I also sprinkled some at the bottom of the nest. I very seldom saw any red mite in my cages. I had this wrinkle from an old breeder and tried it with the above result.

YORKSHIRE UNION OF C.B.S. COMPETITIONS.

List of Winners and Points Gained.

The City of Bradford O.S. held the last Union show of the season on January 20th, thus bringing to a close all the competitions arranged by the Yorks Union, and also a most eventful year. The W. H. Shackleton challenge trophy to the value of 30 guineas (which has been in existence for five years) is now won outright, Mr. J. Bailey having won this competition three years in succession. He will therefore take the 1st prize, value £15. The 2nd prize has been won by Messrs. Ogden Bros. with an aggregate of 1418 points for the five years; this prize is valued at £10. The 3rd prize value £5, has been won by Mr. W. H. Shackleton, with an aggregate of 1266 points; and the 4th prize (gold medal) value £1 10s., by Mr. H. H. Towers, with an aggregate of 977 points. The present year's competitions have also seen the H. W. Naylor challenge cup, value £5 5s., won outright, the fortunate winner again being Mr. J. Bailey, who has won it three times in succession. Thus the Union will now have to part with two very valuable trophies, which have undoubtedly done much towards stimulating interest in the Yorkshire Canary. Taken as a whole, the entries have not come up as well on the average for the shows which have been held, as in the two previous years, but this is accounted for by the falling off in entries made in the Novice classes, and it looks as though novices in Yorkshire will have to bestir themselves if the classification which the Union has given at each show is to be maintained. However, they have the remedy in their own hands, and I hope they will see to it that this is rectified by the time another show season comes round. The full list of points in the competitions for the year are as follows: W. H. Shackleton trophy: 1, J. Bailey, 274 points; 2, Messrs. Ogden Bros., 265; 3, W. H. Shackleton, 253; 4, Mr. H. H. Towers, 229 points; runner-up in this competition, Mr. L. Dykes, 205 points. The H. W. Naylor cup: 1, J. Bailey, 221 points; 2, Ogden Bros., 195 points. J. W. Ramsden's prizes: 1, J. Bailey, 274 points; 2, Messrs. Ogden Bros., 265 points. In the novice competition the winners of medals in the Yorks Section are S. B. Grayshon, 113 points; S. Smith, 91; W. E. Fergusson, 79; S. Tyas, 74; S. Moore, 67; L. Jebson, 65; A. Sutcliffe, 62; E. Ellis, 52; S. Denby, 50; H. Pearson (Queensbury), 48; T. Tidswell, 48; and J. H. Fowle, 42 points. In the Norwich section the four winners are: H. Simonett, 109 points; J. Roe, 75; F. Rhodes, 69; and B. Clegg, 65 points, wins with most prize money. Runners-up in Yorks: F. Crabtree and J. Harney, 40 points each, in Norwich, H. Birheck, 65 points. Mr. H. Simonett qualified for a medal in the Yorks. section, as well with 81 points to his credit, but according to rule takes the medal from the section in which he has scored most points. Mr. J. W. Ramsden's prizes: 1, H. Simonett, 184 points; 2, G. B. Grayshon, 144. Points gained in Cage Birds competition in the professional section: J. Bailey, 347; Ogden Bros., 338, W. H. Shackleton, 306; H. H. Towers, 277; L. Dykes, 238; J. Thomas, 218; J. Chippendale, 163; Sutcliffe and Son, 139; F. Allen, 97; F. Townsend, 96; Thornton and Bower, 92; J. Helliwell, 62; I. Dyson, 55; A. Cooper, 54; Shaw Bros., 53; H. Hill, 36; W. Cruise, 26. In the amateur section: C. Morrison, 186; Brown and Son, 141; E. Stobart, 57; L. C. Casey, 47; C. F. Hall, 36; Allan Radley, 35; T. Elsegood, 33; Burtinin Bros., 28; A. Wright and Son, 25; J. Lunn, 8. A list of points gained in these two competitions will be sent in to the Secretary of Cage Birds prizes, and he will publish a list of winners in due course. All the above points are taken from the catalogues, and anyone who finds any errors is requested to write me immediately without delay. The whole of the prizes will be given to the successful winners at the annual prize distribution in March. Particulars of same will appear later.—H. Hill, Sec.

NEW CROSS AND DIST. C.B.S.

Annual general meeting, held Jan. 4th, Headquarters, People's Hall, Deptford, Mr. Hill in chair. Financial statement submitted, which showed a substantial balance on the right side of 9s. 4d. Since we started in Jan., 1911, we have enrolled 30 members. This indicates that a go-a-head cage bird society was wanted in this district. A good programme for the year was drawn up, which includes lectures by Messrs. Robson, Norman, and other gentlemen, also judging and washing competitions. Officers were elected:—Mr. Hill, chair; Mr. G. Burton, vice-chair; Mr. Pope, treasurer; Messrs. G. and F. Burton, auditors; committee, Messrs. Hall, Jones, Deane, Gillard, Rouson, F. Burton. A pair stock show, Feb. 1st, heads the programme for 1912, when I hope all members will kindly support.—G. and J. Barton.

A "Wagon" Cage for Redpolls.

Sir,—It would prove of interest to me, and, I feel sure, other readers of your very fine paper, if someone would give a description of the cage for a Redpoll which has a little wagon for the seed to be drawn up in. I remember seeing this when quite a youngster, but have quite forgotten the working. Many readers will be glad, I know, to assist.

The Treatment of Live Birds by Railway Companies.

A Move by the Great Northern Co.

Sir,—It is very pleasing to hear that the Great Northern Railway Company have issued the following instructions to their staff re the handling of live birds, etc.:—"The attention of the staff is directed to the necessity for seeing that small animals, live birds, etc., are supplied with water when received at a station and not promptly delivered to consignees." The above instructions will apply to birds received at a large station late on Saturday night, when there are no more trains to take them to their destination till the following Monday morning. Probably the above notice will serve to rouse thoughtless servants to the necessity of attending to the wants of stranded birds. It would be a good plan to fix a drinker inside the cage, so that it could readily be filled at the station, should there be any need. It is to be hoped that other railway companies will follow the above example, and thus save both fanciers and railway companies unnecessary loss.

A Grumble at the Crystal Palace Show.

Sir,—Now that the entries have closed for the coming Crystal Palace Show, these remarks of mine, I hope, will be taken as fair criticism. I wish to enter a protest against what I consider a very poor classification indeed for what ought to be such a representative exhibition. This meagreness of classes provided for some of our most popular varieties—even in the champion section, but much more so in the amateur section—cannot instil into anyone that to win at the Crystal Palace is the height of the bird fancier's ambition. And I think I am correct when I say that there is not enough of that belief with regard to our Palace Show. Not one in every hundred fanciers from Lancashire sends to the Palace, although such a direct journey for the birds, whereas there are many birds sent from this district to the Scotch New Year shows at Edinburgh and Glasgow, and they are generally near the top of the classes. That they are not considered to have a chance of winning at the Palace is not, therefore, the reason which keeps so many representative birds away. I will here give what I consider are the reasons. The late time of the season for our valuable show birds, which, please remember, are our stock birds, too; being away from the Thursday of one week to the Wednesday of the next is too long a period unless some great prize was in competition; and what do we find when we look at the prize-money—that both Glasgow and the Scottish National shows pay 5s. per class more prize money for the same entry fee, and for three-day shows with much better classification in all varieties, especially where it is most wanted. I consider the Crystal Palace policy very short-sighted. It has not provided a single class for non-fed Norwich, though I will warrant there are many only too anxious to turn them out. There were over thirty birds in two classes at Edinburgh, and over forty in four at Glasgow. Should they not be recognised at what is supposed to be England's premier exhibition?

A New Cage Bird Society for Radcliffe and District.

Sir,—A meeting was held on Jan. 17 at Wareing's Dining Rooms to discuss the formation of a new cage bird society for Radcliffe and District—a society that has no doubt been a long-felt want among the Radcliffe and District fanciers. There was a good number of fanciers present. Mr. J. Burton was elected chairman, Mr. J. Allen treasurer, and Mr. W. Pickup secretary, and all members present were elected on committee. A proposition was moved that members pay 1s. entrance fee and 4d. per month afterwards. It was also moved that we hold our meeting the first Wednesday in each month at 8 p.m.

The Chester C.B.S. Re-formed.

The Radius Limit Done Away With; New Officials Elected.

Sir,—I am glad to be able to inform you that the Chester C.B.S. is to be reformed. A meeting of those interested was held on Jan. 17 at the Nag's Head Cocoa House, Mr. E. Lloyd presiding. It was decided to take steps to revive the interest in the society, and with this object Mr. Lloyd was elected chairman for the year and Mr. F. C. Parker vice-chairman. Police-constable R. N. Williams, as secretary, will be assisted in his duties by Mr. W. Davies, Francis Street. Mr. T. Jones (Messrs. Jones and Chester) was appointed treasurer; while a good working committee, viz., Messrs. Crane, Richards. Gardner, Dutton, and Bracegirdle, was elected. Good shows have been held by the society in the past, and now the organisation has been reformed it is hoped to stimulate interest in its doings and make the annual exhibitions even more successful in the future. The society is now open to all (having an unlimited radius), and the membership subscription is 4s. annually, payable quarterly. Meetings are to be held on the last Tuesday of each month in the Nag's Head Dining Rooms, Foregate Street, at 8.30 p.m. All communications respecting the society should in future be addressed to me at 8, Cornwall Street.

A Novice's Successful Start in Canary Breeding.

SIR,—I was passing through North Earl Street, Dublin, about five years ago, and outside a shop door was a little paper called CAGE BIRDS. Having a liking for birds, I bought a copy for one penny, and through the advertising columns I purchased the best my pockets would allow—two pairs of Yorkshires and also some London breeding cages, which I found very nice and comfortable. I intended to make a start and try my luck. Being only a novice, every hour I had to spare I studied CAGE BIRDS most carefully, reading the hints given by different breeders and some of the leading judges. I also got CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL (which is a grand sixpennyworth for anyone going into the Fancy). I made a start to get my birds ready. I commenced in January, 1907, giving the birds a little watercress, also a hard-boiled egg well chopped up. By the end of March I had the cocks in full song, and the hens were in great form, hopping from perch to perch. The second week in April I paired them up. I put a small hen to a good length cock; these did well. There was a quarrel between them, but they soon eased down, and by the fifth day I gave them a nest which was made by myself out of a cocoanut shell. I cut it round and placed flannel on the inside of it, with some gum. On the ninth morning I found an egg in each nest; these I took away, and placed in a small box of sawdust. I did this each morning until the third egg was laid, and on that evening about four o'clock I dusted the cages and nests, and returned the eggs. The next morning I put the date of setting on the bottoms of the cages so that I should have no trouble in telling when the young were due. On the thirteenth night I got a hard boiled egg, and some Osborne biscuit, and I chopped them up as small as I could with a table knife. On the fourteenth morning they were due out, and on the fifteenth day, when the hen came off the nest, I looked and found that all the eggs had hatched out. When the young Canaries are three days old it is my method to give the old ones a little greenfood. I supply the youngsters with a bit of fresh egg and biscuit three times a day—8 o'clock in the morning, one o'clock noon, and 7 o'clock p.m.; the egg-food, remember, goes sour if left in the food-vessel too long. I got fifteen young birds that (1907) season—eight from one pair of birds and seven from the other. When the youngsters were about five weeks old I took them from the parents, and put them in a flight cage—one I made myself. By that time they were well on hard seed, but I kept them still on a little egg-food, weaning them off this gradually. An invention of mine—one which novices may like to know of—is a perch, made of elder wood. Blow the pith out of the inside, and place a cork in at each end. Then, with a hat-pin, bore holes on the top and bottom of the perch. If there are any red mites on or about the bird, when it is resting at night time they will get into the perch; the perch being corked at each end, escape for the redmites is, of course, impossible. But be sure to clean the perch out every morning. I sold my young Canaries in December 1907, and made a little profit out of them. I cleaned my cages, whitewashed them and left them till the following February. I kept my original pairs and bought two more pairs, also from an advertiser in "C.B." At the end of February I commenced to feed my birds up. I selected the long cocks for the short hens, and in the second week in April I had the four pairs going. I had enough to do as a novice. As each hen laid an egg I put it into a box of sawdust as usual, and put the dates on the bottoms of the cages. I think that four o'clock on the evening when the third egg is laid, is about the best time to give the hens back their eggs. This second season I got on just grand. I only let the birds go to nest twice, which I think is enough, as after July the nights get cold. In 1908 I got twenty-six youngsters—seven from No. one pair, six from No. two, eight from No. three, and five from No. four. And out of the twenty-six I got eighteen cocks and eight hens. I never had a bit of trouble with them the whole season. All my success was due to reading your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS. When I got the birds over their first moult I sold a lot of them, which well repaid me for my time. I made quite a lot out of them. I like to give my birds plenty of light, so that they have a chance of feeding their young first thing in morning; but be sure to keep your birds out of draughts.

Side-lights Upon the Habits of the Lapwing.

The Value of Marking Rings.

Sir,—In a recent issue of CAGE BIRDS you express the hope that the ring from leg of the Green Plover, or Lapwing, caught at Mount Mellick, Queen's County, Ireland, has been returned to Aberdeen University. You will see by the enclosed cutting from the "Gazette" that this has been done. I also enclose another cutting from the "Free Press," which may be of interest in this connection. It is very strange that Aberdeenshire Lapwings should be so foud of Ireland! Oyne is about 22 miles N.W. of Aberdeen.

A. RUDOLPH GALLOWAY.

Professor Arthur Thomson, of Aberdeen University, intimates that a Lapwing rung by Mr. Meston with the Aberdeen University ring at Oyne in June last was caught at Grangemore, Co. Roscommon, on New Year's Day.—"Gazette."

Dr. Galloway's Interesting Remarks in the "Free Press."

SIR,—I have just received information from Mr. Landsborough Thomson, secretary of the Aberdeen University Bird Migration Inquiry, that a Lapwing marked by me in a field on the Echt Road, about ten miles from Aberdeen, on June 10, 1911, was found near Mountmellick, Queen's County, Ireland, on October 15 of this year. I saw the bird in the field while cycling along the road, and, as it was quite young and unable to fly, it was caught after the spot where it lay motionless on being alarmed had been carefully noted. Thus, it cannot have been more than 4½ months old when it undertook its long journey. Mr. Emslie Smith, Summerhill, informs me that in his young days, in Banffshire, the farmers believed that Lapwings migrated to Ireland. I believe also that last year four Lapwings ringed in Aberdeenshire were found in Limerick. So that we have by this valuable inquiry, so ably conducted by Professor Thomson, definite proof of the old belief. I should like to recommend fellow-cyclists during next season to take an active part in this inquiry, which would lend much interest and excitement to many a dull run. The silent approach of the cycle is especially useful for getting in touch with birds before they are alarmed, and leads often to interesting discoveries apart from migration. While cycling in from Newburgh one morning last summer, I suddenly came up a Rook flying low across the road with a straggling object in its claws. In its alarm, it dropped the object in front of my wheel. I quickly dismounted and caught a young Lapwing, little the worse for its premature aerial flight. I carefully applied one of the University rings to one of its legs, and liberated it at a safe distance from the Rooks—the parent Lapwings taking much interest in the whole proceedings. I hope to hear of this little bird again—perhaps also from Ireland. Another young Lapwing which I rung gave me a great surprise. On being liberated it promptly jumped from my hand into a stream of water 2 or 3 feet deep, and instead of drowning, swam gaily along for many yards, casting exultant glances in my direction the while. Its swimming would have done credit to any duck, and I had to add to my knowledge the fact, of which I have seen no mention, that Lapwings could swim.

Will the Breeding Season Soon Start in the Autumn?

SOME VERY, VERY EARLY BIRDS!

A December Nest Photograph.

Sir,—In a previous issue you published particulars of my hen Canary, which commenced to lay early in December last. I have pleasure now in sending you a photograph of the brood of young Canaries, which were hatched on Dec. 18, and which she succeeded in rearing within twenty-eight days. She has just commenced to lay her second clutch of eggs. This hen is a young bird, being hatched on the 6th of May, 1911, at Silksworth. She was bred by me. Can any reader beat this for early breeding?

J. ROBINSON.

[In our last issue, a Scottish reader speaks of a brood hatched on Nov. 17, the same hen hatching her second brood on Jan. 5. Evidently the breeding season will soon have to be considered as starting in the autumn! —Editor.]

"Wrong-classed" at Bangor Show.

Sir,—The following letter from the secretary of the recently held Bangor Show will doubtless be read with interest by your Irish subscribers. Some time before the show I wrote to one of our leading breeders for a ticked buff cock for stock purposes, and received from him a bird which carried a very decided tick on the thigh; indeed, the tick ran from the thigh up into the side, and was plainly visible to anyone with an eye in his head. I had not to take the bird in my hand to find the tick, neither had another well-known exhibitor to whom I showed it. Judge theu of my surprise when I received the following letter from Mr. McConaghie in reply to an enquiry as to why my exhibit had been "wrong classed." Mr. Marlin and the committee of the club must be rather queer sighted when it comes to examining a bird for a tick. But be that as it may, any members of the council of the Y.C. and C.B. Society of Ireland who care to verify my bona-fides in entering the bird (Ring No. 500,O.X.) in the ticked class at Bangor can do so if they drop me a postcard and make an appointment.

C. LATTIMORE.

[COPY OF Mr. Mc CONAGHIE'S LETTER.]

Sir,—Your note to hand re your bird in Class 23, "wrong classed" at our show. I was present when this bird was being judged, as were most of our committee. The judge examined it very carefully, and also invited those present to examine it and see if they could find any ticks on it; but they had to acknowledge that they could not. He then took it out in his hand aud in blowing up the feathers found a slight mark, but held that as this was not visible wheu in the cage he would have to lay it aside. If you would like to communicate with the judge, his name is Mr. G. Marlin, 21, Glebe Street, Hamilton.—W. J. McConaghie.

[We have no desire to interfere in any way in this matter, but may perhaps be permitted to point out that it is now the rule at most of the leading exhibitions that a bird which has no dark feathers visible as it stauds in the show cage must be entered in the class for clears. Of course, we are not in a position to say whether Mr. Lattimore's bird does or does not conform to this rule.—Editor.]

A Venerable Exhibition Song Thrush.

Wins Prizes for [illegible]

Sir,—I wish to ask if any fancier could tell me about the age a Thrush is [illegible] to? My Thrush has just died. I had it for thirteen years, and when I got it it was one year old. I should very much like to know if anyone has known a Thrush to live in a cage for fourteen years before. It was a remarkably good bird, as is evidenced by the honours it won at the Crystal Palace and other shows. It was shown all over the country for ten years and over. Its singing was admired by all who heard it, and it sang from early morning till late at night. It was a very large bird, and had splendid markings, which many judges could testify. I was offered a lot of money from time to time for it, one gentleman offering five pounds. A lady offered to buy it in order to let it out of the cage, so that it could have its freedom. I told her it would die then, as it had been in a cage seven years then. The last three years I had it it was a cripple owing to some hurt it got at the last show I sent it to, and it has never been on the perch since. It has travelled thousands of miles, and has never received any hurt until at the last show, as mentioned. I think great praise is due to the railway companies' servants for looking after the Fancy birds as well as they do.

F. V. F.

[Fourteen years is a "ripe old age," of course, but many instances of Thrushes living beyoud this have been recorded—one bird (a photograph of which we published) exceeded twenty years.—Editor.]

Scotch Fancies and the City of Glasgow O.A.

Sir,—In your last issue, under the nom de plume of "Member," the writer states that I persist in holding the meetings on Saturday nights. I can assure him, also all fanciers who may have read that note, that at no time have I undertaken to make the meeting nights to suit myself; that has always been arranged by the secretary, and he has been guided by the fact that for ten years at least the meetings of our association have been held on Saturday nights. Altogether he has, for a member of the City of Glasgow O.A., displayed a great want of knowledge; also he has displayed a willingness to give me credit for a lot of things which I do not deserve. His letter, I think, instead of bringing out the Scotch Faucy members, will tend to keep them away, as it will seem to them that I intend to manage their business as well as my own. Another part of his letter seems written so that intending members may think they have a grievance. Now, I can assure all members of our association that this new clause will create no injustice, and that when it is properly explained they will see we were acting in the interests of truth and justice by passing the clause at this time. I hope that all fanciers who have the interest of the association at heart will come along this year and give us their heartiest support.

DAVID BLACK.

President, City of Glasgow O.A.

[We feel it due to Mr. Black to tender him an expression of regret respecting the appearance of the letter signed "Member." We naturally assumed that "Member" was correct in his assertion that Mr. Black was responsible for the calling of the meetings. As we have no wish to be embroiled in a controversy of so limited an interest, we think his (Mr. Black's) straightforward explanation may very well close the correspondence.—Editor.]

TROUBLE OVER A BRITISH BIRD CUP.

Should Points Gained in Selling Classes Count?

Sir,—I was at Canterbury Show, and saw Mr. Brett had a bird nominated for poiuts in the 15s. selling class. I was very much surprised, and at once notified the secretary of the Kent County C.B.A., at the same time protesting against the points being allowed to count. A meeting was held, and my protest was unanimously upheld, and the cup was awarded to me. In the next issuc of your valuable paper I saw a meeting was to be held to decide winner of British Cup. Mr. Brett in the meantime wrote to the secretary asking for an explanation, saying a mistake had been made, claiming that he had 25 points and myself 24; therefore he was winner of cup. The secretary advised that a meeting had been held, which decided against points being allowed in selling classes; but Mr. Brett protested against decision, also stating he was not advised of the meeting. The club then decided on holding a meeting to settle winner of cup and to give Mr. Brett a chance of attending. Mr. Brett contended he had complied with rules, and was entitled to the cup on the following grounds:—1. That there was nothing in rules to stop exhibitors from entering and nominating in selling classes; 2, that he had done it before and was prepared to prove it. I answered his first point by saying he was correct. It did not mention anything about selling classes in rules. But Mr. Brett, who has been competing for British Cup this last five seasons, and has won 9d. outright—this in dispute being the second cup provided—is an experienced fancier, and surely he does not consider it fair that birds should be nominated in selling classes. Four classes stood at Canterbury, viz., Linnet, Goldfinch, Greenfinch, or Bullfinch, and A.O.V. Finch; he could have entered in any of the above classes and competed for cup. His second point was that he had nominated in selling classes before, and was prepared to prove it. If I had noticed it, I should have protested. I will give a case: A Norwich class is provided at a show. Two exhibitors are competing for a points cup. One nominates in Norwich class; the other puts a bird in a selling class and wins. Is it fair for the latter points to couut against the competitor who stood his chance in the Norwich class provided, and possibly against a better class of bird? My contention is that under no consideration should points be allowed to count in selling classes. Selling classes are provided for the disposal of surplus stock. I know the rules do not mention selling classes; if it was intended that fanciers could nominate in selling classes the club would have put it in the rules. When Mr. Brett was competing for the cup he won at one or two shows, I noticed, in classes where no other fancier was competing against him. Before the next season I proposed a rule forbidding points to count where there was only one competitor, which was carried.

LEIGH.

Contest held January 21st at Globe Inn, when 26 birds entered. Considering this was our first attempt it was very good. We intend to have a contest every week-end, but the contest will be confined to members only. We are doing this to enlighten novices more on quality singing as they will have to judge along with a qualified judge; also to get our members more used to the new idea of tapping, and we should advise other clubs to do it also. Will all members kindly note that there is an open-to-all-England contest at Boat House Hotel, Oldfield Road, Salford, January 27th, which we hope will be better patronised than Tyldesley was. Also, don't forget we hold an open-to-all-England Linnet contest for quality and time Feb. 3rd, first pair up at 2 o'c.—J. McAllister, Sec.

TYLDESLEY.

Derbyshire; tappers, A. Kennedy and J. Poole; minute-man, J. Halliwell. Before giving prizes I asked fanciers present if they wished to examine any papers; no one accepted. After the contest I was told there was a mistake; so on Jan. 21 we had a scrutiny of the papers in the presence of members and non-members, when the following mistake was found out: Poole, 4, 5, 12, 18, 14, 22, 3, 5, 15, 10, 19 (127); Everet, 10, 27, 18, 9, 9, 4, 6, 26, 13, 6, 5, (135). I will bring all papers to Salford contest next Saturday, so all can see for themselves. I wonder what was the matter with Salford and Blackburn. J. More Honorary Secretaries.

Among our new Hon. Secs. I have the pleasure of welcoming a lady member. Miss Ruby is the first lady to volunteer to act as local hon. sec., and I hope her example will be widely followed. The success of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE depends materially upon the efforts of local hon. secs. in spreading the knowledge of its aims and objects, and in persuading all bird-keepers of their acquaintance to join our ranks. The persuasion of a lady is difficult to combat, and the more lady hon. secs. the better for the cause which we all have at heart. The full list of additions this week is as below:—

Cork, Miss S. G. Ruby, 9, Magdala Terrace, St. Luke's, Cork.

Wolverhampton, Mr. W. J. Singleton, 27, Byrne Road.

Nechells, Birmingham, Mr. H. G. Long, 239, Nechells Park Road.

Our First General Meeting.

No doubt remains as to the success of our meeting which is to be held at five o'clock on the Saturday at the Palace Show after our tea at 4.30. Many members write that they are arranging parties for the purpose of attending, and I would take the opportunity of reminding members that, the day being the one for the Football Cup Tie at the Palace, cheap excursions will be run from many parts of the country. Intending visitors should take advantage of these facilities for cheap travelling on the eventful day. Besides the football excursions, many other trains are being run at cheap rates. Full particulars as to these will be found in another column under the review of the Crystal Palace entries.

Postcards, Please!

Owing to the Football Cup Tie at the Crystal Palace there will be extra demand on the catering department, and I shall be glad if all members who purpose taking part in our tea and meeting will kindly drop me a postcard to that effect. There will be no charge for the tea, and no obligation will attach to any promise of attendance, but it will be of very great assistance to the caterers in the expected rush of business, if I am able to let them know beforehand the approximate number of our members who will be attending.

Good Advice and a Warning.

I hope every subscriber to CAGE BIRDS, whether a member of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE or not, will read carefully the letter from our esteemed member, Mr. Claude St. John, which is reprinted below. The first paragraph contains advice which may be commended to the notice of every member, and the second paragraph emphasises a warning that I have more than once conveyed to our readers who are keepers of Canaries.

As to the question of the cups or trophies sugested by Mr. St. John, there would appear to be more than one reason why this scheme might prove impracticable. Firstly, it would be a matter of very considerable difficulty, if not indeed an impossibility, to decide which Canary, British or Foreign bird was the absolute best of the year, even in its own section, for there would be no means of comparing side by side the best at one show with the best at another. Further, if there be one form of competition which is sometimes responsible for friction is that of competition for challenge cups, and as a body of fanciers banded together in good fellowship, it behoves us to steer clear of objects which may in any possible manner endanger the amicable feeling which it is my pleasure to know exists between members of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE. An opportunity offers itself to discuss this and other important matters at our impending General Meeting at the Palace on Saturday, February 3, and I hope that as many members as possible will be present at that gathering, and express their views on any subject that may occur to them.

Some Suggestions by a Well-Wisher.

Sir,—As regards the first annual meeting at the Crystal Palace I sincerely regret that circumstances over which I have no control will prevent me having the pleasure of being present and assisting, if only in a very small way, to make the meeting a great success. This should, and I trust will be, always the aim of every individual member of the League—to faithfully and conscientiously perform on every opportune occasion any trifling service, however insignificant it might appear, for the League, and never defer doing a small service in the hope that a future chance may arise for one to do a great and material service; remembering always that a multitude of trivial services may well be the very life of the movement and will keep it going merrily, whereas the principle of waiting for an opportunity to perform a more signal and striking service might cause the work to stagnate. Perform every service promptly whenever the opportunity arises; the smallest as well as the greatest should be the creed of every well-wisher of the LEAGUE—then its progress from one success to another will be assured.

I have found during the past year that some Canary fanciers are apt to consider their hobby is in some way granted exemption from attack, and that the work of the League is beyond their scope. Let me warn them of the real danger of this conceit. Canary keeping is just two points safer than the keeping of British birds—no more, and no less. Let the thin end of the wedge be inserted, and British bird-keeping swept away, then will quickly follow the hobby of foreign bird-keeping, and lastly Canary keeping. It is a principle that has to be fought for, and Canary fanciers owe it to themselves as well as their fellow-fanciers to take their place and stand shoulder to shoulder with their fellows to offer a good square front, and put up a powerful resistance to the whimsical interference of misguided faddists.

Before closing I would like to mention two little suggestions which may perhaps be put before the meeting. (1) The Defence Fund ought to be generously supported, to be always prepared for action in time of need. (2) As I intimated at the beginning of the year, I would offer a suggestion in case no one broached the subject during the year, I will now do so. It is this: That a Special League Challenge Cup—or perhaps three cups, one each for Canaries, British, and Foreign birds—which cannot be won outright should be created for annual competition for the best bird, or birds, of the year. A trophy, say, similar to the English cup in the football world, and a medal or diploma might be awarded the cup holder each year. To obtain this cup, or cups, I would suggest that the members devote half of their subscription to this object instead of small prizes to be competed for at their own society's show, which is a local and much narrower scheme, and in addition special donations could be made towards the fund. This is only the rough outline of the idea, but if members will freely express their opinions about it you will be able to judge whether it is worth knocking into shape.

With hearthy good wishes for the success of the meeting and the continued and rapid upward progress of "CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE."

CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

Certificates of Membership to be Provided.

The suggestion that certificates of membership, suitable for framing, should be instituted, has met with such a cordial reception that this step has been decided upon. As soon as details of design and price are settled, further particulars as to these certificates will be announced. It would be quite impossible to print a tithe of the letters received, bnt the following are given as fair samples of the whole.

Certificates such as suggested would look very attractive hung up with a few prize cards or CAGE BIRDS plates, either in the aviary or in the house, and would catch the eye of many who would not notice the small badge which we wear at present.

Pontllottyn. J. H. Alfred.

I shall be very pleased to possess one. It will make a nice centre for the "ticket corner" of my bird-room. Cups and medals, I fear, are some way off yet, and my tickets need something to help show them up.

Rugby. B. Pain.

I think the suggestion as to coloured certificates of membership exquisite. Please put me down for one if the idea is carried into effect.

Dulwich. (Madam) M. A. Feist-Madewell.

Scotland's Last "Classic" Event.

Grand All-Round Show at Bathgate.

A First-rate Secretary.

Bathgate and Dis. C.B.S show held Jan. 20th. It proved a great success all over. It would have been a record of this old established society only unfortunately the Norwich section did not come up to expectations. But what was wanting in numbers was made up for in quality. This variety was carefully handled by Mr. W. Grewar, the well-known North Country breeder, and his awards were well received. Borders were forward in force and no mistake; a grand show both in number and quality. The judge had a difficult task in separating the winners. Spl. for best in section was secured by a grand buff, even mark, exceedingly well put down by Mr. J. J. Patterson (Chirnside), who seems to have been endowed with some of his father's knowledge. This bird was greatly admired. No doubt the large entry was encouraged by the two splendid cash specials for most points kindly given by the genial President, Mr. J. Livingstone. This variety was judged by the veteran, Mr. J. Watson (Selkirk), and his awards were popular. Yorks. were a nice lot, and were well judged by Mr. J. F. Dewar. Mules and British were again the feature of the show, Mules being a grand lot, many English birds being forward, again doing battle, while the British as usual were a nice collection, all the Scottish champions and a good few English being forward. The Linnets and Greenfinches were a show in themselves, there being such a lot; and the quality was A1. Hardbills all over were capital, and the Softbills were close on them. Mr. J. F. Dewar judged even numbers, and Mr. W. Bishop the odd numbers, and their awards were well received.

The management as usual was par excellence. Bathgate has always been fortunate in having an ideal secretary, but this year they had an extra good official in Mr. A. Nicol, who had everything in apple-pie order. We were pleased to see the worthy President, Mr. R. Bald, busy; and he was ably assisted by the committee, Messrs. Strachan, E. Cain, M. Bald, Showler, Gentleman, Haldane, McLean, Fullerton, Flood, Smith, Spence, Cowie, Cruickshanks, Fleming, and W. Sharp. The show was well patronized by fanciers.

ASPATRIA.

Aspatria and Dist. F.A. 29th annual show held Market Hall, Jan. 13th. It is a number of years since they had an exhibition of cage birds. They had another start this year, and had a really good little show. The Border classes were very hot indeed, some very fine specimens and well-known winners being present. There were 74 entries, and the classes averaged 9 entries each. The Market Hall is a first-class place for a cage bird show, and all being well they are going for a bigger display next year. The secretary, Mr. Jackson, carried out his duties in a true secretarial manner, and was backed by a strong committee, consisting of Mr. J. Wood (chairman), Mr. Sanderson (vice-chair), and Messrs. Parkin, Osborne, Douglas, Robinson, Lamb, Hetherington, Law, Johnston, Douglas (Jas.), Lawson, Brown, Bonch, Clarke, Hardisty, and Mr. T. Pattinson. The attendance was great, no doubt due to the energy displayed by the management. There was a good selection of special prizes, many being of a great deal more value than we see at bigger shows. The judging was carried out by Mr. J. Ellwood (Papcastle), and his awards seemed to give general satisfaction.

A very nice collection of cage birds was got together at this show, held on Jan. 11, at the Queen's Memorial Hall. The arrangements were nicely carried out by the Sec., Mr. J. C. Hall, who is to be congratulated on the success of the fixture. He was ably assisted by Messrs. L. Keymer, H. Goult, T. Green, E. Langham and W. Hay. A white Canary, a white Linnet, and a white Sparrow proved the centre of attraction in the cage bird section. Mr. J. Mackley judged. Silver medal for most points in our section fell to Mr. Dady.

PROVINCIAL R. C.C.

Fourth annual contest, held at the Old Boar's Head Hotel, Corporation Street, Manchester, Jan 20th. Entries numbered just over 300, amongst them being some of the best birds in this country. Nearly all the birds turned up. The classes (except members) were well filled. Messrs. Lyons, Massey and Wareing judged, and they had their work cut out to find the winners. Mr. J. Kilshaw (Bolton) had the honour of winning cup presented by the P.R.C.C.; Dr. A. E. Read won cup in class 2, presented by Mr. R. Kremner. Mr. Dimmock must be congratulated on his winning 1st, 2nd, and 3rd, and the cup presented by Mr. F. A. Lester in class 4. There were many visitors, amongst whom we noticed fanciers from Birmingham, Newcastle, Staffs, Wrexham, Southport, Liverpool, Wigan, Bolton, Pudsey, Leeds, Wakefield, etc. On behalf of the club I have to thank all exhibitors for assisting us to create another record entry. The hall is conveniently situated, and admirably suited for show purposes. The cage birds were a capital lot, especially the British section, which included some noted winners. Mr. A. Chalmers (Kirkintilloch) handled the cage birds, and his awards seemed to give general satisfaction, very little grumbling being heard. Judging was got through in good time, and when the doors were opened for admission, the hall became comfortably packed with fanciers and the public, including a goodly number of ladies. The show was handled to perfection, and Secretary Clelland, along with his able committee, are to be congratulated on the success of to-day's show. Mr. Clelland did well in his new role as secretary, which speaks well for the future of the society. He is a worthy follower to Mr. McEwan, the former secretary.

MANCHESTER & N.C.O.S.

Fourteenth annual members' show, held Jan. 20th. The Chorlton Town Hall, where the show was held, is spacious, light, lofty, well ventilated, and absolutely free from draughts. The entry was far in excess of last year's total, the quality being superb, in fact, equal to that of many open fixtures. British and Mules are making great progress in this city, and were a treat to observe, claiming hosts of admirers. Novice and Amateurs were well catered for—on rather an extensive scale, in fact. Many charming creatures graced the bench in these sections, and teams could easily have been chosen quite capable of making their presence felt in the "upper circles" without fear of being placed amongst the "also rans." Mr. W. A. Bladon, the worthy President, is a man of mettle; the exertions he puts forth are of a strenuous nature. A word of praise is due to Mr. W. Fairhurst for the manner in which he officiated. As each class was adjudicated upon he promptly affixed the labels, and set the cages in order on the bench, attending also to the watering. The hon. sec., Mr. H. Boothman, manages masterfully. Courteous and obliging, nothing seems too much for him to do; he possesses the faculties of knowing what to do and of doing it at the right moment. Staging was neat, and every bird could be seen at a glance. When such names as Messrs. S. Cook, J. Beswick, W. E. Kearns, W. Broughton, A. G. Davis, J. Rukin, W. N. Turner, H. Clayton, W. McKail, R. J. Metcalfe, W. Booth, not forgetting those two stalwarts, Messrs. J. Raynes and G. W. F. Lythgoe, are mentioned, one need not wonder at the "ship sailing so smoothly." Special for best bird in show (Toronto medal) fell to that well known "short and thick" enthusiast, Mr. A. G. Davis. Mr. J. C. Barnes (Sheffield) judged, and his awards were well received. The Lancs. were cancelled.

"CAGE BIRDS," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

Grand Quality Birds at Bradford.

City of Bradford O.S. annual open show, held Jan. 20th, in the Feversham Street Council Schools, Leeds Road. The show was the close of the list of fixtures under the Yorkshire Union, and also of some of the specialist clubs, the remainder having the Palace show to close their competitions. Entries in the British, etc., section were good, the three classes provided containing 54 birds of exceptional merit; and they were indeed the feature of the show, the mule and hybrid class especially being interesting. The total entries in the show only amounted to 341 in the 36 classes. The room is a very good one for a show. Messrs. Robson and Cowgill judged. The former took all open Yorks., open and novice Nor., and British, etc., and the latter the selling classes and the Yorks. novice. Mr. F. Rhodes (secretary) had charge of affairs, with Mr. J. Roe as assistant, and under their guidance everything passed off without a hitch. Messrs. Hunter and Plowright acted as show stewards and amongst the general workers we noted Mr. T. Fortnam (chairman), Mr. Ludbrook (treasurer), Taylor, Horsfield, Inman, Lane, etc. The "gate" did not come up very well, the weather being very bad and wet. Specials were given for the vhc birds in each class. The yellow green-marked hen, 1st for Mr. Shackleton, was objected to for singing, and the objection, we understand, was upheld.

CARSHALTON.

Carshalton F.A. held a very successful show in the Parish Hall, on Jan. 18th. The cage bird section was the largest ever got together, and was quite a record, both in quality and quantity. Nor. and Yorks. were well represented. Special for best Yorkie went to Mr. A. J. Stroud, a bird with true Yorks. characteristics; unfortunately he was not staged in the best of trim or he might have done better in the race for the cup for best bird. This was won by a big bold yell. Norwich exhibited by Mr. A. J. Kilby, same exhibit winning special for best Norwich, although very hardly pressed by a very typical clear buff cock of good quality shown by Mr. Saunders, the yell. just winning on size and head qualities. Special for best British went to Mr. E. Gunnell, who staged a good Goldie and Hawfinch. The show was well patronised by visitors, and was ably managed by Mr. S. H. Hudson, the secretary, who is doing grand work for the Society. Mainly by his efforts, our section is making rapid headway. Mr. H. Norman judged.

PRIDE OF PLACE

In the Roller world is rightly taken by the Leipzig Rollers as imported by me. You might be able to get a Roller as good at double the price, but why should you pay more than you need? When you've read the remarkable number of testimonials I have published (of which a few are given below), you will know why I so emphatically say that no Roller on the market at anything like the price can equal a Leipzig Roller. I have an enormous stock of thoroughly acclimatised Leipzig Rollers on hand; all cocks are guaranteed in full song day and gaslight, with long hollow and double rolls, sweet, silvery trills, water-bubble runs, soft, roulades, piccolo trills, bell, barp and gong notes, and jug-jug of Nightingale, etc.; warranted entirely free from any harsh or objectionable notes whatever; price 7s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. each. Special Bandmasters, which excel in the deep bass and hollow bell rolls, 10/- and 12/6 each. Hens,, guaranteed same strain, 2,3 each, 4/- couple. I also have a magnificent stock of real contest Rollers, fit for immediate contesting, price 15/- and 20/- each. These contest birds are of purest race extant, and song is exceptionally soft and mellow. Roller cabinet cages with loose fronts and folding doors, 2,6 and 3/6 each. To those who like a loud, merry, short songster, I have a splendid lot of Hartz cocks, all in full vigorous song, real ceiling lifters, price 5/6 each. See following few letters: "Little Longstone, Bakewell, Jan. 2, 1912. Sir,—I have spent Xmas with a friend who has recently purchased one of your Leipzig Rollers, and after hearing it I must have one. I have been a breeder of Rollers for some time, and have a good strain, but nothing like that. I particularly admire the bass rolls. Please send me one on. Yours, J. Barnes."—"25 Enbrook Street, Queen's Park Estate, London; Dec. 27. Sir,—Roller I had from you two years ago is still a good healthy bird and in good song; please send another. Yours, J. Fletcher."—"Moor Place, Hayle, Cornwall, Dec. 27. Sir,—Roller received last week is singing well and gives satisfaction. Yours, T. Jordan."—"5, Davison's Yard, Kirkby-in-Ashfield; Dec. 27. Sir,—The Leipzig Roller you sent is a beauty; he sings well and has many changes, and very cheap at price. Yours, R. Hooton."—"5, Greyfriars Place, Edinburgh; Dec. 12. Sir,—I had one of your renowned Rollers over 4 years, and it sang constantly; its notes were long and sweet, with many variations, as you describe. Please send another. Yours, D. Dawson."—"Stellston School House, Holywood by Dumfries; Dec. 18. Sir,—Leipzig Roller you sent has come up to expectations; he is everything you advertise. Please send following. Yours, A. Kennedy."—"Merthyr Tydvil, Dec. 15. Sir,—I have decided to keep Roller you sent. Thanking you for such a beautiful songster, and also for way he was packed. Yours, G. Arnold."—"New North Road, Hounton; Dec. 15. Sir,—Birds arrived in splendid condition. The cock is a beauty, sings incessantly day and night. They are both very strong and healthy, and I am more than pleased with such a beautiful pair of birds. Yours, J. Hussey."—"17, Holmes Street, Bristol; Dec. 15. Sir,—Roller I had from you two years ago is a champion. He sang as soon as unpacked, but glad to say he sings even better now. Yours, B. Brooks."—"70, Radnor Street, Kilbowie, Scotland. Dec. 16. Sir,—Please send Leipzig Roller cock. Thanking you for the two I had last year, which gave entire satisfaction. Many people who have heard them have been delighted with their tours in melody, and are marvels at price paid. Yours, J. McLean."—"48, Normacott Road, Longton; Dec. 6. Sir,—Thanks for prompt dispatch and safe arrival of Leipzig Roller. Thanking you again for such a splendid songster and straightforward dealing with strangers. Yours, A. Tudor." Please note, I am the only importer of Weber's Leipzig Rollers, and all genuine cocks are stamped on wing, "Hans Weber, Leipzig." All are safely and warmly packed in special travelling cages and sent on full week's trial entirely at my own risk immediately on receipt of cash, or if same is deposited with Editor; and money instantly refunded in full if entire satisfaction not given. Try a Leipzig Roller against one of any other breed, you will then know why I can always fill a column with letters written specially about them.

ALL WONDERFUL VALUE IN SONGSTERS.

But if you want a good singing cock at 3/6 go to the "Land Sharks," and find you have got a common German hen, not worth its carriage. Whether they call them Norwich, Yorkshires, or Hartz Mountains, the poor little German or Common Belgian hen has to do duty for all. I offer specially selected songsters, every bird proved and tested, either in Norwich, Yorkshire, Hartz, Border, or Lizard, 6/6, 7/6, 8/6, 10/6. Cages, 3d. extra.

READ UNSOLICITED FACTS BEARING OUT MY STATEMENTS.

Should I want any birds in the future I shall be happy to deal with you again.—W. Johnson to W. Rudd.

MANSFIELD AND DIST. C.B.S.

Bird washing exhibition given by Mr. Vardy, Jan. 27th. While the birds were drying Mr. Vardy gave a lecture on British birds, and I am sure a good many fanciers went away with a little more knowledge than they had before. Mr. Vardy went through his work in a style all his own and gave us some points that will be useful in the future. This is only a young society, but it has a good number of fanciers, and we shall be pleased to enroll more. Mr. Vardy judged a table show of British birds, and placed the cards to everybody's satisfaction. Mr. Hawkesley led off with his well-known Blackbird. We are having a table show for stock pairs of all breeds 13th February, when all fanciers and friends will be given a hearty welcome. Mr. Vardy promised to attend again. Mr. Hawkesley is secretary.—Bernard Gabbitass.

WALKLEY AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held Jan. 11th, St. Philip's Mission Room, Mr. T. Ridal presiding. It was the best meeting in the annals of the society. The business transacted was enormous. Sec. gave a statement of accounts which showed a balance of over £7, which was received with great applause. We decided to adopt the Yorks. Union definition with regard to ticked birds. Also decided, date for nest feather show, June 22; also that we pay fixed prize money (6s. a class, to be divided into 3s., 2s., 1s.). We have secured the same room for our meeting. Resolved, to grant 10s. to what we have usually given. Mr. Ridal proposed that the best thanks be given Mr. J. Scott (late secretary) for his past services, which was carried unanimously. We are giving an increased point special scheme this next show season, the society giving £1 to each section, viz., Norwich, Yorks., and British, to be divided into four prizes. Following elected new members: Messrs. J. Bexter, J. Curley, C. Stocks, J. Gordon, C. W. Bacon, F. Jones, P. Chadwick, F. W. Barnes, J. Wardley, W. Briggs. Decided, for Feb. meeting, that we have a table show, composed of one class Brit., one class muling pairs, one class novice Yorks. pairs; one class novice Nor. pairs, entrance 3d. a cage; Judge, Mr. W. T. Furniss.—C. Tomlinson.

BORDER FANCY C.C.

Annual general meeting held in Mr. Dixon's Rooms, Carlisle, on 1st January. In the absence of the President, Mr. Richardson, Mr. Wright (Carlisle) was asked to preside. Balance-sheet for 1911 showed the total income to be £53 3s. 8d. Expenditure £44 2s. 11½d., leaving a balance in favour of club of £9 0s. 8½d., which was considered satisfactory, taking into account the number of specials granted during year, viz., 81 medals and one framed model. Election of office-bearers: Mr. Richardson re-elected President; Mr. Jamieson Hon. Sec. and Treas.; all delegates were re-elected; and Messrs. Robertson (Selkirk) and Barrie (Lockerbie) were appointed delegates for their districts. Messrs. H. Bennet and McKenzie (Kelso) were asked to audit books. The first motion was "That club adopt standard cage." Secretary intimated that he had several letters for and against this motion. The members present thought it would entail considerable expense on members who had a stock of show cages. After some discussion the motion was rejected. The next motion was "Members exhibiting at shows where they had club patronage should use husks or plain Canary seed in bottom of cages," an amendment that sawdust be used was put. Other members thought the question of what members used in cage bottoms should be left open, and this was agreed to. A motion that at any show where they have open and novice medals, the novice medal be always judged for first. This motion was carried without dissent. A suggestion was made by a member that club get two challenge cups (one open and one for novices), to be competed for at certain shows; after some of the members had expressed their view, it was decided to do nothing in the matter. The same member thought judges should pay more attention to club standard when judging; also that club try and induce show committees to give four classes for Greens and Clunamons. Eight new members were proposed and admitted.—M. Jamieson, Hon. Sec.

SHEFFIELD O.S.

First annual dinner and smoking concert held Jan. 9th, Messrs. Stephenson's Exchange Restaurant, one of the most up-to-date and best establishments in the city of its kind, being the rendezvous selected by the dinner committee. We had an exceptionally big crowd present, about 60 in all, and I am pleased to say that practically every gentleman brought his wife (or his wife to be). Our Chairman, Mr. T. Dawn, presided, ably supported by several gentry of the district. The vice-chairman, Mr. J. Woodall, was in his accustomed place, he having the hearty support of the leading fanciers. Dinner began at 7.30 p.m. The toast list was not a lengthy one, as we had a great array of talent present, and everyone was anxious to keep them fully employed and get full 18-carat out of them. The toast, "King, Queen and Royal Family," was ably proposed by the Chairman. Mr. E. Job gave the toast of the evening—"The Sheffield O.S." In a very able speech he pointed out the benefits mankind derived from hobbies of this character; he also referred to the successful 12 months (the first) of the society, and pointed out what exceptionally good officials they must have had to accumulate a balance of £23, with no funds to commence with, and in addition paying fixed prize money at nest feather and members' shows. Dr. Craig (a member of the committee) in a very humorous speech, responded. He promised to give a silver cup to be competed for by novices only, which brought forth loud cheering. Our Chairman kept things going, not allowing a single waste moment. After two or three songs came the tit-bit of the evening, the presentation of cups, etc., by the Chairman. He said that before he presented the cups he had another pleasing duty to perform, and that was to present a cheque of £5 to our worthy hon. sec., Mr. T. Bishop, as a slight recognition of the excellent manner in which he had carried out his arduous duties during 1911, as it was mainly through his untiring efforts that we had £23 at the bank. Mr. Bishop was greeted with loud applause, and responded as soon as his friends would allow his voice to be heard. Then followed the presentation of cups. Winners: Yorks., Messrs. Wilkins and Elliott; Nor., Mr. J. G. Cowley; Crests, Mr. G. Moore; Brit., Mr. P. Walsh; and For., Mr. T. Bishop, all of whom suitably responded. The toast, "Visitors and kindred societies," was proposed by Mr. J. Woodall. Mr. J. G. Little responded on behalf of the visitors, and Mr. Nelson on behalf of kindred societies. Songs, etc., were continued until the close, which arrived far too soon.—John A. T. Woodall, Press Correspondent.

WOLVERHAMPTON C.B.S.

Annual meeting held January 11th, Duke of York; Mr. F. J. Weaver presided. It is pleasing to note that one of our Vice-Presidents (Mr. J. A. Tonks) attended. Balance-sheet presented, the secretary explaining every question put to him in a satisfactory manner. After members have paid up last year's contribution we shall have a balance on the right side. Election of officers: President, Mrs. Staveley Hill (for the seventh time); Vice-Presidents, A. Bird, M.P., J. A. Tonks, Esq., A. Cupiss, Esq., J. Baker, Esq., M. Christopher, Esq. Four new Vice-Presidents were elected in D. Tonks, Esq., J. McDougall, Esq., H. Poulton, Esq., and S. R. Rhodes (son of our late Vice-President); Mr. F. J. Weaver, Chairman; Mr. R. Mr. Tonks proposed a hearty vote of thanks to the Secretary for the splendid manner in which he had done his duty.—J. Gibbons, Sec.

BRADFORD EAST O.S.

Sixth annual general meeting, held headquarters, January 2nd, there being a splendid attendance. Mr. G. White, vice-president, in chair. Arrangements for annual tea, concert, and prize distribution were considered. Report and balance sheet read by treasurer, Mr. J. Farrar; the balance is almost double that of any preceding year, and the meeting was full of enthusiasm. Mr. Farrar was thanked for his untiring services. The auditors (Messrs. A. Wilkinson and G. White) also were thanked. Secretary gave a brief resume of the year's work, dealing chiefly with the action of the society in respect of the first national show, for Cinderella Club funds. Through the generosity of members in giving up their annual show date, in order that the great show could be held, the public of Bradford had been enabled to see the finest show ever held in the West Riding of Yorkshire. Mr. Hill took the opportunity of paying a very warm compliment to his colleague, Mr. W. Cruise, who had helped him through with the work of the society, in what had been a very hard and strenuous year. Mr. C. Cowgill proposed a vote of thanks to all retiring officers, and Mr. R. Wilkinson seconded. Voting for officers for 1912:—President, Mr. E. Suddards, who, one and all admit, is the right man in the right place, and the members fully appreciate his services; a resolution was carried to increase the number of vice-presidents to nine, and this resulted in some of the younger members who have done splendid service to the society being elected, viz., Messrs. G. R. Rushworth, G. White, L. Briggs, C. Cowgill, W. Stables, W. Laycock, R. Wilkinson, J. Rhodes, and C. E. Walker; Mr. J. Farrar was elected treasurer for the sixth time in succession by a unanimous vote. Mr. W. Cruise re-elected assist. secretary; Mr. A. Wilkinson, auditor, along with Mr. S. Midgley; Mr. H. Hill was re-elected secretary. The members are fully determined to make this a record year, and no doubt things will be lively during the next twelve months. New member elected. Any fancier desirous of joining will receive a very hearty welcome. Subs. only 3s. per year, and valuable prizes are given in competition at members' shows.—H. Hill, Sec.

NORTH LONDON C.B.A.

A Successful Annual Dinner.

Annual dinner held 13th January, at the White Hart Hotel, High Street, Stoke Newington, Mr. Trower in chair, and Mr. Robson in the vice-chair. Among others present were: Mr. and Mrs. W. Salter, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Marley, Mr. and Mrs. G. Mortlock, Mr. and Mrs. P. G. Mortlock, Mr. and Mrs. Parks, Mr. and Mrs. Penton, Mr. and Mrs. Burchell, Mr. and Mrs. Rolfe, Mr. and Mrs. Harper, Mr. and Mrs. Bishop, Mr. and Miss Jeffries, Mr. and Mrs. Thurling, Mr. H. Neighbour, Messrs. G. J. Joyce, A. C. Cameron, H. R. Mortlock, A. Hammond, F. J. Castell, A. Biswell, H. Bishop, J. Tyson, W. A. Shepherd, G. Pace, W. Simmonds, T. Cawthorne, J. Robson, W. A. Breeze, J. H. Cook, H. London, W. Lacey, J. Pears, A. Trevallion, G. T. Green, W. Ayling, E. Albrecht, A. Caudle, and W. Robertson. The evening proved one of the most successful ever held by the Society, all enjoying the excellent repast. The Chairman, in proposing the toast of the North London C.B.A., said that the past year had been a prosperous one in all respects, 16 new members having been enrolled, and the balance-sheet showing a profit of over £10. He also remarked on the successful annual show. Mr. G. Mortlock, who responded, thanked the Chairman for the toast, and said the Society was making progress by leaps and bounds, but he was sorry to say the worthy secretary, Mr. R. P. Harper, had made up his mind to resign at the end of the year, but he hoped the society would go as strong as hitherto. During the interval the Association's cups and trophies were presented, and the Chairman said he had much pleasure in stating that his wife would present a gold medal to the Society, to be competed for by ladies. The toast of "The Ladies and Visitors" was proposed by Mr. A. J. Marley, to which Mr. J. Tyson (of the L.C.B.A.) ably responded. Later, Mr. Robson proposed the toast of "The Officers of the Association," remarking that in his opinion no society had a better body of workers. He coupled with the toast the name of Mr. R. P. Harper, the secretary, who responded, and asked the members to give all support possible to the New Year's secretary, and finished by thanking the company for the kind way they had received the toast. The musical part of the programme, under the direction of Mr. H. R. Mortlock, proved a huge success, the following artistes contributing: Mr. T. Copeland (the Scottish bass-baritone), Mr. W. Edwards (humorist), Mr. P. G. Mortlock (baritone), Mr. W. O'Hare (humorist), Mr. Egbert Haydon (tenor), Mr. H. R. Mortlock (humorist), Mr. H. Purnell (bass) and Mr. S. Robson (humorous songs at the piano). The toast of the Chairman and a vote of thanks to the musical director and artistes, concluded an evening thoroughly enjoyed by all.—Geo. Mortlock, Chairman.

EAST HAM C.B.S.

First annual meeting held January 11th at headquarters; a goodly gathering. Hearty thanks were given the retiring officers. New ones were elected. The balance on the previous year carried forward, £3 19s. 8d. Judges were elected. For fixtures see manual New members; Messrs. Potter, Cooper, Bennett, Farmer, Lawrence, Cole, Priestman, Hammerton and Perry.—Fredk. Fox, Hon. Sec.

NOTTINGHAM AND DISTRICT (Permanent) O.S.

Meeting held Grapes Inn, Platt Street, January 13th. Election of officers for 1912: Mr. T. H. V. Hayter (our worthy President) was re-elected; also Vice-President, Mr. J. Wood; Mr. J. Bunn re-elected Secretary; Mr. R. Holmes, Treasurer; Committee: Messrs. G. Hill, J. Bowers, W. Towle, A. Stevinson, J. Eostock, J. Alsebrook, and J. Graham. A long discussion took place re altering our radius to 10 miles of Nottingham Market Place, the old radius being too far out. It was decided to make the radius 10 miles. We enrolled 3 new members. The Society is in a good position to start another year with a balance well on the right side. Mr. J. Driver was alleged to have borrowed birds to show at the Members' Xmas Show to win the premier special for the year ending 1911. The case was considered proved, and it was unanimously carried that he pay the penalty, that was, be expelled from the society. —J. Bunn, Sec.

TAUNTON F.S.

Committee met Jan. 22nd, for the purpose of going through the accounts for the year 1911, including the accounts relating to their show. The accounts when thoroughly gone into and compared with the balance sheets of several other societies which were before them for the purpose of comparison and information, disclosed the fact that the amounts were very similar, but it was apparent that the deficit of £22 0s. 6d. was mainly attributable to the fact that the donations were much below both in number and amount those given in respect of previous shows. The committee, feeling that the show was, both in respect of quality and quantity, one of the best ever held in Taunton, have decided to make an appeal to their patrons for support to enable them to reduce the amount of the loss which would fall on the committee, several of the members of whom are working men fanciers who can ill afford their respective shares of the liability, and are anxious to have a clean balance sheet to present at their annual meeting next month. We are therefore asked to mention that the hon. treasurer, Mr. G. C. Newcombe, The Glen, Fairwater, Taunton, will be pleased to receive any donations from fanciers who feel that they would like to give the Fancy a little support.

ARDWICK AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Annual general meeting held Onward Hall. Mr. W. Robinson presided over a good muster of members. We were unable to deal with all the notices of motion, several having to be referred to the Management Committee to deal with and submit to next meeting. Secretary gave his annual report, shewing a slight increase in membership, a good attendance at meetings, and a great improvement in the shows. Financial statement presented. The balance in hand was shown as £6 9s. 1d., with other assets to the value of £2 15s. 9d. Report of balance sheet adopted. Election of office bearers: President, Dr. Twigg; Vice-Presidents, Rev. C. E. Gane, Rev J. W. Wragg, Dr. Kindon, and Messrs. J. H. Aspinall, W. Downing, H. Boothman, R. Booth, J. Vint, and A. E. Long; Chairman, Mr. W. Robinson; Committee, Messrs. G. Belton, J. Annison, D. Buckley, W. H. Appleton, T. Hunt, Whitelegg, T. Thomas; Auditors, Messrs. D. Buckley, E. H. Fulcher; Treasurer, Mr. T. Hunt; Secretary, J. Spencer. Arrangements for table shows will be dealt with at next meeting, also date of F.F. show. Report from delegates of the Amalgamated show taken; the suggestions from this society were discussed and thought very satisfactory, and they had been adopted. All arrangements have been made, and it only rests with the members now to try and make this important fixture a success.—J. Spencer, Hon. Sec.

BANKFOOT AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

The Annual Supper and Presentation of Prizes.

A good number of the members along with their wives and friends, turned up at the annual supper and presentation of prizes on Jan. 16th. An excellent supper was provided by Mr. H. B. Wood, who also arranged for several artistes. After the supper the room was arranged for the concert, and the various prizes won were exhibited. Later the prizes were presented by Mrs. H. B. Wood. Names and prizes of the first six as follows: 1, C. Bastow, gold medal; 2, B. Wilman, china service; 3, J. Crowther; 4, F. Gelder, biscuit barrel; 5, Taylor Bros., bound volume of "Distemper"; 6, G. Hudson, pipe and case. Some really splendid singing was heard. Messrs. G. Heywood, H. B. Wood, Butler and Atkinson contributing. I am sure the audience were delighted with each. Winners of our commended competition; this has proved rather a novel feature, and at the same time has provided a field for competition amongst those who were less fortunate in the cash prizes. At the same time the winners have not done badly in the open competition, in which they count just three times as many points: 1, J. Lawson, case of carvers; 2, W. North, shaving set in case; 3, W. Thwaites, set of ornaments. After the prizes were distributed the secretary proposed a vote of thanks to Mrs. Wood, and at the same time alluded to the splendid support given by this lady's husband, who has already opened the year with a substantial promise; this was seconded by Mr. J. Lawson, and carried with acclamation. Secretary also proposed a vote of thanks to the artistes, Mr. Wood replying on their behalf. Through an oversight I previously stated that Messrs. Taylor Bros. were (at a committee meeting held Jan. 4th) expelled from the society for ignoring rules and regulations; it is therefore only right for me to apologise until the matter has been brought before our annual general meeting, although this in no way affects the decision already arrived at by the committee. I may say that up to the present I have not received an official resignation signed by the two brothers authorising me to remove their names from the books of the society, and in which they still remain as members. Business at our next meeting will include arrangements for open show, Feb. 17th. It is therefore to be hoped all members will attend and support this fixture. The show is to be open to all within five miles of Bradford Town Hall, and will be a new departure in the way of open shows. All entries will be taken night before show, or up to judging time, 2.30 p.m. Feb. 17th; entry fee 6d.; prize money on sliding scale. A good number of specials have already been given, and a popular judge selected. The show is to be advertised nearer the time, and everything done to make it a huge success. The society's whist drive is held to-day (Saturday) at Brayshaw's Assembly Rooms.—F. Gelder, Sec.

SOUTH LONDON COL AND F.A.

Annual general meeting held January 11th, headquarters, Mr. G. A. Jeffreys in chair. Chairman read a letter from Mr. W. Caunter resigning the secretaryship, which was accepted with regret, and the best thanks of the society were tendered him for his services. The Chairman said it was impossible to go on without a secretary, and Mr. Geo. F. Crawford was elected to fill the vacancy. The balance-sheet for 1911 was read and passed round. It shows a balance of £1 18s. 9d., and the secretary received many congratulations on a most successful year. Officers for 1912 as follows: President, G. A. Jeffreys; Vice-President as before; Chairman, G. Munday; Vice-Chair, J. W. Jeffries; Auditors, Messrs. Denny and F. Burton. Committee: Messrs. Horton, Harris, Biss, Thomas, Putner, G. Burton. Slight alteration was made in the rules, and the definition of a novice was revised to the satisfaction of all. Members are requested to note change of secretaryship.—Geo. Crawford, Hon. Sec.

SHEFFIELD O.S.

The New Year opened on January 2nd with a meeting at "Rose and Crown" Hotel, Waingate, Chairman, Mr. J. Down, presiding. A general discussion was opened in connection with items arising out of minutes, after which we fixed up all show dates and judges for 1912 as follows: Nest feather, July 6th, judge Mr. J. C. Barnes; All-England, November 1st and 2nd, in the Cutler's Hall, judges, Messrs. W. Mundell (Bradford), W. Vardy (Hucknall Huthwaite), and C. Houlton (St. Helens); annual members' Dec. 7th, Foresters' Hall, Mr. J. Robson judge. It was again decided to pay fixed prize money at all members' shows, viz., 4s., 2s., 1s., for a 6d. entry fee. In addition a grand lot of specials are already promised. Also decided to hold on Feb. 6th a table show of champion pairs Class 1 and novice pairs Class 2 A.V. Canary, prizes 5s., 2s. 6d., 1s. 6d. No entry fee. Our genial secretary, Tom Bishop, was appointed judge. Several new members were enrolled.—J. A. T. Woodall, Press Correspondent.

PRESTON O.S.

Annual supper and concert, held White Horse, Jan. 11. Those who came enjoyed themselves, and those who stayed away missed a treat. After a good supper, a most enjoyable concert was given by Mr. Marsh, one of our members, and three of his friends, Mr. Peak, another member, officiating at the piano. During the interval Chairman Dent paid a tribute to the working department of the society, after which he handed over the cups to the successful exhibitors, viz.: The P.O.S. challenge cup, competed for at the three societies shows, Mr. H. F. Marsh (after running up for three years previously). The novice cup, for similar competition, Mr. T. Barton, and the Chas. Blackhurst cup, for four nominated birds at open show, Leeming Bros. The winners had, of course, to pay the penalty of greatness by making a speech, which they did more or less willingly. A vote of thanks was given the artistes, and to Mr. Marsh for the trouble he had taken in organising the concert, which have proved such a great success. Pianoforo solos were rendered by Mr. H. Peak, and songs, etc., by Messrs. Hind, A. Turner, H. Simpson, Marsh, and J. Yates; recitals by musical glasses by Mr. W. Hind, and a violin solo by Mr. A. Turner.—J. P. Leeming, Hon. Sec.

TORBAY O.S.

Fifth annual meeting held January 15th, Railway Temperance Hotel, Paignton. Mr. A. N. James, R.N., presided. Balance-sheet accepted as read, showing an increased balance on the right side. The membership radius was reduced from 20 to 10 miles, as all members reside inside the latter radius. The programme for 1912 includes a ramble, pair show March 6th, a first feather show July 16th, and the annual open show, October 30th. Mr. Innes was again asked to fill the office of chairman, but he said he considered he had held the office long enough, but after much persuading he consented to hold the dual office of Chairman and Treasurer. He was accorded a vote of thanks, as was also the Secretary (Mr. J. N. Jeffery) for having carried out the most successful open show ever held by the Society, and like the Chairman, he also submitted to persuasion and consented to fill the office of secretary for another year. Mr. H. Whitley was re-elected President. Mr. S. O. Manlove, Vice-President. Mr. W. Drew, Hon. Auditor. Mr. J. B. Eastley, Hon. Solicitor. Mr. T. W. Puddicombe, Hon. Auctioneer. Mr. Jack Jeffrey, Assist. Hon. Secretary. Mr. H. Daw, Vice-Chairman. Committee: Messrs. J. Webber, F. Badcott, P. W. Mugford, H. Fletcher, A. Nicks, J. Bastard, F. Lamble, G. Mudge, G. Heathman, W. Hodge, G. Hyne, and W. Jeffery.

CITY AND SUBURBAN A.C.B.

Annual general meeting held Jan. 22nd, Marylebone Institute, when there were over 40 members present. Mr. W. A. Shepherd was voted to the chair. Votes of thanks were accorded the retiring officers on the motion of Mr. Martin, who, on behalf of the members, specially thanked Mr. A. W. Curtis for taking on the work of hon. secretary at very short notice, and so ably carrying out the duties during the past year. Mr. Curtis thanked the members for their kindly expressions, and mentioned that though he was retiring for a time from the Fancy, he should still remain a member of the Association. The balance sheet for 1911 was then taken as read and passed, there being a balance of £7 19s. 7d. to carry forward. This shows a decrease compared with the year before, but Mr. Prior (one of the auditors) pointed out that there was a sum of nearly £10 due from members for tickets, etc., which, when paid, would place the Association in as sound a financial position as previously. The hon. sec. read out the new rules drawn up for the Commemoration Fund by Messrs. Prior and Wynn, and on the proposition of Mr. F. Knight it was unanimously agreed that the fund be known for the future as the Wynn Commemoration Fund. The result of the Crest judging competition at previous meeting was announced, and medals were presented to the winners in the various sections—Mr. Lazarus (champion), Mr. W. Knight (amateur), and Mr. Bryant (novice). It was agreed that for the future points in judging competitions count first, second, and third, instead of medals for champion, amateur, and novice. Officials for 1912: —Chairman, Mr. W. A. Shepherd; vice-chairman, Mr. F. Knight; Council, Messrs. W. Page, Prance, Davis, Weston, Sanders, E. C. Offord, A. W. Hart, Pooley, Francis, Tebbs, Martin, and Harper; auditors, Messrs. C. Prior and A. W. Curtis; hon. sec., Mr. H. Dickinsou; asslst. hon. sec., Mr. F. Thynne. Chairman announced that Mrs. L. M Thynne had kindly presented a silver cup for competition in champion Norwich section; Mrs. Weston a silver cup for British bird, Mule, Hybrid, and Foreign sections; and Mr. T. L. Jayes a silver cup for Border sections. A hearty vote of thanks was passed to the donors. After nominations had been received for judges for young bird and annual shows, and pair show (1913), a very interesting meeting was brought to a close with a vote of thanks to the chairman.—F. Thynne, Asst. Hon. Sec.

The secretary (Mr. John Tyson) and his fellow-officials are to be congratulated on this result, for, while this balance includes £1 5s. overdue subscriptions, it has been achieved in face of a debit balance of £4 5s. 7d. brought into the accounts from 1910.

A Change of Judge.

We are extremely sorry to hear of the continued illness of Mr. Allen Silver, whom we wish an early restoration to health. His indisposition prevents him fulfilling his engagement to judge certain of the British bird classes at the Palace Show. The task of adjudicating upon these has been given to Mr. H. J. Fulljames.

Mr. Lowne's Regrettable Misfortune

It is with regret we learn that Mr. W. Lowne, the highly respected naturalist, of Yarmouth, will be unable to attend the Palace Show this year, owing to being incapacitated as the result of a paralytic seizure. The secretaries of the C.B.U. and N.B.B. and M.C. are asked to note this.

NEXT WEEK.

MAGNIFICENT PALACE SHOW NUMBER.

EXHAUSTIVE REPORT BY EXPERTS. A CHARMING COLORED PLATE

OUR next issue will be a Crystal Palace Show Special Number, containing a splendid descriptive account of this great event, with a full critique by a staff of well-known specialists, a particularly fine budget of articles dealing with practically every aspect of our hobby, and one of the most artistic and charming coloured plates we have ever published. Readers, do not risk disappointment: Order your copy of next week's "CAGE BIRDS" at once.

Advertisers will need no reminding of the special advantages attaching to advertising in this issue, with its remarkable circulation. We would impress upon them however, the necessity of sending their announcements to reach us not later than first post Tuesday next, February 6th, and earlier if possible. Advertisements may be handed in at "CAGE BIRDS" Stall, which will be situated at the entrance to the Showroom. Be in time, Advertisers!

Further interesting items will be added to the agenda for the annual meeting on Saturday next, at the Crystal Palace, writes Mr. J. Tyson, hon. sec. and treas. of the Crested Canary Club. A notice of motion is to hand "that points scored by partnerships or firms shall only have half the value of those won by single competitors."

Most reluctantly I have been obliged, through business ties, to resign the post of secretary to the Queen's Park and Dis. Society, and Mr. W. J. Lethbridge, 25, Faraday Road, North Kensington, W., has been elected to the post, writes Mr. J. C. Birch, and he will be pleased to supply intending members with any information concerning the society. From the balance sheet enclosed it will be seen the society is in a fair financial state, having £5 18s. 7d. cash balance, and assets to the value of £7 12s. The three shows during the year account for a loss of upwards of £5, the weather spoiling the annual show.

OBITUARY.

It is with the deepest regret, writes Mr. W. Elliott, sec. of the West Stanley C.B.S., that I have to announce the very sudden death of the wife of one of our members, Mr. T. Burdon, which took place on Jan. 20. On that day Mr. Burdon was one of the stewards for our annual show. All our members extend their deepest sympathy towards him and family in their recent sad bereavement. She was always a jolly woman, and her presence will be greatly missed.

In addition to the railway excursions available for the Crystal Palace Show, referred to in our last issue, we hear that the London and North-Western Railway Company is running half-day excursion trains to London from Birmingham, Coventry, Wolverhampton, Dudley, Smethwick, Warwick, Leamington, Kenilworth, etc., on Feb. 3.

I must express my thanks to you for reproducing my clear buff unflighted Yorkshire in your marvellous Birthday Number. It has been remarkably successful, winning first prizes at the Bradford National, Scottish National, and L.C.B.A. shows, besides several others. Your Birthday Number was a wonderful production, and well worth the extra charge. It reflects great credit on the staff.—H. H. Towers (Crosshills).

Portraits of Winners

Exhibitors who wish to have their birds (winners or otherwise) at the Palace show sketched by one of our artists (Mr. Norman or Mr. Goodchild) should notify the attendant at CAGE BIRDS' stall, who will give terms and all particulars; or write us direct to our offices.

The London C.B.A. are holding their pair show at Headquarters on Feb. 10, writes Mr. W. H. Mugford, the hon. sec. Will members kindly make a note of this? Schedules, etc., will be sent out shortly. I would be obliged if members would return the unsold tickets issued for the annual show.

The Y.U. Great Gathering.

The Yorkshire prize distribution will be held on Saturday, March 9, at the Market Tavern, Bradford, writes Mr. H. Hill, the sec. All fanciers should make a note of this; further particulars will be published in due course.

Kingfisher at Blackheath.

I have had a beautiful little visitor in my garden during the last ten days, writes Mr. R. Winch in "Country Life." I have a little fountain in the garden, and in it some goldfish, and a beautiful little Kingfisher has paid me several visits. He has taken a good many little fish, but I consider it a rare bird to visit me when I am only six and a half miles from London Bridge.

Changes of Address

Secretaries and others are asked kindly to note the following changes of address:—Mr. B. Tindale (hon. sec., Northern Yorkshire C.C.), from Affleck Street, Gateshead, to 141, Stanton Street, Newcastle-on-Tyne; Mr. W. Grewar from North Street, Forfar, to 7, Park View, Lochgelly; Mr. J. E. Hudson (sec. of the Laisterdyke B.F.A.) from New Hey Road to 95, Brompton Road, Bowling, Bradford.

The L.C.B.A. Dinner.

As the attendance at the London C.B.A. dinner will far exceed our first expectations, write Messrs. Tyson and Trower (169, Sloane Street, W.), it is particularly requested that those intending to be present will endeavour to arrive sharp to time. The dinner will start punctually at 7 p.m., owing to our having an extended menu and an extra good array of talent. Hitherto patrons have not had the full benefit of the entertainment provided, and every effort will be made to utilise the time so that the whole programme may be completed. It will be an additional favour if all who intend coming will at once send a notification to that effect, also giving us an idea of the extent of their respective parties, as there is a possibility (owing to the unprecedented demand for tickets) that seats may have to be balloted for. Kindly advise us of your intention early; also kindly arrive early on Feb. 5.

Feathered Alarm Clocks.

An Entertaining Account of a Scotsman's Birdy Friends.

By D. McARTHUR (Edinburgh).

AN account of the inmates of my little bird-room may interest readers who, like myself, keep a few birds as pets only, and not for sale or show. I often think that in achieving the show standard one loses sight of much of the bird's natural habits, and the companionship of one's pets more than makes up for the loss of possible prize money.

"Sandy" and His Bath.

"Sandy," my two-year-old Starling, came through his second house-moult splendidly, and is now a finely-spangled bird, with a grand purple sheen on his head and neck that shows how fit he is. I give his daily bath credit for this, and to see him take this in a big basin held at arm's length (to escape a drenching) is worth a visit. How he does love it! He would bathe in my tea-cup if I allowed him, and yesterday (despite the fact that he wasn't dry from his proper bath) he sneaked a second one while my wife was washing herself. His song has improved a lot, and he talks all day long now. Starting as soon as a streak of light peeps through the blinds, he keeps it up until about four o'clock, to begin again whenever the supper is frying; and it is only when the gas is turned out that he condescends to be quiet. He is as tame as a bird could possibly be, and is an easy first in our affection, and his price can't be named. To hear him whistle "Up in the Morning's No For Me," or say (with an exact imitation of my angriest tones) "Go into your cage at once," is delightful.

He makes a good tutor for two young Softbills I have—a Thrush (or Mavis, as we Scotch folk call them) and another Starling. The Thrush was partly tame when I got him, so didn't give me much trouble; only his tail had suffered badly through cramped quarters. But I am glad to say he shows a big improvement already, in his new quarters, and with the help of a frequent bath. He is most impatient in this respect, and if I delay at all in giving him it, he will take a "head and shoulders" splash in his water-tin to be going on with, as it were. Though he hasn't the confiding ways of the Starling he will feed eagerly from my hand; and he likes a big raisin immensely. As he has a good speckled breast, white legs, and white under-parts, and is trying over his notes already, he looks decidedly promising for the spring.

Looks Like Beating His Tutor.

The young Starling looks like beating his tutor even. A wild bird when I got him, he has taken wonderfully to me, and comes out of his cage, feeds from my hand, has a forage round, and goes back at his leisure. He gets his bath outside, of course, and only recently I succeeded in getting both of them to bathe in the one basin, a rather unusual sight, I think. It is most encouraging to see the two of them roaming about my room, and "Not even an angry word!" The youngster chirps away and gurgles in his throat, so should make a good talker in time. He is not a vegetarian, as we found to our cost, as he coolly ate up a lump of cold tongue in our absence. As he sung lustily after it, as if giving thanks, we couldn't be angry.

By the way, has anyone noticed if Starlings, as a rule, have two or three white feathers in their backs? Both of mine have, but they only show after a bath, or if the feathers are ruffled.

Up in the Morning Early!

I feed these three softbills on a stock food of equal parts barley meal, game meal, and broken biscuits, with a half part of ants' eggs and dried flies. It is cheap and keeps well; and they all like it and thrive on it. They get a bit of potato now and then and three or four mealworms each day. These they go so mad over, that I am trying to breed my own. I find that unless your softbills are tame enough to come out of their cages you never make a good job when cleaning their cages. Still, the cheery song and amusing companionship they give you, more than repay you for any trouble. In our case we have dispensed with the alarm clock, as they waken us up (a little too early, in fact) regularly every morning.

I lost my Robin lately rather unluckily. He was too fond of his bath, and felt so frisky and wet one day after it, that he slipped out of his cage and even through the wire-netting on my window (and it's a small mesh too) and away for good. He was a cheery wee chap, and we miss his pretty song, but console ourselves in the hope that he may be happier outside.

For want of room I had to dispose of my Jay, just as he was getting over his first house-moult. Sad to say, the cold air in the seaside town to which he went was too great a change for him, and he only lived a few days there. A good bird in a mild way with a voice that was heard if his meat were late a-coming.

My pair of Ring Doves also found a new home. They had five nests last season, and were most devoted parents indeed. It was funny to watch a young one chasing them round, with his neck strained and his beak wide open, flapping his wings at them; until the old birds had to give it "A good hard peck." They were my first bird pets, and were most affectionate and tame with me. Even our little kitten used to play in their cage until they chased it out. But, alas, he grew up and chased them, so that a new home was found for him also; but we see him now and then. In fact, he came back of his own accord a week ago, and sneaked a dinner before getting carried home again. Bless his little self!

Enjoys Taking a Header.

I have also had through my hands this past season a Blackbird, a Goldfinch, two hand-reared Linnets, and a pair of Goldfinch-Canary Mules; all of which are giving some of my friends pleasure now.

I once more have a Robin; in good trim, too, the result again of plenty of baths. With his olive-green back, white underparts, and red breast, he looks like a miniature Cardinal sometimes. He is cheeky, of course, and his big eyes look expectantly for a worm every time I go near him. He bathed in his tin the day I got him, and now "revels" in a big-sized Thrush bath, going right over the head in it, and if I am late a-bringing it, he chirps most loudly and goes into his tin, at least his head does! He is coming on nicely in song, and should make a good bird.

A Chaffinch that I picked up as a nestling in the woods has well repaid me, turning out a big bright coloured bird, with plenty of white and quite right for showing. I have two good Linnets also, both steady, and fine singers, though they fight a bit, and there's "wigs on the green" now and then.

An Excellent Pupil.

My remaining Starling is proving a good pupil, and consoles me for the loss of the old one. He feeds from my hand, and is not averse to stealing a maggot if he can sneak across to the tin. He is coming on in his whistling, too, but I doubt if he does speak, whether he will come up to the old one, who had a wonderful repertoire. His bath in our kitchen basin causes domestic grumblings, it's such a deluge. He can scarcely fly to a chair after it, but a vigorous flapping and preening soon sends him back to his cage with a tight coat shining like shot silk.

Plenty of baths, a varied diet, absolute cleanliness and good green food are my fads, and my birds look well on it. I never grudge a long walk to get grasses or hardheads, etc. It does both me and my birds good. I always have a big stock of hardheads to do me right through the winter, and I vary them by sowing a little rape in a pot, which is greedily devoured.

I encourage my birds to come out of their cages as often as possible (I get their cages thoroughly cleaned then, for one thing): they get very tame that way, and never get too fat; and to see three or four different birds hopping about contentedly, or sitting on my hand, would prove a striking object lesson to those faddists who think it cruel to keep a bird in a cage. My birds are kept in a big, low window, safe from mice and cats and curious folk, and they get plenty of light and air, and are a source of endless delight and interest to my wife, myself, not forgetting my little girl, who looks like being a keen naturalist.

WHERE BIRDS ARE SOLD BY BARTER.

An Interesting Custom Observed in Cape Town.

A bird-lover who has lately returned from South Africa sends us the appended account of some scenes he witnessed in the market at Cape Town.

THE sales held on the market-square in Cape Town every Saturday are famous all over South Africa. There is an auctioneer to about every thirty feet of space, and the variety of goods sold is almost bewildering. A sale of birds is held here every week-end, which is always well patronised. Travellers homeward bound by the mail steamers purchase birds to take as presents; the stewards of the vessels buy birds to re-sell, if possible, to passengers, or failing this to be disposed of on arrival in Southampton.

It is an unwritten law of the market-square that no withdrawal prices are set. The highest bid must be accepted. The cages are packed one on the other, forming a sort of rampart round the auctioneer. In front of each cage is a number, and the lots are sold by these numbers. "No. 86 comes next," says the auctioneer; "hold it up, Jim," and the Kaffir boy lifts up the cage. As each sale is closed the boy passes the cage to the purchaser over the heads of the lookers-on, and receives the money for it in the same way. The sale lasts about three hours, and after it is over those who wish to barter have their turn.

This system of bartering for unsold property is peculiar to South Africa. A man brings up a parcel of books and the auctioneer glances over them. They are English books, and the auctioneer is a Malay. It is doubtful if he can read English, and the value of the volumes must be an unknown quantity; but he is always willing to do business. He accepts the books, and a shilling, for a Canary and cage. The cage is worth only a few pence. It is one of the reed affairs made by the Kaffirs. The Canary is worth, at the rate in vogue, several shillings.

It looks a bad bargain for the Malay until one remembers that books are almost worth their weight in gold up country; and the explanation probably is that the purchaser has some connection up country he can send the books to. Another man exchanges an umbrella, a most useless article in South Africa, for a bird and cage. He also pays a shilling bonus.

Wild-Bird Life.

The Influence of the Weather.

During the week we have had one or two exceptionally sharp mornings, and one has looked to see some change in the behaviour of wild birds as fortelling a decided change in the weather to more severe and wintry conditions. That birds do at times make movements to more genial and protected areas before a severe storm or approaching frost, has been proved over and over again. The writer has noted many such instances. A few years ago we had very mild open weather until Christmas, when at the time of the year severe conditions prevailed right away through January and February. For several days previous to the change huge flocks of Fieldfares, Thrushes and Redwings forsook the uplands, and sought the more sheltered low-lying meadows near the village. These meadows are surrounded by high, thick hedges which afforded the birds protection during the time of severity, when winds with snow and sleet from the North were of daily occurrence.

Although one can occasionally note these movements of bird life inland it is on the coast and near tidal rivers where these great movements of bird life are particularly noticeable. Before a change, flocks of waders and sea birds will crowd the rivers and estuaries, coming from the North or wherever they congregate. One may cross the marshes one day with very little signs of life beyond the usual, when possibly the next morning it will be found crowded with Plovers, Snipe, Duck, Teal, and many other species; and mingled with these will be the more common birds such as Rooks, Crows, specimens of all the Thrush family, Wagtails, Pipits and Larks.

Of course, the question will occur to one: What is the cause of this migration? If we live in the neighbourhood we look upon it as fortelling severe weather, and in that we are generally correct; but doubtless the real cause is that the birds are driven from their usual haunts by the snow and frost, and fly to more open and somewhat milder quarters.

End of the Northern Show Season.

West Stanley's Most Successful Venture.

West Stanley C.B.S. fourth annual show held Jan. 20th. It was the most successful ever held by the society. The venue this year was in the Town Hall, a room grandly adapted for the purpose, being both large and comfortable, free from all draughts, and supplied with special heating apparatus to keep the hall at a suitable temperature. Entries constituted a record, totalling 297, exactly 60 in excess of last year's, and the quality in every section was of a high standard. The society is favoured in the matter of officials, the genial and well-known Norwich fancier (Mr. W. H. Butler) being in the chair; much of the success of the society is undoubtedly due to his hard work, and the members are to be congratulated upon having such an excellent fancier at the head of affairs. He is well supported by Mr. E. Atkinson (Vice-Chair), and Mr. R. Peart (Treasurer); and they in turn are ably backed up by as grand a body of fanciers as it has yet been our lot to meet, all doing their best to make the show a success. A special word of praise must be given to Messrs. W. Gowland, J. Boyle, J. Hunter, T. Burdon, J. Emmerson, W. Knowles, R. Goodchild, and J. Murray (the stewards); they got through their work in fine style. As a secretary Mr. W. Elliott is really tip-top. He knows what to do and how to do it, and what he does not know about the running of a cage bird show is not worth knowing. His courteous, kindly manner commends itself to everybody, and it is no wonder he is so popular.

Norwich made a fine display, and were quite the feature of the show. This section supplied the cup winner for best young bird (Mr. W. H. Butler), the runner-up being a very typical buff Border shown by Mr. R. Peart. Other principal special prize winners were: Langsdale Challenge Cup for most points with six nominated birds, Mr. W. H. Butler; silver challenge cup for most points in British Mules and Foreign, Mr. W. Elliott; medal for most points in novice section, Mr. W. Knowles; special for second best Yorks., Mr. W. Thompson; Sandiford's medal, Mr. W. H. Butler. As Mr. Butler has won the Langsdale challenge cup three years in succession it now becomes his own property; we heartily congratulate him upon his fine achievement. The show was well patronised, and everything points to its being a financial success. Judges: Messrs. W. Reid (Sunderland) and J. Sheppard (Newcastle), the former taking Canaries and the latter Mules, British, and Foreign.

CHOPPINGTON C.B.S.

Fifth annual show, held in the Club Room, at the Railway Hotel, on Dec. 23rd. Not quite so many birds were shown as in previous years, but the quality was superior. The arrangements were ably carried out by Mr. H. Seely (chairman), Mr. E. B. Atkinson, treasurer, and a hard-working committee, composed of Messrs. Rigg, Thompson, Edwards Bros., Archbold and others. Mr. G. H. Seely makes an ideal secretary. The show was well patronised by visitors. Mr. R. Rowell's awards were well received.

WIDNES.

Widnes Society members' show, held Boxing Day, Conservative Club Assembly Room, Victoria Road, when between 90 and 100 exhibits turned up. The room is excellently lighted, and it would make a suitable one in which to run an open show. Yorks. are not by any means numerous, and there is plenty of scope for members to take them up. A few years ago one could see them in scores; now they have almost died out here. Novice members Nor. leaders were very good, and equal to open competition. Altogether it was a nice holiday show, and gave promise of new life in the society. Mr. R. Barker had a field day. Mr. Stanley Andrews had the show in hand, and all went well. Mr. C. Houlton judged, and his awards met with general approval.

The Canary for the "Sporting" Fancier.

By J. G. TURNBULL (Glasgow.)

THE true fancier, essentially a sportsman, takes particular delight in rearing such birds as offer most scope for the exercise of his skill and patience. The rearing of the Scotch Fancy presents that element of uncertainty which appeals to the sportsman, for the nature of the bird demands skilful treatment to produce young birds of high quality. Unfortunately the difficulties which are encountered are often sufficient to deter young fanciers from attempting to rear these birds. This fact is to be deplored, since it tends toward a great loss of popularity, if not to the partial extinction of the prince of cage birds. Perhaps then, a few hints to young fanciers may be of service, for, while no skill can avert some misfortunes, there are others which can be avoided by the exercise of a few simple precautions.

One question on which fanciers disagree is the question of keeping a few common birds for the purpose of feeding the young Fancies. Some maintain that it is most natural that the parent birds should feed their young. This may seem quite feasible, but I find that it rarely works in practice, and I would advise the beginner to keep a few common birds for feeders. Many of the most successful breeders do this with satisfactory results.

When the Stock is Complete.

I always prefer to have my stock complete as early as possible, and I think the practice is one to be commended. By so doing I am able to prepare the birds for the breeding season by giving them such foods as I consider most suitable for the time of year. The staple food is, of course, best Spanish canary seed, and this is supplemented by other seeds at various periods. Once a week throughout the winter I give them egg-food, and the next morning a little maw seed. On other mornings as a change, or as a titbit, I give them German rape, niger seed, and hemp. None of these seeds should be mixed with the canary seed, but should be given in a separate dish. I stop the niger seed as soon as the breeding season commences, and it should be given sparingly at all times. Good shell sand is, of course, invaluable for keeping the birds in condition, but the cages should also be well supplied with cuttle-fish bone.

Birds which I intend breeding with I run together during the winter months, separating them for a few weeks before the actual commencement of the breeding season. They may usually be paired again about the middle of March; but not even then if the weather is unfavourable.

The east wind is an enemy particularly to be dreaded, and if the birds have been paired before it has gone, the hen is liable to egg-binding. This trouble can be detected by various symptoms. The hen becomes restless, frequently leaving her nest and crouching with disordered feathers in the bottom of the cage. Perhaps one of the best remedies is the following:—Fill a jug with boiling water; cover the jug with a piece of brown paper; make a small hole, say, with a pencil, in the centre of the paper; hold the hen (the region of the vent—lower abdomen) over this hole. This is almost sure to give instant relief and sometimes the hen will lay almost immediately.

The newly-hatched chicks may generally be expected on the fourteenth day. On the night before the young birds are due, the parents should be supplied with egg-food, and this food should be given fresh two or three times a day, if possible. Green-food should be given on the third day. Great care should be exercised with the green-food. Some fanciers are very partial to watercress. I have nothing to say against this food, but if you use it you should know where it comes from, and if possible gather it yourself. Young dandelion leaves can also be obtained at this time, but if the weather is at all frosty these, and the watercress also, should be washed in warm water. Later in the season green-food is more easily obtained, and the white heads of dandelions, perhaps the best of all such foods, can then be gathered.

Troublesome Mothers.

When the young birds are about three weeks old they generally begin to leave the nest and take to the perches. At this time also the hen will probably commence to nest again.—Some hens are very severe on their young birds at this time, almost stripping them of their feathers with which to build their second nest. A good method of preventing this is to tie a number of clippings of string tightly together and fasten them to the wires of the cage at the perch. Should this fail, the only alternative is to have a nursery cage for the youngsters to go in, for, while the hen may do the chicks very little harm by plucking their feathers, one is inclined to believe that it keeps them back (hindering their development) very much.

When the hen lays again, the parents begin to stop feeding the young birds, and when they are about five weeks old it is often necessary to separate them. This is a critical period for the young birds, and many valuable ones may be lost by inflammation of the bowels, brought on by their being unable to digest their food properly. The egg-food should be given much weaker at this time, and a few particles of clean grit be sprinkled over it. The gravel (grit) is a great aid to digestion, and they will pick it up from among the egg-food, whereas they would not do so if it were sprinkled in the bottom of the cage.

If the young birds are attacked with inflammation of the bowels, all seeds and egg-food should be taken from them, and for three days they should be fed entirely on sops. Stale bread with boiling milk poured over it can be given, with a little maw seed sprinkled on it.

The birds which are to be shown should receive the fancier's special attention, and should be put into single cages. Plenty of handling, such as they will receive at the show, will get them accustomed to strangers; and with this view fanciers coming in to the room should be permitted to handle them.

The Story of Three Budgerigars and How I Tamed Them.

By Miss E. A. ALABONE (London, N.W.)

IT is the human voice, without doubt, that is the chief means of winning the confidence of birds and of all living creatures. I will tell you how I tamed three Budgerigars, and of the strange way in which the first one came to me.

Last year I had been ill for many months; and, lying alone in my room, cut off from my favourite studies and pursuits, I often wished for some new interest to come into my life, or for some living thing to pet. One afternoon, as I sat with my windows open to feel the freshness of the spring air, and to view the beauties which even London gardens show in May, a little green bird suddenly flew in, and, alighting on my mantelpiece, stood calmly regarding me! Quickly I had my windows shut; and, oh! joy, it was a foreign bird, and so no exigencies of conscience could demand my giving it its freedom!

My little visitant was a Budgerigar, as I found out after many references to books brought from the Public Library. (I had not then been introduced to CAGE BIRDS, with its Editor who kindly answers the questions of ignorant people.) I named him "Joseph," on account of his many-coloured coat. He was a perfect little creature, a gem of colour, with no feather out of place from the top of his little striped head to the tip of his handsome blue tail. He might have been just made: and where he came from I never knew.

I put him in a cage; he seemed very happy, but timid on approach. I soon began to tame him; and for this, one's patience must be unfailing. Talking quietly to him—caressing him, as it were, with my voice—I put my hand gently into his cage until he became accustomed to the sight of it. Then I began to leave him an hour or two without seed; and very soon he helped himself shyly from my hand. In a day or two I held my hand further away, so that he had to come on it to feed. Then I coaxed him to hop on my finger, until he enjoyed the game of flying from finger to perch.

A little later I thought he would like a companion; and a young bird was given me, still striped on the forehead—a gentle-eyed little plebeian, with large feet and none of the proud bearing of "Joe." I introduced him to Joe, who was decidedly annoyed, and was never quite so gay afterwards, disdaining to perch on my hand with him. The new bird acknowledged my acquaintance with a screech, and a good nip; (Budgies can nip!) but he was greatly delighted with his large cage, and hopped about at once, copying "Joe" in all he did; and by the first evening he ate from my hand. I called him "Jan."

Their First Freedom.

Now I began to give them their freedom in my room, and fixed some long perches, a yard or more, according to the weather, away from the window, and continued the taming, offering seed as before, as it tempted my Budgies more than any green food, and fruit none of them would eat. "Jan" soon became very tame. He would sit on my finger, and let me walk about with him; but, alas! for him and me, he began to ail as soon as I had him. I did all I was able; but I could not really diagnose his disease. Except when feeding—which act he performed with great energy—he sat with a dejected air, and "Joey" moped, too, for company.

In September, fearing "Jan" would not last, I sent for another Budgerigar from a dealer. He arrived with a much broken and dilapidated tail, but he had such a bright and intelligent look that I kept him; and I called him "Jim."

Every day I let my birds have hours of liberty. Great was their excitement till I took them out, one by one, on my finger: and how pretty they looked, all three feeding on my hand together, or on the large china bowl I had planted with a turf for them.

They were great friends, always sitting together, and often preening each other's head and neck feathers. It was most amusing to see "Jimmie" requesting this attention from Jan; these two, in particular, would sit a long time mutually absorbed in the occupation. But I was not to have this pleasure long. One morning, soon after I had fed them, they retreated to their favourite resting place; and just as suddenly as he had come, my pretty "Joe" fluttered to my feet, and died.

For two days "Jim" sat on a [illegible], watching with fixed look the spot where "Joe" fell. I used to take him off with a long rod, and talk to him to rouse him. "Jan" now got weaker and weaker; and "Jim's" devotion to him was touching. He never left his side; and when I thought him too ill to be out of the cage, "Jim" would follow in and sit with him, although he much disliked being caged.

"Jim" Mourns His Friends.

One day "Jan" could no longer fly to his perch, but kept falling to the ground: so I tried to harden my heart, and had his suffering ended.
